Consider the following scenario: In 1926, Dr. Carter G. Woodson proposed celebrating African American history and culture by launching Negro History Week. It was the Historical Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) that partnered with Dr. Woodson to offer the first Black History college courses, trained the first generations of Black historians, housed early Black archives and research collections, and supported students who would later lead school-based Negro History Week programs. Question(s): Historically Black Colleges and Universities were created out of necessity but have become centers of culture, scholarship, and empowerment.
