

What is 4-H?

4-H is a program that creates opportunities for youth to develop life skills.

4-H EMPOWERS youth to develop practical knowledge and individual talents through hands-on experiences

4-H EMPOWERS youth to make positive decisions

4-H EMPOWERS youth to build strong leadership and communication skills

4-H EMPOWERS youth to develop friendships and gain a sense of community

4-H EMPOWERS youth to give back to their communities and understand the importance of that giving

4-H is a part of the U Mass Extension Youth Development Program.

Extension and 4-H programs are available to all without regard to race, color, national origin, religion, sex, or disability.

Why Join 4-H

Traditional Community 4-H Clubs meet once a month, generally in the evening or on weekends. Research shows that 4-H plays a special and vital role in the lives of young people. 4-H youth achieve higher marks in school, are more likely to attend college and contribute to their communities at higher rates than their peers. These findings are part of a landmark study from the 4-H Study of Positive Youth Development (PYD).

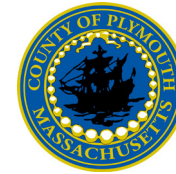

What do 4-H'ers do?

4-H clubs are groups of youth who get together to do things they enjoy. The group, or club, decides the types of activities and projects they are interested in doing.
