◆ AI Overview

In Oklahoma, municipalities have the authority to define, prohibit, and summarily abate public nuisances within their corporate limits. Violations of municipal nuisance ordinances can lead to fines of up to $549 per day, prosecution in municipal court, or liens against the property for abatement costs. ● Municode Library v.5

Key aspects of Oklahoma law regarding municipal nuisance fines include:

- Definition & Authority: Cities are empowered to determine what constitutes a nuisance (e.g., weeds, refuse, dangerous buildings, stagnant water) and can abate them, especially to protect public health and safety.
- Fines and Penalties: Municipalities may establish fines, penalties, or imprisonment for violations. For example, Stillwater allows for fines up to $549 per day.
- Abatement Costs: Costs incurred by the city to remove or fix a nuisance can be filed as a lien against the property, accruing interest until satisfied.
- Enforcement: If a person fails to abate a nuisance after notice, the city can proceed to abate it, and the owner may be liable for the costs.
- Legal Standing: Public nuisances are generally considered misdemeanors under state law (21 O.S. § 1191). ● Municode Library v.6
