

Druidry

encourages us to love widely and deeply. It fosters:

Love of the Land, the Earth, the Wild
- reverence for Nature

Love of Peace Druids were traditionally peace-makers, and still are: each ceremony begins with Peace to the Quarters, there is a Druid's Peace Prayer, and Druids plant Peace Groves

Love of Beauty The Druid path cultivates the Bard, the Artist Within, and fosters creativity

Love of Justice Druids were judges, and law-makers. Traditionally Druids are interested in restorative, not punitive, justice

Love of Story & Myth Druidry recognises and uses the power of mythology and stories

Love of History & Reverence for the Ancestors
Druidry recognises the forming power of the Past

Love of Trees Druids today plant trees and Sacred Groves, and study treelore

Love of Stones Druids today build stone circles, collect stones and work with crystals

Love of Truth Druid Philosophy is a quest for Wisdom

Love of Animals Druidry sees animals as sacred, and teaches sacred animal lore

Love of the Body Druidry sees the body and sexuality as sacred

Love of the Sun, Moon, Stars & Sky

Druid Starlore, embodied in the old stories and in the stone circles, teaches a love for the Universe

Love of Each Other Druidry fosters the magic of relationship, of community

Love of Life Druidry encourages celebration and full commitment to life - it is not a spirituality that wants us to escape from life
