FAQS:

Do I need to sing well? – Answer – absolutely not!

Can I or my child bring an instrument to play? YES! Please print out the appropriate music from the website above for music for that particular instrument (as that will also be the right key and all that)

Can I just come and watch or listen? – Absolutely!

Who shares the liability for this event? – Every individual is liable for their own actions (or those of their dependents) and safety, think flashmob.

Can I bring luminaries? Yes, please do or other candles, glowsticks, or the like!

Can I bring my well-behaved pet? Sure, keep them leashed, tethered, or in their terrarium, though!

Can I bring my well-behaved spouse? Sure, if you have a well-behaved spouse, they're welcome! If not, they can come to you on their own accord and thus not be part of your own liability in most cases, or you can keep them leashed, tethered, or in their terrarium.

I have friends/relatives that I like/love from other (worse) neighborhoods. Can I invite them to join in with us? YES! Though we don't condone disparaging other neighborhoods... Show off the neighborhood!

Can entrepreneurial children profiteer from selling hot beverages or the like? YES!

What kind of economic impact will this have on the value of my home? If we're excellent, maybe some, and if we're terrible, perhaps some. However, people want to live in places with a 'real' community!

What if I don't like Christmas or some of my neighbors? Come anyway, maybe you'll meet new neighbors you also don't like or discover alternative holidays!

Will some children be embarrassed by their parents/family singing? Yes!

What if it is really cold, windy, or rainy? Then listen from your cars! Someone will still be there to sing (but it might not be great).

Is this a religious thing? Well, think of it as non-sectarian sharing of songs with religious overtones – you may infer or deride meaning as you wish.
