Idaho approves Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer recharge projects

By BRAD CARLSON

The Idaho Water Resource Board has funded two projects designed to increase capacity to recharge the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer.

The board at a meeting in Rexburg Aug. 7 approved about $8 million for a recharge basin about a mile southeast of Shelley in the Snake River Valley Irrigation District, and about $6.3 million combined for two recharge infiltration basins in the Blackfoot-based Bingham Groundwater District.

IWRB since 2014 has operated a recharge program on the Eastern Snake Plain between irrigation seasons.

The approved projects would increase capacity in the Upper Snake River Valley — a longtime goal — and help the board meet a recently increased annual volume goal, according to a news release.

The legislature in 2025 passed Senate Concurrent Resolution 110, which raised targeted annual average by 40%, from 250,000 acre-feet to 350,000. SCR 110 supported the board's efforts to address water supply challenges in the region as well as a November 2024 settlement agreement between ESPA groundwater districts and a coalition of surface water users with senior rights, according to the resolution's purpose statement.

Also in 2025, lawmakers approved an ongoing annual appropriation of $30 million earmarked to help water users meet the terms of the settlement agreement, according to the release. Funding for the recently approved recharge projects is from this appropriation.

"We want to take advantage of every opportunity, when there are excess flows in the river, to put those excess flows in the ground," Bingham Ground Water District Manager Alan Jackson told Capital Press.

The project IWRB funded in the Bingham district would be operated and managed for the board by district staff, he said.

District leaders have worked with the board to find sites suited for adding recharge capacity upstream of American Falls Reservoir, and "we want to have a good working relationship with the board and support their efforts."

Bingham Ground Water District project

The board approved two 32-acre recharge infiltration basins on one site. The project includes buying a 110-acre parcel, excavating two basins, building a dedicated delivery pipeline, improving a canal, and buying grass seed and irrigation infrastructure for construction of nine-foot berms around the site perimeter, according to the release.

A groundwater monitoring plan will be created, and submitted to the state Department of Environmental Quality for approval.

"We want to have it in place and ready to use next spring in the event recharge water is available," assuming arrangements and agreements are completed, Jackson said.

The two basins are expected to return about 67 cubic feet per second into the aquifer when water is available, according to the release. Flow of 1 cfs over 24 hours produces about 2 acre-feet.

Snake River Valley Irrigation District project

IWRB approved a recharge basin project at the site of a former sugar factory. An 85-acre infiltration basin would be created with nine-foot earthen berms around the site perimeter, according to the release.

The district would also build a pipeline of 3,080 lineal feet to move water from its canal half a mile away to the recharge site.

When recharge water is available, the site could send up to about 87 cfs into the aquifer.

Two groundwater monitoring wells would be built at the site to track water quality.

A groundwater monitoring plan will be created, and submitted to the DEQ for approval.

Idaho water board awards flood management grants

Capital Press

The Idaho Water Resource Board at its regular bimonthly meeting Aug. 7 in Rexburg approved 13 flood management grants for a total of $1.14 million combined.

State flood management grant proceeds help recipients pay for projects designed to repair resources damaged by floods, washouts and other issues, according to a news release.

IWRB each year awards around $1 million combined to eligible projects. The maximum for each project is $200,000. A 50% local match is required.

Eligible projects include repairing stream channels damaged by floods, repairing stream banks, improving stream channels, and work that reduces flood risk and helps to prevent floods.

The flood grant program is open to flood control, drainage, irrigation, and soil and water conservation districts; canal companies; and municipalities, counties and other public entities that may have incurred flood damage recently.

• Bear Lake Soil and Water Conservation District, Black Otter Canal, grant $125,000, total project cost $250,000

• City of Wallace, Canyon Creek project, grant $57,120, project cost $114,240.

• Clearwater Soil and Water Conservation District, Gold and Cow creek culvert replacement, grant $200,000, project cost $473,150.

• Flood Control District 9 (Big Wood River), Reach 14 restoration, grant $200,000, project cost $694,477.

• Flood Control District 10 (Boise River), Canyon Reach phase 2 project, $51,915 grant, $106,330 project cost.

• FCD 10, Jorgesen Sherrington property work, $47,500 grant, $97,500 project cost.

• FCD 10 Moiver side channel, $17,900 grant, $38,300 project cost.
