What is family violence?

It is when someone uses abusive behaviours to control and/or harm a member of their family, or someone with whom they have an intimate relationship.

There are many forms of violence:

Physical: any intentional act causing injury or trauma to another person by way of bodily contact;

Sexual: unwanted sexual activity forced on a person by another through coercion or threats;

Emotional: a sequence of repeated occurrences that insults, threatens, isolates, degrades, humiliates, and/or controls another person;

Financial: the improper, illegal or unauthorized use of an adult's resources for the benefit of another.

Abuse can happen to anyone:

- Children
- Youth
- Adults
- Elders

Family violence is:

- A person's suffering
- A family's destruction
- A community's responsibility
- A nation's struggle to heal

Help is available for those who are being abused.

Family violence includes many different forms of physical and emotional abuse, as well as neglect carried out by family members or intimate partners.

It may include a single act of violence or a number of acts that form a pattern of abuse.

Family violence can have serious consequences for victims and those who see or hear the violence.

Abuse happens in all kinds of families. It happens to Canadian citizens, refugees, and immigrants. It happens to men and women with or without children, who are rich or poor, professionals, labourers, stay at home parents, people who are young or old.

It happens to individuals of all races, religions, cultures, backgrounds, ethnic origins and sexual orientations. Abuse can also happen at any stage of any relationship.
