Angela Di Iorio

Group People and Culture and Corporate Affairs and Communications teams at Orora

Angela brings more than 25 years' experience leading organisational transformation and driving the growth of capability at all levels in line with company strategy across a diverse range of public and private organisations. Her experience spans the FMCG, manufacturing, technology and financial services industries. At Orora, Angela leads with a spirit of collaboration and accountability, creating an environment where joy fuels performance and every leader remains conscious of the shadow that shapes their impact.

Orora is a global leader in the design, manufacture and decoration of glass bottles and aluminium cans for the beverage industry, with sustainability and innovation at the heart of our operations.

Angela joined Chief HR so that she could continue to learn from others. "I have a great team of highly talented individuals at Orora who deliver exceptional work. However I equally need to ensure that I am challenging myself through others in the external market. So learning from other CPOs around how they have tackled a strategic or operational challenge is crucial". She holds deep value for suggestions others provide around great external partners, knowing that if someone from this network recommends a provider or partner, she can rely on this as an excellent referral. It has meant being able to source great external support in a short period of time, trusting this network's recommendations. "I also learn best through dialogue, reflection and challenge, and this I get from the Chief HR network as others share their learnings and are very generous in sharing insights and what may have worked (or not) for them. It's not a sales pitch in any form, and this is what differentiates Chief HR from other forums."
