

"The Music Man" Has Come To Port!

Friday, August 9th through Monday, August 12th, you'll be able to watch more than sixty of Port Washington's Junior and Senior High School students sing, act, and dance in Port Summer Show's exciting production of "The Music Man."

You can sit back in the Schreiber High School auditorium and imagine you're part of the scene, around 1912, in a small town in Iowa. You'll be introduced to lots of fun and interesting characters.

The Music Man himself, Harold Hill, played by Andrew Ullman, will charm you as he does the characters on stage, while he and his old friend, Marcellus, played by Mike McCollum, try to sell band instruments to a town that has no need for them. Harold Hill has a lot of convincing to do before he makes his sale, and Mayor Shinn, played by Matt Epstein, along with the School Board Members, played by Matt Dallesandro,

Jordana Glantz, Nathaniel Hodes, Michael Johanson, Karin Johnson and Matthew Sadowsky, need quite a bit of coaxing. The ladies, on the other hand, love his flattery. Even the mayor's wife, Eulalie Shinn, played by Heather Scheiber, Ethel Toffelmier, played by Ariel Nazryan, and Mrs. Paroo, played by Jen Goldberg, have been drawn to Harold's defense. But it is not quite as easy to sell his ideas to the young and available Marion Paroo, played by Susan Blumlein.

All ages enjoy this show. The songs and music are familiar ones that make you want to join right in the fun. The characters become your friends, and you'll miss them when the curtain closes. It's definitely a memorable evening that will make you happy as well as very proud of the talented youth in our town. The show starts each night at 8 p.m. Tickets are $4 at the door.
