

VALUES AND ETHICAL LEADERSHIP

We all live by a set of personal values and ethics and these vary from person to person and are influenced by our background, education, personality, beliefs and life experiences. At work though, we are required to follow the values and ethical practices laid down by our employer, and to perform our responsibilities with these top of mind throughout all our activities and communications.

This course will explore the values and ethics of your organisation and how to understand them, follow them, and ensure those you work with practise them too.
