

B2C – Job Posting redesign

Finding a job can be notoriously difficult as candidates typically have to visit multiple locations to gather all the relevant information they need when considering a new role and company. I redesigned the job posting experience for ClearanceJobs to include advanced search functionality and consolidate all the information candidates desire into a single display. API integrations are used to pull external company information into one source, utilizing a flat architecture that improves both the candidate experience and SEO relevancy. This approach has been adopted by ClearanceJobs, with the first release scheduled for Q4 of 2024.
