Boise Farmers Market plans move to permanent home

By BRAD CARLSON
Capital Press

Boise Farmers Market organizers and vendors plan their annual winter session Saturdays from Nov. 7 to Dec. 19 at the nonprofit's new home in the Idaho Botanical Garden complex.

Since 2019, the market has held its regular April-October sessions on ground leased year to year at 15th Street and Shoreline Drive downtown, amid commercial buildings. The winter market has been held at several locations, from a senior center and a fraternal organization's headquarters to a former bus station.

The redeveloped site at the Botanical Garden, in east Boise on the east side of Penitentiary Road north of Warm Springs Avenue, provides a permanent home for the Boise Farmers Market's regular and winter seasons.

"Permanence was always the goal" associated with the move, BFM executive director Amber Beierle said.

Market and Botanical Garden leaders have been working together. The garden's ongoing expansion includes the farmers market site, and a new parking lot and several garden and park amenities nearby. The immediate area includes state-owned buildings and a historic district.

"This is where we are taking up roots, and no matter what happens with construction, we will be in this district," Beierle said.

Construction continues in Boise area, including in downtown and points east. The farmers market's upcoming move frees space on Shoreline for other uses, increases parking capacity and convenience for market participants, and better positions the market for current and future operations, she said.

Shoreline property owners and occupants have been "wonderful" to work with over the years, Beierle said.

Along with room to grow, electricity and on-site storage are among features of the new site, she said. Fewer generators will be needed.

"One of our goals to be as green as we possibly can," Beierle said.

Winter market features are slated to include a heated tent with room for 40 to 60 vendors, and outside space for 10 to 20, she said.

Vendor and board member Wilder Jones said the new site will be farther from people coming from the west — which will be an adjustment, though the move has been anticipated for some time.

The new site has well-suited infrastructure and is compatible with adjacent uses, he said. "We have good relations with the host."

Farmers markets are "a meeting of urban and rural," Beierle said.

The market for the April-October season may expand the free delivery program it operates in Boise city limits, she said.

A building for the market could be constructed eventually, in partnership with the Botanical Garden, Beierle said.

ISDA lab busy with bird flu testing

By BRAD CARLSON
Capital Press

Bird flu testing provided substantial new activity for the Idaho State Department of Agriculture Animal Health Laboratory in the fiscal year that ended June 30.

Staff at the east Boise lab — which ISDA opened in late 2022 to replace outdated smaller facilities — performed 3,530 polymerase chain reaction tests for the avian influenza virus in fiscal 2026 compared to none a year earlier. In the first two months of the current fiscal year, July and August, staff conducted 1,223 PCR tests for the virus in bird or dairy samples.

The ISDA animal health lab is authorized to conduct avian influenza PCR testing as a result of passing a USDA National Animal Health Laboratory Network audit to become certified in June 2025. The nationally coordinated system comprises around 60 federal, state and university-affiliated laboratories.

The tests have primarily been on milk samples from Idaho dairies, said Dan Salmi, ISDA laboratories bureau chief.

"Previously we were sending all of these samples out of state, which takes a lot longer," up to about five days, he said.

Now, with in-house testing, the state veterinarian receives results much faster — a plus for controlling the spread of the virus, Salmi said.

"If a dairy cow tests positive for this virus, we don't want to bring it into Idaho and we don't want it to move around Idaho," he said. "This surveillance is really important for dairy producers."

Based on the first few months of the current fiscal year, bird flu sample numbers have increased significantly from the previous year, Salmi said.

"We are capable of conducting more tests if need be, based on increased efficiency and new equipment" gained in the past year, he said.

The animal health lab conducts many types of tests. According to ISDA, its primary objective has been to support veterinarians and livestock producers, the Idaho departments of Fish and Game and Health and Welfare, USDA and its Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.
