Michael was born in 1947 in Bacoli, Italy, a small town roughly 40 minutes outside of Napoli. In the fifth grade, he dropped out of school to work on a farm to support his family. As he grew up, he realized that he wanted a better future for his family and decided that one day he would settle down in the United States.

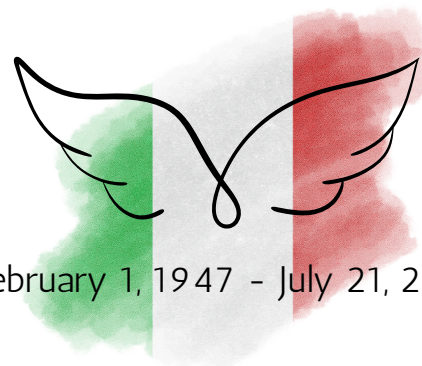

Michael joined the Italian Military in 1965, and seven years later, his journey in America began. In 1972, his boat docked in Brooklyn, NY. It was there that he got off the boat and never got back on. The military was allowed to tour the city for the day, but they were only allowed to take off the boat what they could carry on their bodies. Michael accepted that challenge and put on everything he could fit on his body, got off the boat, and never looked back.

While in Brooklyn, Michael slept on the floor of a pizza shop where he worked until he was able to provide for himself. He never signed up for citizenship, and after a few years in Brooklyn, he was deported. Again, he accepted that challenge, flew into Canada, rode in the trunk of a car, and made it over the border and back to Brooklyn.

Michael was eventually offered the opportunity to run a restaurant in Ohio. One thing led to another, and he bought the well-known "Brothers Pizza" and soon expanded it to "Grande Continental Cuisine." After that restaurant was a wild success, he opened this location. I am sure that many of you remember Michael wearing that Grande polo everywhere he went! This restaurant was his pride and joy, and it is still thriving over 30 years later. Michael succeeded at everything he sought after in America and was truly an amazing person. We are all lucky to have known him.

Michael Grande, sitting at the head of the table, enjoying Spaghetti Sunday with his family. He is wearing his favorite shirt, his work polo with his famous glasses and gold watch.
