In today's environment, there are limited resources. The State is saying, 'we want to provide an adequate education...' Adequate is the baseline and I think we want something BETTER than that.

surprise squad

When a day starts with a pep rally and marching band and ends with giving away $423,000 across nearly 40 district buildings, you know it's a good day.

Highlights include:

- 156 teacher grants totaling $215,501
- $21,010 towards ELS programs
- $5,000 to advance career-ready programs
- $5,000 for counselor professional development
- $56,850 to support mental health and wellness programs

“There isn't a more special day for the Blue Valley Educational Foundation than Surprise Squad! Four buses—filled with board members and enthusiastic community supporters—roll out across the District to visit Blue Valley schools. We deliver Excellence in Education grants that fund new equipment, literature collections, innovative programs, and unique opportunities for students. It's a day full of joy, gratitude, and inspiration.

Sensory Motor Room Receives Additional Funding $2,970 Stanley Elementary Katie Hammer-Tucker

“We received a grant for this Snoezelen-style sensory room back in 2009, which is still fully operational and functional, but there were equipment enhancements to be made.”

Sphero Indi Coding Robots Impacts 2,500 Students $7,711.40

Cedar Hills, Leawood, Mission Trail, Overland Trail & Prairie Star Elementaries
Amanda Schwabauer, Jody Mason, Erica Hass, & Katie Geist

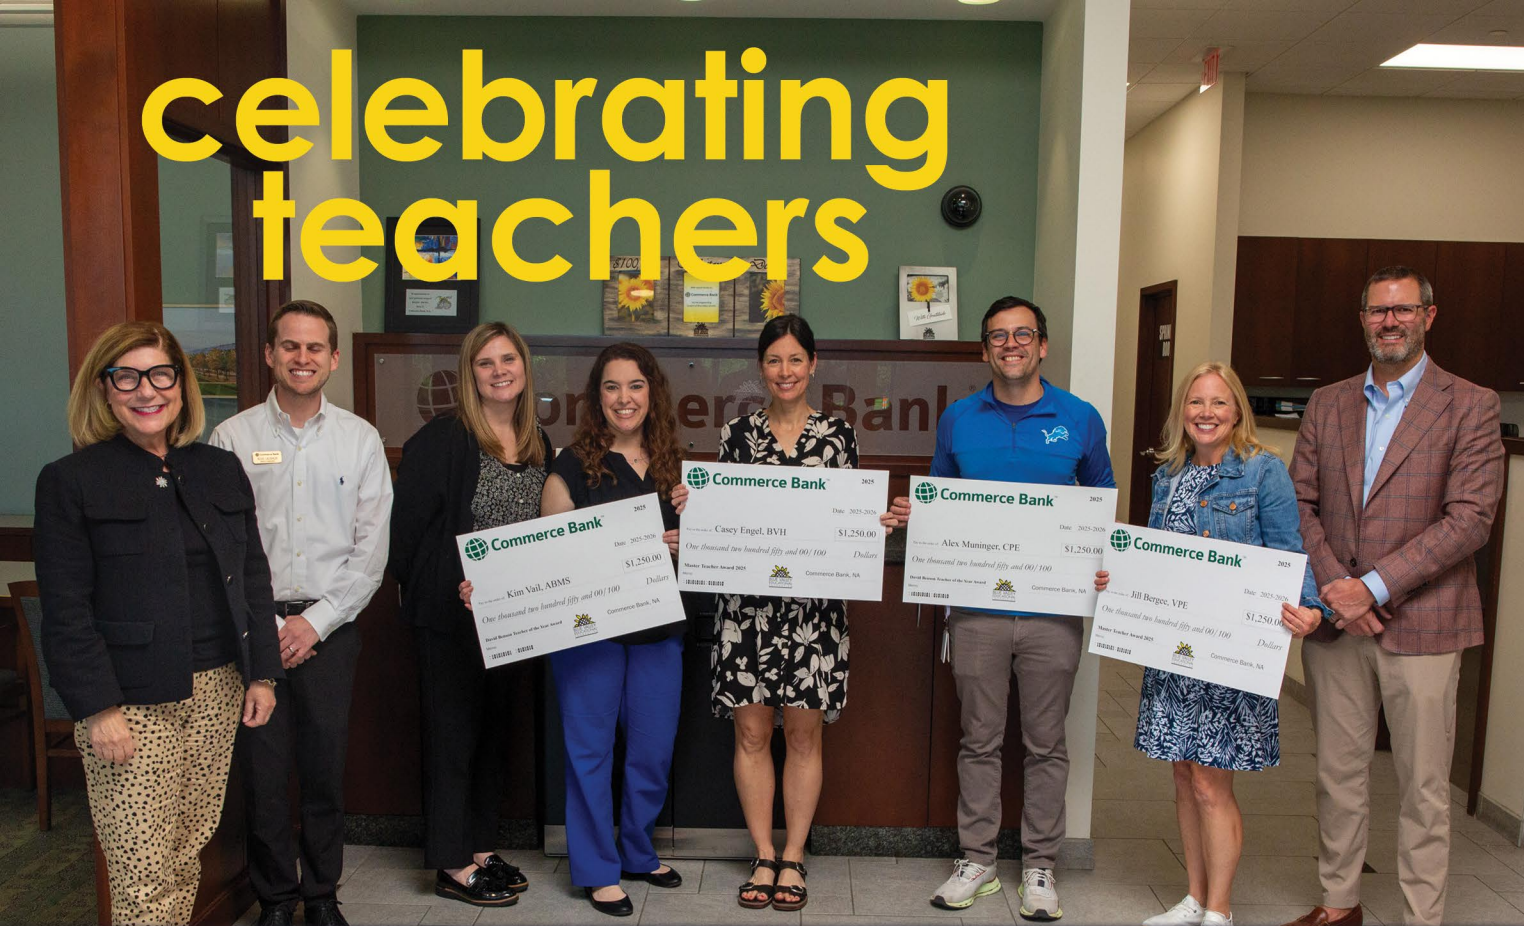

“The Sphero Indi Coding Robots will enhance problem-solving skills by allowing students to practice multiple areas of development at the same time. This includes social-emotional learning and executive functioning as students participate in the engineering process. The critical thinking skills developed with the Sphero Indi will allow students to be able to see problems with a different lens and tackle challenges as they come.”

Putt Through Art History $3,000 Overland Trail Middle School Crosby Jones & Vanessa Fernandaz

“Students will be completing their own research on artists throughout history and movements. Each group will share their findings with their peers through the mini golf course hole they design. By creating a hands-on kinesthetic learning experience students are able to immerse themselves into the work of artists. Research indicates that thinking and movement are connected in the brain. When students move while learning and playing golf, they activate both the sensory and motor areas of the brain, which can help them learn more effectively.”

investing in mental wellness initiatives

BV Well, created in 2018 and powered by the Foundation, has supported and educated Blue Valley parents as they navigate mental health and wellness with their families. This year, BV Well offered seven programs to 500 parent participants, including over 30 parents who became Youth Mental Health First Aid certified. Sessions included:

- The Drug Talk (presented by the Blue Valley Drug and Alcohol Task Force)
- Starting Strong with Conscious Discipline (Elementary and Middle School Editions)
- Thriving Through Change: Guiding Young Adults and Families to Mental Wellness
- Youth Mental Health First Aid for Parents and Caregivers

In 2024-25, Keep the Spark Alive and SPEAK UP invested $56,850 in social and emotional wellness and suicide prevention programs including Sources of Strength.

Sources of Strength, offered in all BV middle and high schools, strives to connect teens with trusted adults and trained peers to break codes of silence with at-risk students.

Keep the Spark Alive also funds #GiveMe20 workshops developed to provide teens with tools and resources to get them through dark moments. The LifeBoxes students make through #GiveMe20 are filled with activities and mementos to remind them that they are loved, and that life is worth living.

It was easy to accomplish and it made me more confident that I can help kids who need an adult on their side.

bvef's investment in special education creates lasting impact

Meeting the equipment and programming needs of Blue Valley's Special Education programs is a major fundraising priority for BVEF. Building capacity and enhancing services for students with special needs through targeted professional development and innovative programming directly aligns with our mission to enrich educational excellence and ignite innovation.

Women's Giving Circle - Fall 2024

A $15,000 grant was awarded to purchase specialized equipment for students with learning and visual challenges. This technology is now used districtwide and is helping educators bring creative solutions to the classroom and their students.

Kiewit Corporation $11,000 Grant Sponsorship

Funded multiple Excellence in Education grants, including the purchase of Sphero Coding Robots and STEAM kits for gifted education classrooms within the Blue Valley Special Education program.

Special Education Para-to-Teacher Scholarships

BVEF funded tuition support for five Special Education paras pursuing teaching certification. In total, BVEF has committed $131,000 to support ten paras in becoming certified special education teachers.

3rd Annual Middle School Job Olympics - Spring 2025

This unique event gave special education students the opportunity to learn, practice, and demonstrate job skills in a supportive, real-world environment before entering high school. It was made possible by a $35,000 philanthropic gift from the Cocherl Family Foundation.

Excellence in Education grants to support Special Education programs across the district.

These grants funded a wide range of needs, including:

- materials for an artistic expression program
- LIFT Classroom supplies
- Hard-to-source food for the BV Food Pantry
- Literature and math manipulatives for secondary SPED students
- Therapeutic learning equipment.

These investments reflect BVEF's deep commitment to supporting inclusive, innovative learning opportunities for all students in Blue Valley.

Throughout my 20 years in Blue Valley, I've received so many grants for my wild and crazy ideas. As educators, we constantly work to make our teaching relevant to a rapidly changing world and as our students change, our practice must change too. BVEF allows educators to step outside the box and truly deliver an education beyond expectations. Their support doesn't just fund projects—it creates a culture of innovation, empowers teachers, and creates opportunities for students that wouldn't otherwise exist. When you receive a BVEF grant, the message is loud and clear: our community believes in you, welcomes your innovation, and is excited to support you as you work to make our world better through the students that you teach.

youngest students with visual impairments benefit from multi-modal learning grant

Congratulations to October 2024 Women's Giving Circle winner Nancy Gieseke. Her grant for "Multi-Modal Literacy and Learning" will support Blue Valley's littlest learners at Hilltop Learning Center with visual impairments and additional disabilities, who often do not have structured literacy and math opportunities and require a multi-modal approach to learning.

Her $15,000 grant, awarded by the generous women at the Fall Women's Giving Circle event, will provide each of the five teachers who work with these children with materials to support learning within their early childhood and/or intensive classroom settings. Because of this grant, these students will be able to listen to stories and engage in activities that activate their senses in efforts to tie learning to real experiences.

spring 2025

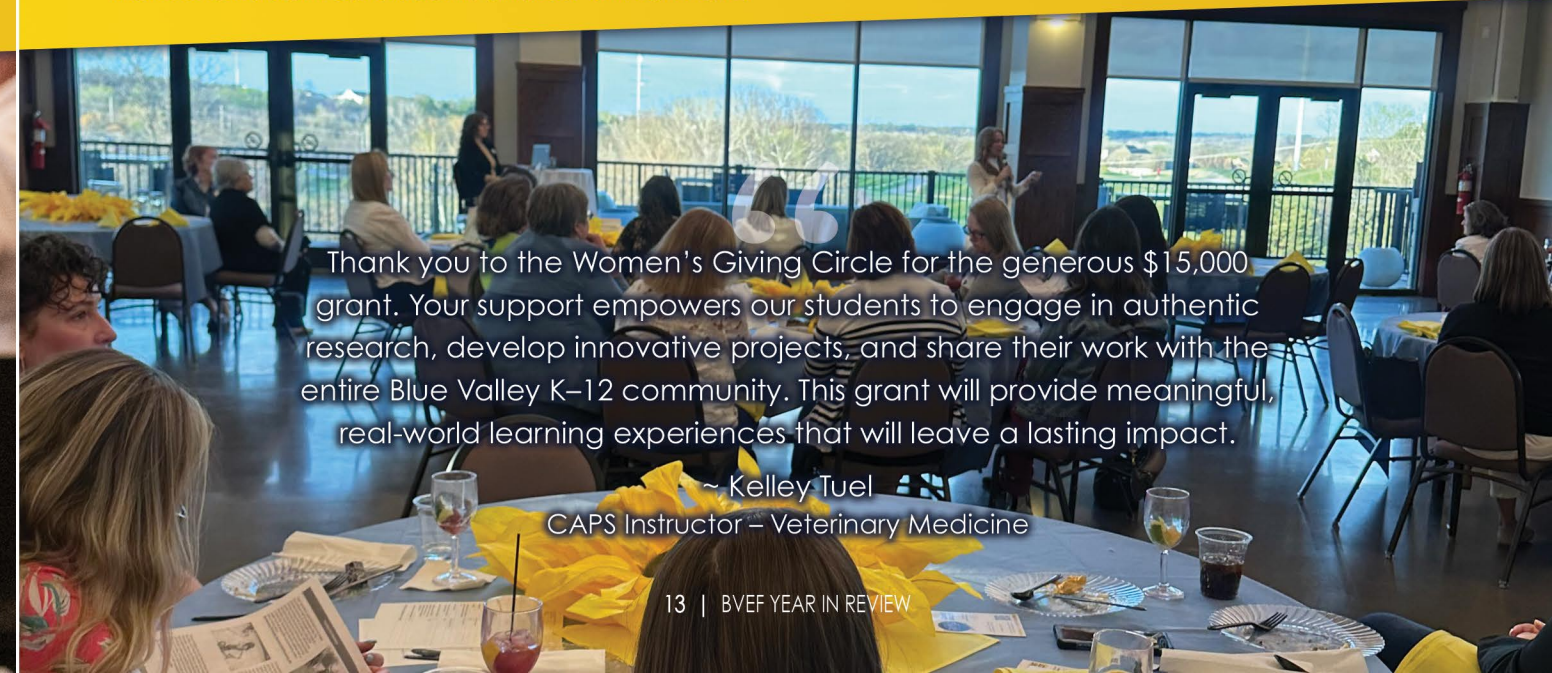

grant supports CAPS students in pollinator conservation and fighting food insecurity

Thanks to a $15,000 grant from the Blue Valley Educational Foundation's Women's Giving Circle, CAPS Bioscience students are partnering with Kansas City Hope Garden (KCHG) to tackle food insecurity and protect pollinators through sustainable agriculture.

Led by CAPS educators Kelley Tuel, Joe Whalen, and Eric Kessler, students are gaining hands-on experience in beekeeping, composting, and food production, all while learning from KCHG's Executive Director, Emma Entwistle through up to 400 hours of mentorship.

This initiative comes at a critical moment, as early 2025 saw record losses in honeybee populations. Students will create and deliver educational presentations to elementary and middle school classrooms across the District, raising awareness and expanding the program to Field Biology and Zoology students at all five high schools.

Thank you to the Women's Giving Circle members for supporting this meaningful, real-world learning experience that benefits both our students and our environment!

Thank you to the Women's Giving Circle for the generous $15,000 grant. Your support empowers our students to engage in authentic research, develop innovative projects, and share their work with the entire Blue Valley K-12 community. This grant will provide meaningful, real-world learning experiences that will leave a lasting impact.

This fun adult evening featured three bands competing for bragging rights as Best of Blue Valley champions. Nearly 400 attendees enjoyed parent emcees, great live music, a silent auction, wine and bourbon pulls, light appetizers, games of chance, and dancing the night away while supporting a great cause. Congratulations to our Battle of the Bands 2024 winning band, Young Medicine, ensuring a $1,000 performing arts grant for Lakewood Elementary School.
