Truth, Honor and Loyalty, the motto of Saint Mary's, are not merely words but ideals to live by for Mrs. Morgan Burke.

Her school loyalty, her service to the church and the community, and her amiable personality have left a lasting impression on us all.

Throughout her many years at St. Mary's, she has always upheld the true values in life and has had a great influence on all those who have known her.

So, to her, who at all times has graciously shown a genuine interest in us, we, the Class of '71, in grateful acknowledgement, dedicate this yearbook.

*This is the day when the shadows are low
This is the day when all earth stands aglow
For I want to believe I am needed today
And I need to be loved as I am,
as I am,

And I can see there's a new coming dawn
And I hope and I pray that with each coming day
I'll find someone who needs me the way I need them today.*

*Last year no-one ever knew the lonely way I spent my days
Now at last those days have passed
And I can share my happy heart with you
Because I know that no matter what I say or do
I'll still be loved and needed by you
And I feel I can face all the world, bright and gay,
For the love that I have goes a long,
goes a long,
long way.*

As We See It . . .

June 19, 1961

Dear Rosie,

How is everything? I trust that your driver education courses are a valuable asset to the school. Sorry you couldn't make it to the opening night of Inge Flemer's first Broadway success. Since you weren't there, I'll fill you in on the night's events.

The Saturday Review, the magazine for which I am now writing, assigned me to the coverage of this gala event. It was so nice of Inge to invite all the members of our old class. The first to arrive was naturally (who is always the first to arrive?) Jean Inrich, who is now photographer for the Times Union. You wouldn't believe how funny it seemed to be talking to all of our old classmates! I hadn't seen her at all since her first cross country race. She now tells me that she is planning a coast to coast run next fall.

Out of the distance came a familiar voice— you guessed it— Ellen Stammek, three bloc's away. Ellen tells me that she is now business of an all night talk show. Last week her special guest was Betty Stoen, campaigning for women's liberation. Accompanying Ellen was her ever-alert press agent, Kevin Cullen, who stumbled into a nearby phonebooth to phone in his story.

It was a thrill to see Dr. Joyce LaPointe, Hoosick Falls' representative for Dr. Mayo. She said that in her work she frequently talks with Paul Inge, who is disciplinarian at Central School.

Next to arrive was Ambassador James Thurber, always noted for his tact and diplomacy, who was assisted by his protective bodyguards, Ben and Doug. Jim reports that he has just returned from an important assignment to Outer Mongolia.

After talking with Thurber, I met our dear friend Susan Austin, who appeared to be quite disturbed. She admitted that she had never been anywhere busier than Hoosick Falls and was awed at all the excitement in New York. She is now the owner and manager of Edith Farrow in White Plains.

Lochell Libonace had just returned from an adventurous ski vacation in Switzerland where she nearly broke her leg. She luckily managed to escape the "miserable" situation.

I stopped over to see Marie Lettore and Tom DeVoy. Marie said that she now has controlling interest in that famous resort, Hedger's Lake. Tom is Marie's chief liegeward during the summer and conches a very successful spinning team in the winter.

After chatting with them, I happened to see Terri Rogers. She said that she has been unable to become interested in a job for over a year. For the last few months she has been volunteering, but decided that she wasn't "fit" for it and is planning on just sitting and crocheting afghans for a while.

I was pleasantly surprised to see Nichelle Weston who has finally achieved her goal. She has succeeded in founding a women's football team. The name, naturally, is the "WFL".

Sonnie Jordan and Theresa Wilson were next to arrive. Sonnie, now following in her father's footsteps, is head of the local Parental Office. Immediately after the performance, Sonnie and her secretary Theresa hurried backstage to arrange "love" to purchase life insurance just in case any attempts were made on his life after the performance.

Strangely garbed and reading wires in the corner was Polare Jeri Holbrook. Her latest proclamation was that Tom Laverda's latest movie, "The Star of Nation", is sure to be a box office sellout, and that he will be a shoe-in for this year's Oscar.

At that moment Angie Roberts entered the lobby. She said that she wished to invite all her senior classmates to her famous little restaurant just around the corner. Angie is still the "ideal" person she used to be.

After reminiscing, we decided to take our seats, and found ourselves sitting behind Peter Serwett and James Baker. They had just returned from Madison Square Garden where each had received basketball's most coveted award. Listen to this—Peter was selected coach of the year, and was awarded his prize by Jasper, who was awarded the player of the year award to his loyal friend John.

Sitting behind us was Harry DeTurcy. Harry recently missed the play; he had been released from jail the previous day for the unauthorized use of public grounds to hold a rock festival. Harry assured me that his next festival will take place at his own estate.

I heard my name called from the balcony and turned to see Ann Foster and Joanne Galvagni peering over the edge. Ann is the instructor at the FOSTER SCHOOL OF CURS, and Joanne now operates a day care center for children in Ossich Falls. Joanne later told me that Diane Little is the Administrator of Nursing at Mary McEllan Hospital. She also reported that there has been only a 2% rise in food poisoning since Diane's promotion.

Next to arrive were Joe Horn, owner of Hoag Construction Company, and his wife, the former Stet March. Stef and Joe told us they have just built a new home in which there is comfort everywhere!

Bill Nugent walked in looking like a typical Frenchman. He said that he is now working at the United Nations as an interpreter and finds his job "très intéressant".

Carol Shiland entered looking somewhat dumber than I had remembered her. She reported that she is working on a new formula for water filtration for the Conventone Company. She also said that Carla Perez and Nancy Baker have become co-administrators of a cheerleading clinic in Ossich Falls.

John Livinsky and Helen York, the annual stars of the former Ossich Falls Snow-snowball, were unable to make it because of conflicting dates. Their best wishes were sent to everyone.

Luke, surprisingly enough, really outdid himself. This time and produced a very surprising and enjoyable play. As we were leaving the theater to take him up on her invitation, the main door burst open and in flew god of Henry Guire. He was very disappointed at missing Luke's play—"better late than never".

We must have stayed at Angie's for hours, just reminiscing old times. It was really a shame that Ann couldn't come. It was one of the memorable nights of my life, and that's how everyone else felt about it too.

Maureen

We Bequeath . . .

We, the Seniors of '71, finding ourselves to be of sound mind and body, do willingly bequeath the following senior privileges and treasured possessions of our high school years.

With the faculty, we leave the wish that all the classes will be as great as ours.

To the Juniors, we leave our percentiles, with the hope that they are put to better use.

To the Sophomores, we leave our success as Seniors.

To the Freshmen, we leave our over-used textbooks, dirty lockers, and messy classrooms.

The Seniors now make the following bequests:

Jean Andrick leaves first!

Kim Allard leaves her mathematical ability to Terri Milliman.

Maureen Scarey leaves the candy machine alone.

Rosie Graney leaves her lunch-hour kitchen privileges to Kathy Albowicz.

Jeri Holbrook leaves the halls echoing with the sound of dancing feet.

Peter Sennett leaves his parking place to Karen Ramsey.

Jamie Nolan leaves his height to Mikie Brandi.

Billy Nugent leaves his longest patch in the parking lot to anyone who can match it.

Rebel leaves her Confederate flag to Larry Vosh.

Joe Hoag gives the school back to the nuns.

Stef March leaves with Joe.

D. D. Wilkie leaves her seat on the bus to Debbie McGeoch.

Bonnie Gorman leaves her senior picture to Jo Liporace.

Sue Austin leaves her White Creek privileges to Judy Morin.

Betsy Bloom leaves Demon's pants to Sue Mahar.

Kevin Cullen leaves his "no-doze" pills to John Nealon.

General leaves the address of his barber shop to Paul Delurey.

Jayne LaPorte leaves an open line on the phone to Kris Downey.

Rachel Liporace leaves her suntan lotion to Donna Couch.

Ellen Stempek leaves her math eraser to Sue Medvetz.

Joanne Galvagni leaves her quiet manner to Ann Digman.

Terri Rogers leaves her art of "vamping" to Debbie Baker.

Luke Fleming leaves his script to Billy Vogler.

Marie LeBlanc leaves her Betty Crocker Award to Steve Warrick.

Tom McEvoy leaves his car keys "reluctantly" to Kathy.

The Demon leaves his moves, on and off the court, to Mike Laroche.

Theresa Reiman leaves her seat in Religion Class to Joan Clancy.

Maria Percy leaves her captain's uniform to "Pom Pom Patti."

Jimmy Thurber leaves his defensive ability to Mike Shea.

Helen Wirmusky and Karen Nowak leave their singing duets to John Nealon and Sue Salluzzo.

Carol Shiland leaves her beautician scissors to Theresa Fleming.

Angie Roberto leaves a gift certificate for "ideal" coffee on the house.

Ann Foster leaves her contacts to Lizzie Weyers, if she can find them.

Nancy Nolan leaves her book "How to Overcome Shyness" to Oche.

Denny McGuire? Oh, he didn't leave yet!
