St. Matthew's Church

To My Church Family at St. Matthew's in Kunkletown,

I am not, like many others, a big fan of change. I like the comfortable, the known, the familiar. But what I tend to forget is that everything once was new.

I grew up in a Catholic church but decided as a young adult that that was not the place for me. As I was planning my first marriage and wasn't attending church, I went to an Episcopal church because it was "Catholic-lite." I could walk in and be familiar with the service. I was at that church for the next 15 years.

Then, Pastor Wil (just plain Wil—well, Wilbert—to me back then) literally walked back into my life (a block and a half to be exact). He attended the Episcopal church with me very briefly but made it clear that was not the church for him. So, we started looking around and landed on a nondenominational church. Talk about change! There wasn't one thing that was like any church I had ever attended—from the lack of pews to the music and stage. I was nervous but excited.

Wil and I became members, were married in that church, and stayed for four years. This church opened my eyes to what church could be like, but the cliques and teachings of the pastor did not align with where we wanted to be. God put Pastor Ken Ogden in our lives through Boy Scouts. We started to attend Peoples EC Church and, as you know, the rest is history.

Side note: I attended Peoples as a very small girl when they had a bus that drove around Franklin Township and picked the children up. I thought this would be the church that I would spend the rest of my life at. God's plan was not my plan. More change.

With my transition to St. Matthew's EC Church, I was uncomfortable, sad, and unsure—not of the people, just of something different. Getting to know the ins and outs, feeling like I belong. Starting over.

But through every season of change, I've come to see that while I may not always choose the path, God always leads it. Each move, each new church, each uncomfortable beginning has been His way of shaping my faith and drawing me closer to Him. Change can feel like loss, but it's also God's invitation to trust His lead—to believe that He's already waiting for us in the next chapter. I don't always understand His timing, but I'm learning that His plan is always better than my comfort zone.

And now, I can honestly say how grateful and happy I am to be here at St. Matthew's. What once felt uncertain has become home. I feel God's presence in this place and in the people around me. I know He has led me exactly where I'm meant to be—and I am so thankful for this new chapter.

Christ's Blessing to You,

Tammy Hoffman
