

#63 REJECTED

I finally understand why I'm married to

Someone who makes me so blue,

Who year after year has rejected my Love and help and care;

To get a taste of what God feels with an understanding for me that
Had come too rare.

We're both constantly diss'd, and abused, and misunderstood.

She doesn't see we're always looking out for her good,

Having to implement a new twist daily

To communicate Love to one who sees thru the glass so palely.

She's selfish, short-sighted and shows little fear,

Not realizing that we long to walk with her so near

Where God's heart is reflected without a distorting motion,

Glowing pure Love and compassion and long-suffering, with the notion

That the day will arrive when I will finally see

The real Godly woman He's been guiding her to be,

Wanting to share the Love He's giving her that she's been keeping hidden,

After her heart is finally broken, seeing that in all my efforts - I also Wasn't kiddin'.

We've given our lives as a sacrifice with the hope that one day

We'll hear the confession, face to face, in which she'll say

She's a "TRUE BELIEVER" who's "working out" her walk and longs for

The Friendship

And communion with the one who longs to satisfy her soul and walk

Hip To hip

Down the narrow path, next to and along with me, that leads to a life

That will glorify the Father of the husband, who's finally got the wife

God foreknew before the first time I had ever seen her,

Experiencing the Holy Marriage the Father ordained to occur.

An eternal kinship where us two have become one,

An example of the plan of redemption achieved by God's son.

Our marriage a working model of Jesus' union with the church;

A secure commitment with an unbreakable bond of Love on which it

Does perch.

Rich Kovatch

7-17-09 3:00 a.m.