C-130 Sustainment Support at Warner Robins Air Logistics Complex

Client: United States Air Force
Air Force Materiel Command
Air Force Sustainment Center
Warner Robins Air Logistics Complex

The Challenge

The U.S. Air Force required stronger visibility and control across C-130 depot maintenance operations. Legacy systems limited real time insight, slowed reporting, and made it difficult to align inventory, scheduling, and performance across stakeholders.

The Solution

Robbins-Gioia delivered proactive sustainment support through the modernization and expansion of PMCCAT.

By transitioning the system to a web-based platform, Robbins-Gioia improved usability, data access, and reporting. Robbins-Gioia provided integrated program management, technical support, and business analysis to ensure accurate and timely decision support.

Approach

Execution first. Technology that enables it.

Robbins-Gioia anticipated risks, resolved system challenges early, and maintained operational continuity while improving infrastructure, data integrity, and reporting efficiency.

The Impact

- ▼ Enabled management of more than 550 active C-130 aircraft platforms and systems
- ▼ Translated complex data into clear and actionable reporting
- ▼ Updated maintenance data for up to 84 aircraft annually
- ▼ Delivered more than 20 performance charts with recurring reporting
- ▼ Reduced costs by over $20K in hardware and support services
- ▼ Strengthened decision making and improved operational efficiency
