Remembering D Day

Yes, Colorado River Tea Party Will meet this Summer. We have way to much to do.

Dear faithful Patriots,

Every once in a whileI catch a glimmer of hope, but it disappears. This week it was on Steve Bannon. Paul Gosar has found a cashe of money hidden in the recess of the budget office. Swoosh. Can't find a thing.

We do, however, now have some scientific data that shows the left really is insane.

And at least the Canadians can appreciate what Trump Accomplished.

And I've suspected for quite a while that the swamp does have genocide on its mind.

Happy reading.

Colorado River Tea Party Minutes

June 1, 2023

Jim called the meeting to order at 6:10 PM

Cecil gave the invocation

John led us in the Pledge of Allegiance

Jim read the Mission Statement

Nikki read the minutes from the last meeting. Mike made a motion to accept, Carla seconded, motion passed. Ruth was not present so Nikki gave the Treasurers Report. Carla made a motion to accept, Gilbert seconded, motion passed.

John gave the Legislative Report. He said Bill Gates won’t run in 2024 for Maricopa County Board of Supervisors due to threats for his management of 2020 and 2022 elections in Arizona. * Judge Peter Thompson dismissed Kari Lake’s governor challenge ruling the court didn’t find any clear evidence for signature verification. * Rubin Gallego is running for U.S. Senate in 2024 to oppose Kyrsten Sinema, and Kari Lake is also considering a run. * FBI refuses to hand over documents tying Biden to a bribery scheme. Carla, Ways and Means needs someone to bring refreshments at the next meeting. Mike volunteered.

New Business: The GOP will help out at our booth for the Juneteenth event and the Yuma County Tea Party will have their trolley available for viewing on June 17th from 6 to 10 PM at Carver Park.

Christy Cradic, Yuma Union High School District School Board and Tim Brienza, Supervisor of Yuma Union High School District are our guest speakers tonight. Christy mentioned that she didn’t even campaign for her position as there wasn’t enough interest or competition for it. She is opposed to Title IX, which prohibits sex discrimination in education for K-12 schools. She thinks there should be separate bathrooms for transgender students and the public needs to get involved with school district meetings to speak up and make any changes. The government has all the funds.

Tim said with Title IX we have to allow bathroom use to people the way they identify with sexually. Arizona state doesn’t fund schools well. Most of the funding comes from the Federal Government with 20 million a year allocated for special needs, low income and nutrition programs. He is not in a position to offer his personal opinion on this issue and has to protect the district and follow the law. The state must pass a law to change the current standards. HB2161, Parental Rights; schools; and educational records ended last year. The district can’t control transgender behavior, correct behavior starts in the home. The state will take away funding if laws are not complied with. There are 11,000 students in the Yuma School District with less than 1 percent of the population identifying as transgender. There are two transgender students in the Yuma District. All districts have full time licensed social workers on campus that are fully vetted, have credentials and must have a masters degree. Any physical abuse will be reported to the police or CPS. There are police officers in uniform on every campus with weekly training sessions. The district is currently looking for a Director of Health and Safety. Tim said that kids don't shower anymore at the schools except wrestlers. Boys competing in girls sports must provide evidence to be considered. Teachers hands are tied and they are expected to wear many hats over and above teaching required subjects. One Tea party member mentioned that the schools have us over a barrel and what about the rights of straight students, should they sue? Where do you draw the line?

Tim and Christy wanted to bring up the positive things that have been implemented in our Yuma district. Christy said the Union District High School has good people and curriculum and teachers that support students. Tim said 2400 students graduated this year, 92 to 95 % graduation rate, The drop out rate was 2.35 % compared to 8 % for the state and 70 % are going on to college. There are 78 different programs and many students can go to work now. They also have Work Force Alliance Programs with business professionals coming to classes for Enrichment Days. They advise students on job skills, leadership, proper attire for interviews and resume preparation. Military ROTC is also on campus.

Neil presented his updated list of Forbidden Information. Items of particular interest are highlighted in red. Take a little time to listen to these very informative videos. The last thought on this flyer says It's time to LEAD, FOLLOW, OR GET OUT OF THE WAY! It's no longer may God Save the Queen, It's May God Save America!

Jim informed us that Ruth's husband Rich passed away this week. There will be a Celebration of Life scheduled for October 25th with time and place to be announced. He and Ruth had many friends that are Snowbirds so she wanted to wait until they were back in Yuma to have a service for him. Rich is now with the Lord and in peace. Please continue to offer prayers for Ruth as she goes through this difficult time. Gilbert made a motion that the Tea party does something special other than flowers and spend up to $100.00. Neil seconded and the motion passed. John contributed additional personal funds to be added to the amount authorized.

Gilbert made a motion to adjourn our small group at 7:35 PM, Neil seconded and we all left so much more informed about what's going on at the Yuma Union High School District.

Respectfully Submitted, Nikki Pollard, Secretary

from: Will The Left Finally Admit It's Driven By Mental Illness

By Issues & Insights Editorial Board

For decades we've wondered what causes the Democrats and progressives to ignore facts, flog blatantly false narratives, take irrational policy positions, engage in megaphone politics, censor, bully and project their corruption and bad faith onto their opponents. Could they really be as unbalanced as they appear to be?

Turns out they are.

At least that's what the science says. And we know how much the left loves its science.

A research paper published in March tells an interesting story. "Understanding left-wing authoritarianism" explores "relations to the dark personality traits, altruism, and social justice commitment." In an interview last month with PsyPost, a psychology and neuroscience news website, the authors said they had "introduced a new contribution to the literature on dark personality traits, coining the term dark-ego-vehicle principle."

"According to this principle, individuals with dark personalities such as high narcissistic and psychopathic traits are attracted to certain forms of political and social activism which they can use as a vehicle to satisfy their own ego-focused needs instead of actually aiming at social justice and equality."

As it turns out – and this should be to absolutely no one's surprise – "certain forms of activism might provide them with opportunities for positive self-presentation and displays of moral superiority, to gain social status, to dominate others, and to engage in social conflicts and aggression to satisfy their need for thrill seeking.”

Now we have an explanation for the Democratic Squad, Antifa, global warming foolishness, the disturbing obsession with wokeness and destruction, censorship, forced compliance, and a dictator’s lust for dominance on the left.

The question that logically follows is this: Do the dark personality traits affect only the fringes of the Democratic Party, or is the entire political left fueled by derangement? The only reasonable answer is the left is mad to its rotten core. But then we’ve known that since the 2016 election, when Trump Derangement Syndrome ripped through the Democratic Party and its many collaborative groups.

But it was merely confirmation of what we first suspected then were convinced of for many years before that: The worst in our society, the unstable, the cranks, the neurotic, the egomaniacs who feed on attention, the ruthless power seekers are drawn to the Democratic Party.

We anticipate that our detractors will say we are overgeneralizing, lumping all Democrats and progressives into a cohort that the researchers suggest are extremists.

We argue that it’s self-evident that the entire Democratic Party – along with its media operatives, well-heeled financial contributors, activists, and many of its voters – has become an extremist group. Sure, there are some known Democratic moderates (they are an endangered species) and not all who vote Democratic are fanatics. But they are outliers, and are therefore inconsequential to the left-wing authoritarian machine.

With all due respect to the authors of “Understanding left-wing authoritarianism,” their research has broken no new ground. Nearly 80 years ago, in the 10th chapter of the “The Road To Serfdom,” Austrian economist Friedrich Hayek described the state of today’s Democratic Party when he explained Why the Worst Get on Top. “Bad men,” said Hayek, have no inhibitions about running other peoples’ lives. It is “the unscrupulous and uninhibited,” he wrote in 1944, who “are likely to be more successful in a society tending toward totalitarianism.”

In our current era, “the unscrupulous and uninhibited” – those whose behavior is fueled by their “dark personality traits” – are attracted to a left-wing bloc that is tending toward totalitarianism. It is undeniable that the Democratic Party has become a moveable asylum.

What say ye, Man of Valor?

from: Is Genocide Too Powerful a Word?

By Eileen F. Toplansky

Genocide is a potent word. It refers to the decimation of an entire group. It results in destruction on a massive scale. It defies the imagination even though we have often witnessed it in the 20th century.

To most people, it is the concerted evisceration of a particular group, whether they be Jews annihilated by the Nazis, Uyghurs by the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), or the Ukrainians by Stalin. Of the latter, the term Holodomor comes to mind. It was a manmade famine that affected the Soviet republic of Ukraine from 1932 to 1933, causing mass starvation in grain-growing regions. In acknowledgment of its scale, the famine is often called the Holodomor, a term derived from the Ukrainian words for hunger (holod) and extermination (mor)."

These events need to be understood as the prelude to global actions that are now convulsing the world and whose ultimate goal is the destruction of human life.

Often begun as a bid for the welfare of humanity, these decisions must be regarded as the "alibis of tyrants" with resultant deadly consequences.

Consider the dictates that have caused and will continue to cause food shortages and starvation. In his 2014 book titled The War on Humans, Wesley Smith wrote,

The antihuman side of today's environmental movement has many manifestations.

The deep ecology movement that would decimate human population to under one billion.
The global warning alarmists' tyrannical and anti-growth tendencies.
The ... notion of granting legal and enforceable legal 'rights' to nature.

At the 2021 United Nations Climate Change Conference, Sri Lankan President Gotabaya Rajapaksa gave a speech bragging about his country's move toward sustainable agriculture. Less than a year later, millions of Sri Lanka citizens faced starvation...all a result of his disastrous agricultural and environmental policies.

In the Netherlands, farmers express fury at government drives to tackle nitrogen pollution t through a major reduction in numbers of pigs, cattle, and chickens.

In Ireland, geologist Ian Plimer has criticized the move for Ireland to cull 200,000 head of cattle in a bold effort to meet climate targets. Mr. Plimer said leaders telling primary producers what to do "can only end in disaster" akin to the Irish potato famine, where a third of the Irish population perished.

Here in the U.S., under the guise of conservation, acres of usable farm land are now being expropriated for green deals.

Each leftist/Marxist maneuver dovetails with another.

Consider transgenderism. Allegedly, it is meant to show compassion for young people who may be confused about their sexual identity. Yet it encompasses the use of drugs that render the recipients sterile. It involves the surgical removal of reproductive body parts so that procreation is no longer possible.

Furthermore, the erasure of modern appliances, which have made life so superior in America, is now being touted as good for the planet — the well-being of people be damned.

Daniel Greenfield aptly states that "environmentalism is just genocide misspelled."

Consider the embrace of ideas meant to indoctrinate young children so they can no longer think critically. Instead, they become fodder for the elites, who now deem them as beasts of burden for their own use.

Every day, we see American colleges and universities replicate these types of behavior that censor and punish thinking people.

And yet, as the need to hold two jobs becomes more necessary in America in order to make ends meet, there is now a mandate to begin education earlier than ever — all under the guise of helping American families, or, dare I say, controlling their children at a very early age, thus mimicking what the communists do.

Of course, the COVID debacle is the most glaring example of pushing the genocide needle. Increased suicides among youngsters, actual health ticking bombs that lie in wait to explode, and the deaths of millions of people worldwide are conveniently ignored. Moreover, adverse reactions could have been prevented with the use of certain medications that were deliberately held back.

How does one explain the total blackout by the media elites so that there are still people who believe the WHO and CDC, who repeatedly lie and mislead concerning the millions of adverse reactions, never-ending health issues, and abnormal death rates from the COVID jabs? Connect the dots, dear reader.

The pharmaceutical companies knew full well the dangers of the COVID jab. Doctors were prohibited from disseminating so-called disinformation even though there was ample documentation that certain medications such as ivermectin could mitigate and prevent illness.

Sadly, history informs us that these are the perfect ingredients for calls to genocide. After all, according to Hollywood guru Jane Fonda, white men are responsible for environmental disasters.

Racism has come roaring back, and this time, the "other," or those to be despised, are Caucasian males. This kills two birds with one stone. Males are no longer important; thus, they are to be eradicated, and whites need to be obliterated because they are a blight on society.

These attacks are subsets of an ideology that encompasses every aspect of our lives. Understanding this is the first step to fighting what will indubitably harm us.

Stop scaring our kids to death

By Steve Moore -- BizPac Review

As nearly every standardized test is showing, our schools are doing an abysmal job teaching kids how to read or do math. In some cases, kids graduating from high school can barely read their diplomas.

But the schools are wildly succeeding with their climate change indoctrination program. When I speak to kids on high school and college campuses and ask what the greatest threat is to their generation, the answer isn't China's aggression. It isn't a drug abuse problem that is becoming the leading killer of our children. It isn't the failed schools or the corrupt government or the more routine violations of freedom of speech. It isn't the $32 trillion national debt soon headed to $50 trillion. (I always remind the kids, I won't be paying for this Mount Everest-sized debt burden. YOU will.)

No, they almost all raise their hands and moan that they are most worried about global warming or "climate change." We are raising a generation with millions of Greta Thunbergs. A Daily Telegraph poll found that more than half of teenagers surveyed believe that the world "may end in their lifetime" because of climate change. No one has ever told them that the climate has been changing for as long as the planet has existed. They've apparently never heard of the ice ages. The earth has gone through centuries of warming — and that was before air conditioning, which the climate czars want to take away from us to combat warming. Figure that one out.

I'm not here to argue about "the science" of global warming. What I do know is it's only "settled science" because anyone who dares question the "experts" is written off as crazy or a quack. Meanwhile, the people who warned us about "the population bomb," nuclear winter, mass starvation, running out of energy, global cooling and a future so polluted that everyone would have to wear gas masks in cities, are telling us to just trust them as they are busy at work erecting a multitrillion-dollar climate change industrial complex that revolves around our planetary savior — the windmill.

But scaring the bejesus out of our kids to score political points is a reprehensible practice. Our school kids are being terrorized with misinformation. This, in turn, is leading to all sorts of maladies, including a rise in teen depression, suicide, lower productivity and drug addiction.

Worst of all, we are seeing the opposite of a population bomb. We are experiencing one of the most severe birth dearths in American history. The birth rate is plummeting and no surprise. Who wants to bring kids into a world that will be uninhabitable in 50 years?

Psychologists are attributing these dysfunctions to a new syndrome called "eco-anxiety." It's a fear that Mother Earth is going to punish us in a brutal way — and very soon.

The irony of all this is that today's children and teens are inheriting a living standard, a cleaner planet, and a level of goods and services and technologies and medical care that is far superior to anything anyone in history — even the richest kings and queens — had access to even 100 years ago. If kids think climate change is worrisome, they should try dealing with the bubonic plague, which killed one-third of Europe's population, or polio or tuberculosis — or fending off barbarians or working 60 hours a week in a coal mine.

If my parents were part of the “greatest generation,” living through two world wars and a great depression, then this must be the psychotic generation. Are they to blame? No, we — their parents — are. We are the ones who have passively sat by as the Left turned our kids into neurotic Green New Dealers. Death to the machine. Turn the lights out. No more cars. No more flush toilets or washing machines. What’s next to save the planet? Euthanasia?

That’s what happens when you teach your children that they aren’t inheriting the earth, but a fiery hell.
