

Credit Repair Kit Dispute Log Instructions

Your Credit Repair Kit Dispute Log will help you keep track of your credit, disputing, and results.

To get started, sit down with your credit report and your log. Enter all the information account by account from your report to your log. Enter the Creditor Name, Address, and Account Number.

If your credit monitoring service gives you the Date-of-Last-Activity, put that on your log also. If this date is not on your report, wait until you receive the report from the credit bureaus.

This will come in response to your disputes, and will have the results to your disputes. This bureau report will also have the Date-of-Last-Activity. You can learn more about this in your Elite Credit Repair Kit Guide.

If the item is NEGATIVE, put Yes on your log where it asks. If it is a positive account, put No where it asks for Is item NEGATIVE.

This column makes it easy for you to dispute, as you need to dispute all creditors with Yes in this column. When an account is deleted, you can then change the status from Yes, to No. Again, now you can focus on the Yes column as those are outstanding NEGATIVE items.

You will also want to put the account status in the Account Status column. This status can be deleted, still negative, or verified. Whatever the current status of the account is, based on your last round of disputes, enter this status in this column.

This column will help you with a quick reference of how the item is currently reported. You can quickly see the accounts that have been deleted, or even the accounts that have been verified and are still causing you issues.

The Notes section is for you to enter any special notes in regards to your dispute process, or your progress. This column gives you fast access to details on how the creditors and bureaus and handling your disputes.

The following sections pertain to the Dispute Date and Letter sent. For each round of disputes you will want to enter the date you mailed the dispute. This will help you know when you should expect results back.

You can also track the letter you used. This will help track the REASONS for your disputes, and help you establish your next plan of attack if the item is verified. You can then continue to add the date the letter was mailed and the letter name on your log for all future rounds of disputes.

This log is a simple way you can keep track of your progress and your results. You can even add additional pertinent information to the log as you see fit.

This log is your guide during the process, so get started right away with reviewing your report and entering your credit items on your log so you can get your disputes in the mail today!
