

"FINAL OFFICIAL SCRAMBLE TOMORROW"

by Luke Knisely

To Whom It May Concern:

This is an automated out-of-office reply from the desk of Luke Knisely. Thanks to contributions from a couple of Wednesday Night's finest, I have been enrolled in a night class. Thusly, this will be a lighter version of Scrambled. More like Poached, or Benedict, or Sunny Side Up. What class might these so-called philanthropists arrange in advance, as part of their generous donations? Personally, I was hoping for another shot at Latin. After 4 years in high school and a couple semesters of college Latin, I stand here knowing not much more than I did at the onset of Latin 1 as a freshman. After receiving my syllabus, it sure seems like this class may even be open to elementary-age students. It seems as though my efforts will be rewarded mainly via "stickers" of some sort, and we are to have a 30-minute nap after lunch. At this point in the reading, I am beginning to have a hankering for Chocolate Milk out of a paper carton. Having made two blunders this season, I am proud to announce I got a B+ on our first Quiz. Positive vibes as always are quite welcome! "Understanding and Interpreting a Calendar 101" promises to provide me with the skills necessary to at least confirm dates prior to publication.

On a positive note, this means we get to enjoy one final Wednesday Scramble of 2022. Dubbed "Glory's Last Chance" I know of at least 1 team coming straight out of the woodwork. Call your friends, form a squad and let me know early, via any of the methods. 5:00 SHOTGUN we will close the year on the back 9. Registration closes at 3:00 tomorrow. I know a few "retired" members of our flock have mentioned starting earlier and earlier in the winter, meaning probably a 3:00 start roundabout the Winter Solstice. Should we get 12-24 steady participants looking to keep the dream alive, we will get with the Pro Shop and arrange a rate, and a time. Next week is the Glow Ball Night Golf on Wednesday, and I will be out of town the following Wednesday for a Table Tennis Tournament, please express interest in the meantime...this would help us confirm the demand. Thank you all for your continued support of Turkey Creek Golf Club.

Pressed send early last week, prior to attaching this photo.
