Logos School

Classical & Christ-Centered

Logos School aims to provide a classical and Christ-centered education in order to graduate young men and women who are equipped to shape culture through wise and victorious Christian living. In other words....

Raise dangerous kids, children that will threaten the powers of darkness.

If you'd asked me at the beginning of my parenting journey if that's what I wanted for my kids, I would've had a hard time saying yes. Now however, I see that this is what's needed.

As Christians, we tend to focus too much on Christ's goodness and gentleness when we teach our children to be like Christ. While these are certainly qualities that have their place, they are not, and cannot, be the only qualities of Christ we teach our children to imitate.

There are qualities that we ourselves must learn to imitate so we may be examples to our children as well, such as standing up in the face of evil even when you're outnumbered and know you "can't" win. Such as not backing down in the onslaught of a culture turned anti-Christ.

This is what Jason has been modeling for our children for the past two years and this is what they are now being taught in the walls of Logos School.

With two weeks under their belts now, Elijah and Nathan seem to be settling into their routine of early mornings, classes, lunch, homework and other activities like choir, play practice and for Nathan, THREE recesses a day!

After school, Nathan heads to work with Jason for an hour while Elijah is still volunteering at the Tyndale Library two days a week and taking Latin lessons with a tutor two other days.

Keets!

AKA baby Guinea Fowl.

Along with continuing to work on school at home, Gracia is now partially responsible for a new brood of Keets, baby Guinea Fowl. They are an adorable mixed variety that she and Hope are trying to keep alive (we've lost a handful, unfortunately) and make friendly as well. Guinea Fowl aren't known to be as tame or as smart as chickens. We're looking forward to them being older and

... PRAISE ...

- Wildfires have not presented a threat to our local area.
- Jason is still staying very busy at New Saint Andrews College and now at Logos School as well.
- We recovered quickly from the illness that spread through the household the first week of school.

... PRAYER ...

- Jason's application for a full-time construction position directly with NSA (instead of contracting). We should hear if he gets it by the middle of this month.
- Elijah and Nathan as they continue to transition from homeschool to private school.
- Health, as we are in the season for colds and flus, especially being around so many more people than we've ever been used to.
- Official paperwork from the Dominica government regarding Jason's customs case still isn't filed and there's no word on the kids' lawsuit.

their ability to keep the tick population down.

Unfortunately, since I wrote the rough draft of this newsletter, both Gracia and Hope's favorite keets have died.

On the home front, he and Benjamin are in the process of putting up a new fence-line, replacing a house door frame, beginning to wrap their brains around a barn extension and various other projects and maintenance that we can help the Hakimian family with.

Every chance Jason gets, he continues to promote the Christian Exodus Project and the idea of sending solid Christians to help the people of Dominica. There seems to be quite a bit of interest in the idea so far.

Jesus is King!

Until next time, the Groggs

Given that there are no neutral words, we must recognize that there are no neutral ideas. Every idea is shaped by presuppositions that either honor God or defy Him. Each use of a word becomes an act of worship, rendered either toward God or toward idols.

Head of the Household.

Jason continues to study and work contract for New Saint Andrews, turning an open basement into classrooms and the upstairs of an art studio into office space. He's also managing to fulfill his Reduced Tuition Program hours for Logos School. So far he has covered two, in-ground water tanks and a motor by the football field along with helping to tile the boy's bathroom/locker room in the school gym.

This program is the only way we were able to send the kids there and it's a wonderful idea! Often, he'll take a kid, or all of us, with him to work on an NSA or Logos project.

On Fridays he attends the Prayer Breakfast in Moscow and Saturday mornings find him in Potlatch at a Bible Study. His name is slowly getting around as someone who can do construction and random other projects. He has three of these in the planning stages right now.
