Dr. Fauci - Drinking inside bars is one of the most dangerous things you can do now

Even if bar-goers don't get a serious case of the illness themselves, they can pass their coronavirus infection on to others who may not be as lucky.

"If a person gets infected, they may not be symptomatic, but they could pass it to someone else, who passes it to someone else, who then makes someone's grandmother or grandfather, sick uncle, or a leukemic child on chemotherapy, get sick and die," Fauci said. Read more

Michigan Gov. closing indoor seating in bars in parts of the state, including one brewpub in East Lansing near Michigan State University which has been linked to about 140 infections.

. . . Gov. Whitmer said in a news release that the outbreak tied to Harper's Brewpub is not an isolated incident, and her order covers the state's largest cities, including Detroit, Lansing and Grand Rapids. Upticks in COVID-19 cases have been seen in other bars in Michigan and other states such as Florida and Texas.

Other states have seen harsher restrictions on bars to fight the coronavirus. Florida banned alcohol consumption in bars on June 26, and California Gov. Gavin Newsom has closed bars in seven counties, including Los Angeles. Read more

Indiana delays lifting capacity limits on bars, restaurants

Indiana will keep capacity limits in place for restaurants, bars and entertainment venues because of worries about a possible increase in coronavirus cases across the state. Read more
