Tea Party Meeting - Main Speaker
Wade Noble

CLAYSON

Dear faithful Patriots,

What a week. I think my head is about to explode. Mr. Noble's speech about the water issue was really enlightening and he does it with such a twist. I think in another life he might have been a stand up comic.

The Arizona Senate and House Elections and oversight Hearing was riveting, and then hearing Sheriff Leon's testimony about money at the border makes us think that Yuma is probably equally as corrupt as Mesa.

We have to be vigilant throughout the coming months, carefully vet our candidates for 2024.

Wade Noble, Attorney for Yuma Area Representative for Irrigation Districts, and tonight's main speaker reported on the water issues facing Yuma County. Wayne says the reason we don't have enough water is due to the historic multi-year drought placing a tremendous strain on the Colorado River, Yuma's primary water supply. Low runoff conditions in the Colorado River Basin also has contributed to declaring a Tier One Water Shortage. This declaration requires Arizona to reduce its share of Colorado River water.. Also corporations like GSC farms LLC Greenstone bought up land around the Colorado River and got a contract for water which they intended to sell to the town of Queen Creek to accommodate the influx of new housing. He said farms don't have contracts and the communities along the river filed suit. California's Imperial Valley also wants more of the water for agriculture. Yuma, has the oldest and best water rights on the lower Colorado River due to agriculture providing the entire country with a large majority of produce primarily during the winter season. 74% of the water usage in Yuma is for agriculture. Yuma has 1st priority water rights that were established before 1929 and 4th priority rights for water users with contracts. Other states along the Colorado River said we had better figure out how to divide the river water between the north and south states. At this time Yuma's 1st priority and 4th priority river rights are at risk and we have already given up 600,000 acre feet. In June 2022 there was a warning that the river is about to crash. Yuma agriculture is talking about cutting back on growing crops and implementing ways to conserve water. Seems like it is time for each of us to do our part in conserving water every day.

Good of the order: Neil briefed us on our bi-weekly dose of insanity news.

Gilbert was contacted by Mark Kirkorian, a think tank group expert from Washington, D.C. He wanted to discuss Yuma's illegal immigration and any information he could take back to D.C. Gilbert advised that illegals are coming through the Foothills Goldwater Firing Range and bringing in large quantities of fentanyl. Kirkorian will discuss this with his group in D.C. Greg Wilkerson mentioned that Gary Garcia and David Lara were elected as "Members at Large" for the Republican Party District 7. Greg was not aware of this position and said these reps go to meetings in Phoenix and report back what was discussed to their district. Greg said he will go to meetings and report back.

Jim made motion to adjourn at 7:30 PM. Cecil seconded and we scurried into the cold winter's night.

Betrayal: leftist organization discovers they accidentally hired a White lady

By Olivia Murray -- American Thinker

Treason? No biggie. Record-breaking and debilitating inflation? At least it's better than "mean tweets." Sidewalks covered in human feces and unconscious drug addicts? Only country bumpkins can't appreciate the culture and progress of a big city under Democrats.

But claiming to be something you're objectively not? Unacceptable. Well, unless you're a male collegiate athlete who can't compete against the other men, so you throw on a swimsuit, call yourself "Lia," and race against the girls. Or, you're suffering from mental illness so you cut off your sex organs, announce your new "gender" identity, and read/show pornographic material to preschoolers. Then, then it's okay to manufacture and live out a false reality. Well, not just "okay" but actually the moral standard of what's right. Jot this down you conservative bigots.

Get a load of this story, published over at PJMedia yesterday: "a hard-Left organization peddling authoritarianism" felt the sting of betrayal after hiring agent Oskar Pierre Castro got "conned" into hiring a White woman.

Rachel Elizabeth Seidel — but for the sake of job interviews, it's Raquel Evita Saraswati — and she is (or was?) the Chief Equity, Inclusion, and Culture Officer for The American Friends Service Committee. According to Castro, she checked all the boxes: she was "queer," Muslim," and "multiethnic." An article published yesterday by Alice Speri of The Intercept read:

Raquel Evita Saraswati [Seidel], a Muslim activist who for years has encouraged people to believe that she is a woman of color, including Latina as well as of South Asian and Arab descent[.]

According to Seidel's mother though, the (former?) DIE officer is "as white as... snow", and is in fact of German, English, and Italian descent.

Turns out the "White privilege" card wasn't really good for much now was it?

Harvard gun study leads to unexpected results

By Glenn Woods

A recent study came out claiming that states with tougher gun control showed lower levels of murder and suicide. News media outlets are all over this, but they missed a critical phrasing in their report: those states had less suicide and murder by gun. Their murder and suicide rates were not lower overall. In fact, in many cases, it was higher.

A study by Harvard took a look at firearm ownership, gun laws, and violent crime, and suicide rates around the world. It found that more guns do not equate to more deaths and fewer guns do not equate to fewer deaths. That's not surprising when you realize that someone who wants to kill themselves or other people, will find a way to do it no matter whether they have a gun or not.

The study shows that the rate of murder and suicide has nothing to do with whether someone has access to a gun or not. It looked at gun ownership in the U.S., Norway, Finland, Germany, France, and Denmark. The high murder rate in the U.S. is the exception, not the rule when comparing homicide rates to gun ownership rates.

In Luxembourg, for example, guns are banned, but the country's murder rate is nine times that of Germany's, despite Germany having gun ownership rates 30,000 times higher than Luxembourg.

The UK banned most guns. Then the murder rate went up. People had just switched tools.

The study concludes that "where firearms are most dense violent crime rates are lowest, and where guns are least dense violent crime rates are highest."

When guns aren't available for killing people, criminals just find another tool.

Our nation is in a panic. Congress may resume functioning any day now.

The Few, the Proud — Iwo Jima

On February 23, 1945, six Marines, with Easy Company, 2nd Battalion, 28th Marines, 5th Division, raised our American flag atop Mount Suribachi during the Battle of Iwo Jima.

The flag on the 546-foot dormant volcanic cone at the southern tip of the island, could be seen for a great distance, and was an inspiration for our Marines and Sailors. Three of the six Marines pictured, Sergeant Michael Strank, Corporal Harlon Block, and Private First Class Franklin Sousley, were killed in action before the battle concluded on 26 March.

There were 6,871 Americans killed and 19,217 wounded on Iwo Jima. The Medal of Honor was awarded to 22 Marines and five Sailors, 14 of them posthumously (13 Marines, one Sailor). Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander of Pacific Fleet and Pacific Ocean Areas, noted of the Americans on Iwo, "uncommon valor was a common virtue."

Joe Rosenthal's iconic image was of the second flag raised that day, a 96-by-56-inch flag to replace the 54-by-28-inch flag, and that image was the inspiration for the Marine Corps War Memorial outside the Ord-Weitzel Gate to Arlington National Cemetery. Both flags can now be seen in the National Museum of the Marine Corps near Marine Corp Base, Quantico.

The major conflicts against 20th century tyrants cost 616,124 American lives and 1,120,283 wounded, in bloody theaters of warfare — one battle at a time. Too many Americans now have no concept of the price of Liberty bequeathed to them — the price of freedom many arrogantly squander today. Ignorance is bliss – until it is not... In 1940, Winston observed, “Never was so much owed by so many to so few.” Indeed.
