

ACCOUNTABILITY

The primary objective of Family Preservation is to help families acquire the skills necessary to keep their children in the home.

The referring child protection worker is advised of the family's progress weekly. At the end of the program a detailed report of progress is given to Child Protection Services with recommendations for further service.

These beliefs and values are fundamental and essential to how service is provided.

We Believe:

1. In the integrity of the family - children should live with their families whenever safe to do so.
2. In the right for children to have a safe and nurturing home.
3. Many family problems occur due to lack of skills and supports.
4. Positive change inspires hope and optimism, and increases motivation for continued change.
5. Change can be best achieved by recognizing and using individual and family strengths.
6. Families are our partners, and are active in services.

FLEXIBILITY

Family Preservation Workers will help and assist to address individual and family needs.

Plans focus on specific issues which led to child protection concerns, as well as particular needs, wishes and learning styles of each family.

Family Preservation Workers provide information on child development, effective parenting, mood management skills, communication, assertiveness, and problem solving methods. They also teach families basic life skills, such as how to use the transportation system, budgeting, making child care arrangements, and how to use other agencies for support.
