Property Protection

Title Insurance protects against unpredictable and undetectable issues that could affect marketability , such as error in info provided by the Municipality, or in a survey, forgery or fraud, including post policy encroachments, fraud, construction liens and known problems such as an addition that does not show on a survey.

le: Shortly after closing the buyer discovers that an addition to the home encroaches on the neighbours property, but the seller had sworn a declaration that he had not made any changes. The buyer had purchased title insurance as an up to date survey was not available. Title company would either purchase the property under the addition and absorb all municipal costs OR pay for the removal of the portion that encroaches plus compensation for the decreased value.

le: Alice provides a private mortgage to Carl, secured by his common law wife Betty's property. Carl has a women impersonate Betty to sign documents. When Alice receives No mortgage payments it is discovered the real betty had no knowledge of the transaction. Alice was compensated by the Title Insurance.

Legal Services

Title Insurance provides comprehensive coverage for the services provided by the Lawyer, avoiding suing a Lawyer for any errors or incompetence ie: a couple purchase a Condo with a lake view, described as a certain level and unit, . The lawyer reviews the Status certificate and fails to note the change in unit number on the docs, the purchaser ends up getting title to a unit with no lake view and the unit he thought he was buying is sold to another party. Title insurance compensated the buyer for his loss with a settlement for the difference in value.

le: a buyer of a new property instructed her lawyer she wished to pay cash rather than incur the interest charges of a Vendor Take back Mortgage. The agreement allowed for this option, but the lawyer failed to follow through and the buyer ended up with a vendor take back mortgage on closing.

Title insurance compensated her for the interest amount

For a small one time premium, Title Insurance buys peace of mind against a multitude of errors or fraud
