REAPPORTIONMENT COMMISSION REPORT TO THE FISCAL COURT

The attached map outlines the reapportionment commission's proposed new magisterial lines for Hart County. After an exhaustive review of census data and the housing map of Hart County, the members of the commission feel that the proposed new magisterial lines have the best balance of population and the clearest boundaries possible.

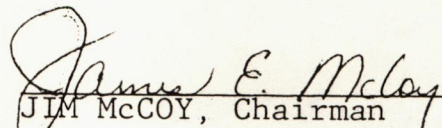

It was the intention of this commission to use natural land marks as boundaries, such as the river, wherever possible. Also, man-made structures, such as roads, were used as boundaries.

A word of explanation is needed about the roads used as boundaries. When a state road was used the houses on one side of the road were placed in a district and the houses on the other side of the road were placed in the adjoining district. Where county roads were used as district boundary lines, all of the houses that fronted the road were placed in the same district.

All of the members of the commission believe that the citizens are well represented by the present number of members on fiscal court. Any change in this number would not be in the best interest of the citizens of Hart County. A decrease in the number of magistrates may adversely affect the representation of the citizens' best interest. Also, an increase would not be justified due to the population size and it would place a financial burden on the taxpayers to support this new position.

In conclusion, we feel that this report conforms to state law in that the magisterial districts are balanced based on the population guidelines. Second the citizens of Hart County can be more effectively represented now that the magisterial districts are balanced.
