Coinkeeper - the Avery Chronicles

Introducing the Coinkeeper series of fantasy, high interest, low vocabulary, short stories created for the 9-12 age group, and specifically designed for struggling or reluctant readers. Reading success need not be measured by the length of the story.

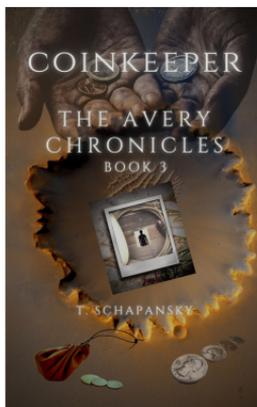

New-published Feb 2/21

"There are things in this world that can't be explained. Not by words, not by history, and not by your teachers at school. Doesn't make those things not real." I nodded again, and I thought he was warming up to tell me another story. I was dead wrong.

"This time, I appeared in Scotland as a ten-year-old boy, and I saw no beasts out of the ordinary. The year was 1857, and that's when I began to believe not only in ghosts, but in shapeshifters, as well." Wait, what? Now I knew, this was going to be a great story.

"We found a saloon and tied our horses up to the rail outside. Had I known what was about to happen, I would have insisted that we kept on riding to find a whole different saloon." "Grandpa, what happened?" I felt goosebumps.

Inspire Series - Book 1

Some Christmas

"Some Christmas" kicks off a series of high interest, low vocabulary, short stories created for the adolescent struggling or reluctant reader.

Reading success need not be measured by the length of the story.

This is not an everyday, typical Christmas story. A fifteenth birthday and a drug bust in the midst of a global pandemic. Pretty sure this will turn out to be, some Christmas

Reviews

"I believe that the target (youth) audience, as well as readers outside of that demographic, can relate to the main theme that is found throughout this story. The need to feel connection is something that everyone can relate to, and the drive to attain that can be a powerful force - so formidable, in fact, that, as in Some Christmas, one can sometimes be willing to compromise one's morals (as Abe did in skipping school to try and re-establish his relationship with Linc) to find that sense of belonging. Abe's journey of self-awareness (and staying true to self), as well as forgiveness, are qualities from which everyone can learn." Kim A, Youth Mental Health Worker

"In my honest opinion, one of the things I see in the world today is the loss of the value of, and the implicit need for family. As we as a society become more and more reliant on technology, the need for those family values seems to be getting left by the wayside. This is one of the key factors that Ms. Schapansky brings to her work. The need for family as a core principal in the raising of our children is front and centre in her books. Something I believe everyone today needs to take a good hard look at. Not to mention dealing with other touchy subjects such as teens and drugs depicted here instead of simply sweeping these issues under the rug. I would recommend this not only for its intended age group, yet for the parents as well." J.P. Willson, Author

Along the Way 12 book series

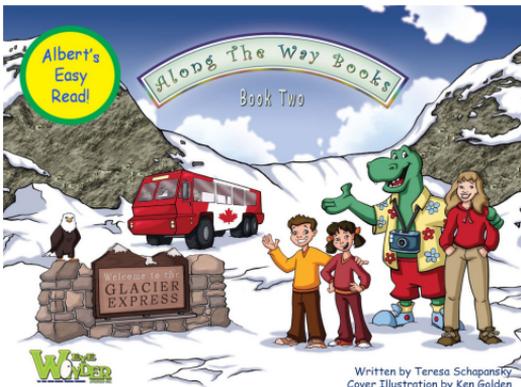

COMING SOON

In these books, you'll find short stories, and meet ordinary, everyday children who face ordinary, everyday problems; read along as our new friends learn how best to solve such problems. We'll go on make-believe road trips and come across some pretty amazing facts that deal with different cultures, exciting history, geography, horticulture, science and more. Most importantly, Along the Way books are dedicated to encouraging children to broaden their horizons - be all they can be - all the while, sharpening reading skills which are in fact necessary as they embark on this fantastic path to lifelong learning.

Albert wastes no time introducing himself and his two young friends, Jade and Ben, who are about to discover that they will have to move away, and learn to deal with changes.

Tag along with Albert as our prehistoric tour guide, learn some cool facts about Alberta, find some cool places to stop along the Yellowhead Highway, and test your skills with our very first Dino Trivia!

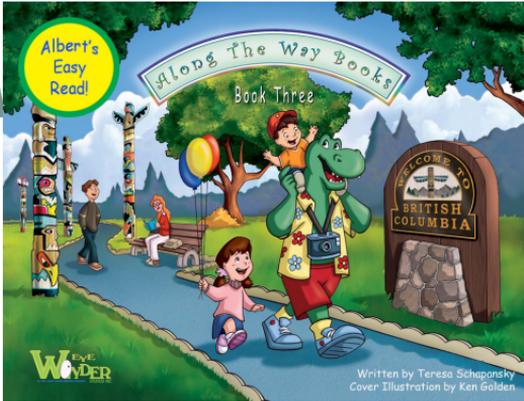

Find the answers to Book One's Dino Trivia, learn about the brr... ice age and how it affects us still, today. Meet Albert's friends, Kilee and Michael - follow along as they learn the true meaning of elbow grease.

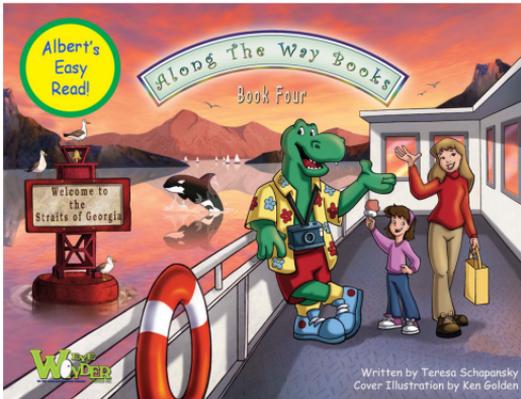

Join Albert as he takes us from Edmonton, Alberta all the way to the Saskatchewan border, and learn about some more cool places along the way!

Albert digs right into the answers to book two's Dino Trivia, and then describes some of the many cultures and fun traditions that make up North America. Our third short story is about Ryan and Nathan, who learn that they are about to have new neighbours! Albert starts this road trip in Victoria, British Columbia, where construction of the Trans Canada Highway began in the year, 1912.

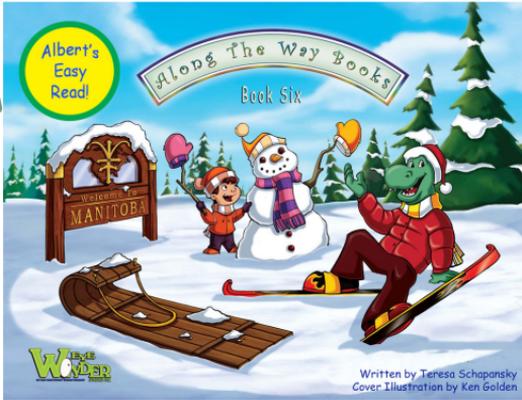

Discovering the answers to our third Dino Trivia is Albert's first task, and then find out why people may have left their homes in other countries, to move to North America. In this short story, we'll catch up with our friends, Jade and Ben, and find out why they had to call 911. Albert takes us on a ferry boat ride from Vancouver Island to the Mainland, and we discover some pretty interesting facts, along the way!

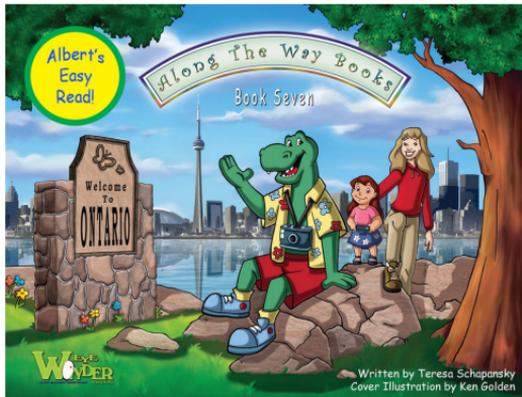

As usual, Albert makes finding the answers to the previous book's Dino Trivia fun! We learn a little about the arrival of the railroad, and in our short story, we discover how it impacted in a positive manner, the way of life of our new friends, Hailey and Emma, and their family. On our road trip, we hitch a ride with Albert on the Canadian Pacific Railway, and visit some really cool places that can be found in Saskatchewan!

In colourful detail, Albert gives us the answers to Dino Trivia, and then jumps right into describing the different weather systems we experience in North America. In our short story, we find out who moves next door to Ryan and Nathan. Albert takes us on a journey from Hudson Bay to West Hawk Lake in Manitoba, and introduces us to bugs and wildlife that are native to this province.

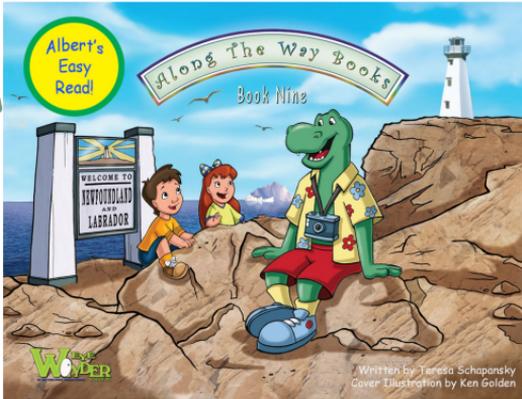

Find the answers to the Dino Trivia from the previous book, and then find out the roles insects and bugs play in our environment. Albert says that they are not all just pesky critters, after all! In this short story, we'll meet Milen and Kloee, and follow along as Milen learns all about trust and responsibility. Learn about each of the Great Lakes, and have fun traveling with Albert from Toronto to Ottawa.

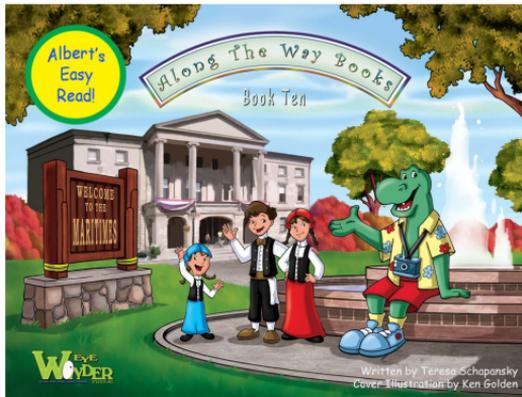

Naturally, Albert mixes fun with education as we discover the answers to book seven's Dino Trivia! We learn a little bit about the history of the French language in Quebec, and we even find out where the name, "Canada" came from. In our short story, we'll find out what our friends, Michael and Kilee have been up to! This Albert-style road trip teaches us about interesting history, and takes us to some pretty neat places in Quebec!

Learning the answers to book eight's Dino Trivia is the best place to begin! Albert teaches us the differences between Baleen whales and toothed whales, and about some of the species that live in this province. Join Ryan and Nathan as they visit their grandparents for a whole week, and overcome a few fears along the way! We learn why Newfoundland and Labrador is known as the Seabird Capital of North America.

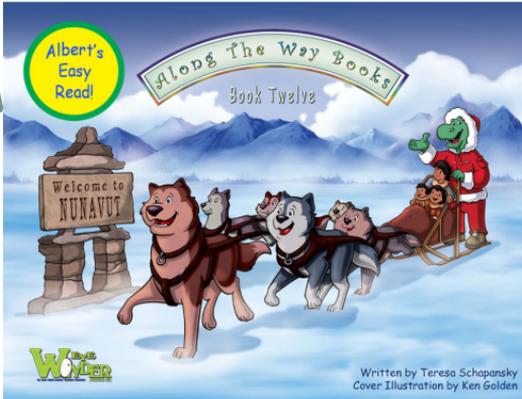

After checking out the answers to the Dino Trivia, we're going to visit the three provinces that make up the Maritimes; New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island, and find out a little about their different cultures, industries and histories. We'll even discover where the longest covered bridge in the world and old oldest operating lighthouse are located! In our short story, we'll catch up with Milen and Kloe, and we'll learn a little bit about the differences between visible and invisible disabilities.
