

Dr. Rashad Richey is an Emmy nominated TV news broadcaster for CBS Atlanta, radio host of the award-winning Rashad Richey Morning Show and national television news anchor for 'Indisputable With Dr. Rashad Richey' on the TYT Network. Dr. Richey is America's youngest inductee into the National Black Radio Hall of Fame, a recipient of a lifetime achievement award from both former United States President Barack Obama and current President Joe Biden. When he's not on-air, Dr. Richey is on-print as President of Rolling Out Magazine, the largest free-print urban publication in the country with a combined social media following of over 600,000 and monthly readership of 2.8 million. Dr. Richey recently interviewed United State Vice-President Kamala Harris during Women's History Month where he posed questions about societal equity and women in leadership. Dr. Richey is also a regular political commentator on MSNBC and CNBC providing insightful analysis of pressing political and social issues.

Believing in the power of community, Dr. Richey provides mentorship programming and scholarships to at-risk youth through The Rashad Richey Foundation, a nonprofit dedicated to social justice. Understanding the great equalizing power of higher education, Dr. Richey serves as a college professor at Morris Brown College in Atlanta, GA and has provided lectures at various universities across America, including the University of Michigan, Clark Atlanta University, Morehouse School of Medicine and Reinhardt University to name a few.