Letter from Pastor Rick

One of the advantages of growing up in a small town of 3,000 and attending a high school with a graduation class of 130 is that one can know many people. Although I could not name all my classmates after these many years, I could in my younger days recite the names without fail.

At my last class reunion I got to connect with some terrific people who I had not seen since high school graduation. Even though we had all aged, there was still a great sense of connected camaraderie. The memories and shared experiences, although decades old now, still seemed fresh as the room was filled with wonderful laughter and conversation. I came away from that event considering the blessings of important relationships. If I could go back to Jr high school and start fresh, knowing what I know now, I would definitely focus more on developing and pouring energy into relationships. I can't go back, and neither can you, but we can start where we are and we can make more of an effort to invest in quality relationships. Let me give you two words that will help you build better relationships.

The first is VALUE. It all begins here. The question we all need to ask is how much do I value people? How much do I value my sister or my brother or my mom, my dad? How much do I value my mate? How much do I value my classmate or my co-worker?

If we were more conscious of the value of the people around us, perhaps we would react and respond differently. That very familiar verse in the Bible, John 3:16, tells us a lot about value. "For God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him shall not perish but have eternal life." That shows value. God valued people enough to make a way for them to have abundant life.

Some of the main sticking points we are dealing with in the United States political and cultural landscape really come down to valuing people. Race, abortion, and an up-tick in crime are just a few of those issues which spark intense debate. But what is rarely brought to the table during discussions surrounding these topics is the importance of valuing people. A Christians the starting point in any of these discussions must be the sanctity of life. God tells us to value life. If one believes that all mankind is created in God's image with value and worth then how we approach the difficult topics in our nation will be different.

See, when you value something, you protect it, you care for it, you keep it safe. You don't take it for granted. Just imagine valuing other in that way.

The second word is HONOR

We can't get to honor unless we value. But Honor is the obvious sequence.

In Romans 12:10, the Apostle Paul writes Be devoted to one another in brotherly love. Honor one another above yourselves.

The word honor comes a Greek word that means - value, respect, highly esteem. It means to treat as special, as receiving much more weight than anything else.

When you honor someone you give weight to their position, their ideals, their preferences.

I wonder what would happen to our spouses and our children if we would start to show them honor? Wives, what would happen to your husband if you started to show him honor? Husbands, what would transpire in your wife if you chose to honor her? Students, what transformation would happen in your parents and your teachers if you would show them honor? Honor lifts up. Honor encourages.

Many times people have trouble honoring others because they feel the other person doesn't deserve it. However, the truth about honor is this. Respect is earned, but honor is given. Honor is something that we freely give.

Honor is what Jesus gave to us when He went to the cross. In this passage of scripture "1 Corinthians 6:19-20 Do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit, who is in you, whom you have received from God? You are not your own; you were bought at a price..." the word price comes from the same Greek word that is translated many times as honor.

Jesus freely paid a heavy price to purchase us or redeem us back to a right relationship with the Father. We really didn't deserve it, but that high price Jesus gave was given as an act of honoring we who are created in God's image.

How would our relationships change if we decided to give honor and bring value to others? How might the news stories change if every segment of our society started to practice just these two things, considering others valuable and giving them honor?

Passionate Spirituality: Unlocking the Key to Church Growth and Personal Transformation

In his book The 3 Colors of Your Spirituality, Christian A. Schwarz offers a transformative approach to spiritual growth that emphasizes passion, balance, and personal connection with God. His groundbreaking research, which examines over 60,000 churches, demonstrates that church growth is not driven by marketing strategies or numerical goals, but by the spiritual quality of the individuals in the pews. When individuals experience deep spiritual passion, this energy fuels not only their personal transformation but also the vibrancy and health of the entire church community.

Schwarz challenges the commonly held view of spirituality, which often focuses solely on the personal relationship between the believer and God. While this individual connection is vital, Schwarz argues that it is incomplete if it does not also influence other areas of life. True spiritual growth involves more than just a personal devotion to God; it leads to a transformation in how we live, interact with others, and engage with our communities. Schwarz stresses that real spiritual growth is not about accumulating more material possessions or seeking static states of peace but is about a continuous, dynamic process of intensifying love for God and deepening personal transformation.

One of the core concepts in The 3 Colors of Your Spirituality is the idea of radical balance. Spirituality is often misunderstood as a state of mediocrity or lack of passion. However, Schwarz redefines spiritual balance as a combination of deep passion and mature faith. It's about knowing your personal spiritual style—whether contemplative, energetic, or somewhere in between—and nurturing that style to strengthen your relationship with God. By embracing your unique spiritual style, you can grow in passion and authenticity, resulting in a more profound and fulfilling faith.

Schwarz also highlights the importance of the communal and social aspects of spirituality. A vital part of Christian life is participating in holistic small groups and fostering loving relationships with others. These elements are essential for developing passionate spirituality, as they allow believers to support each other in their faith journeys and collectively fulfill the biblical command to “love your neighbor.” Strong, spiritually vibrant churches are those that foster these communal qualities, creating environments where believers can grow both individually and as a part of a larger, interconnected body of faith.

The book also confronts the dangers of nominalism—when faith becomes lukewarm or complacent. Schwarz warns that churches and individuals are at risk of spiritual stagnation when their faith lacks passion. Jesus' warning in Revelation 3:15-16 underscores this message: “I wish that you were either cold or hot, but because you are lukewarm, I am about to spit you out of my mouth.” Schwarz emphasizes that a vibrant, passionate spirituality is a mark of healthy Christian living. The key to overcoming nominalism is a renewed commitment to spiritual growth, which involves both a deepening of personal faith and an active engagement with the larger church community.

Ultimately, Schwarz's message is one of hope and transformation: by identifying and embracing your personal spiritual style, growing in it with passion, and connecting with others in a balanced, supportive way, you can experience both personal and church-wide renewal. This process of nurturing passion, balance, and maturity is the pathway to overcoming spiritual complacency and creating a thriving, dynamic church community.

In this series of newsletter articles, we will focus on how to ignite passionate spirituality within our own church. We will uncover practical steps to help us grow in our own spiritual styles, deepen our relationships with one another, and cultivate an environment of transformative faith. As we embark on this journey, we will discover how passionate spirituality is the key to both personal and communal transformation, leading to a vibrant church that thrives in the love and mission of Christ.
