

Gray's Driving School would like to congratulate you on successfully completing your behind-the-wheel portion of driver education. I want to remind parents that all students under the age of 18 must get an Eligibility Certificate from their child's high school before going to the DMV for the Learner's Permit test. A Parent/Guardian (only) can obtain this certificate. The parent must bring the Certificate of Completion to their child's high school to prove that the student has completed their driver education requirement. The school will then check the student's grades and issue the Eligibility Certificate. If you have any questions regarding this certificate, you should contact the Student Services or Guidance Office at your child's high school.

See the 5 documents needed to take the Permit Test:

Documents required for North Carolina Learner's Permit testing:

- 1. Original Birth Certificate*
- 2. Original Social Security Card*
- 3. Certificate of Completion (obtained from Lake Norman Driving Academy)*
- 4. Eligibility Certificate (obtained from the student's high school)*
- 5. Proof of residency (examples: Passport, school records, hunting or fishing license, medical records, social security card with current address)*

Please Note: Driver's Eligibility Certificates expire (30) days after the date they are issued.

Additional Reminder: Remember to study the DMV Handbook. All test questions are taken from the DMV Handbook.
