Open Discussion – Representatives of SOFOS Power attended to share information with the township. Their company works on project that store battery power. Stand-alone battery storage is electrical grid-support infrastructure that adds capacity and resiliency to the grid. The batteries charge during low-demand periods when there is excess energy and then release energy onto the grid during high-demand periods. Batteries are enclosed in containers that are similar visually to metal shipping containers. The rest of the development would include electrical infrastructure to connect to the existing high-voltage transmission line on the property, access roads, and stormwater retention. After construction, the project would generate minimal traffic and not require public water or sewer." The township will need to determine what category in our Zoning Ordinance best suits this project. There is a separate document with more detailed information.
