Reinis takes reins as CEO of NetStreams

Kevin Reinis has replaced founder Herman Cardenas as CEO of NetStreams.

Reinis, a 20-year information technology industry veteran, took over the company's global operations earlier this month. He previously served as CEO of Yosemite Technologies, a Silicon Valley firm that makes backup and recovery software. But Reinis also has ties to Austin, having worked at Veritas Software Corp. and Dell Inc.

Cardenas becomes chairman.

NetStreams products distribute digital audio throughout a home or office using Internet protocol technology, which gives users more flexibility and eliminates echoing from room to room.
