Idaho, Oregon onion crop holds up despite smoke

By BRAD CARLSON
Capital Press

Oregon State University Malheur Experiment Station director Stuart Reitz at a crop research field day July 8. (Brad Carlson/Capital Press)

Much of the onion crop looks good — for now — in the southeast Oregon-southwest Idaho growing region.

"Weather conditions until now have been pretty good," Oregon State University Malheur Experiment Station director Stuart Reitz said July 29.

Wildfire smoke settled into much of the region from middle through late July. Smoke reduces crop sun exposure and increases humidity, which can lead to potential disease problems, he said.

Onion fields in the area run the gamut of crop success so far, depending on location, Reitz said.

Some onion fields in the area look good, he said. Others have plants that are behind the typical maturation schedule due to early spring rains and planting delays that slowed crop progress and stand establishment. Some soilborne diseases took hold when plants were wet and at seedling stage.

"But around the valley there are some really nice looking onion fields," Reitz said. "We need to get them through the next month and a half."

Some farms are starting to harvest early maturing varieties, he said.

"We are seeing some Iris Yellow Spot Virus as in past years," said Reitz, an entomologist. Onion thrips, which are insect pests that damage plant leaves, transmit the virus.

"Thrips numbers have been there, and without winter, they got an earlier start," he said, referring to the unusually warm 2025-26 winter. "But they haven't been that extensive, so that's good."

Dyke Nagasaka's onion crop southeast of Weiser, Idaho, "looks very healthy," he said. "I don't see as much insect pressure, like thrips," he said. "I don't understand why.

"I have had it bad before," he said, referring to thrip pressure.

As for crop progress, "we are a little ahead of schedule," Nagasaka said. The season started wet, "then it got better. The later part of the season got extremely hot." Earlier, "some guys got hit by storms."

"The crop was in the mood to catch up there as we went through June," said Lyndon Johnson, sales development manager with Caldwell, Idaho-based seed supplier Crookham Co.

Since the smoke arrived, photosynthesis and the growth cycle slowed a bit as dew remained later in the mornings, he said July 31. Growers likely began stepping up fungicide programs.

Onions "look good," Idaho Onion Growers Association president Jarom Jemmett, who farms in the Notus-Parma area, said July 30. "Before the smoke, I would say we were a week ahead of schedule as far as sizing and maturation."

Quality "remains to be seen based on the smoke and how long it's going to last," he said.

Hailstorms affected some onion farms in southwest and central parts of the Treasure Valley, ruining leaves and halting plant growth, Jemmett said. A few affected growers pursued multi-peril insurance claims.

The crop approaches 20,000 acres — down a bit from 2025, which was "a pretty rough year for these guys" price-wise, Johnson said.

Most of the southeast Oregon-southwest Idaho harvest will occur in August. Fresh packing will continue through April.

It appears New Mexico and California onion crops are finishing a bit ahead of schedule, "which might be a marketing opportunity on the earlier end of our window," Jemmett said.

"And then, based on exports, we hope to maintain a strong market throughout our packing season," he said.

As the U.S. exports onions to Canada and Mexico, and some to Asia, domestic prices may benefit, Jemmett said.

Idaho CREP acres surge on water concerns

By BRAD CARLSON
Capital Press

Southern Idaho farm acres enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program will be substantially higher in the 2027 crop year, largely due to water supply concerns.

CREP, which started in 2006, is a partnership between the state and USDA's Farm Service Agency. Enrollees contract for 10 years to plant unirrigated vegetative cover. In exchange, they receive federal rental and sign-up incentive payments as well as a state match payment of up to 13% of the federal rental payment.

The Idaho Water Resource Board recently increased cost-share assistance to help reduce groundwater withdrawals from the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer.

Tight water supply is a factor in the jump in enrolled acres between 2026 and 2027 crop years, FSA Idaho state executive director Kevin Andrus said.

"Producers were able to see the shortcomings in the water year with the low snowpack early on, and some chose to take advantage of this tool to be able to conserve water," he said. "We are thankful for this tool to help protect and conserve our water resources in Idaho."

Newly enrolled Idaho CREP acres for the 2027 growing season total 6,394.48 compared to 227.2 in the year-earlier period, said state CREP manager Rob Sharpnack of the Soil and Water Conservation Commission. The federal fiscal year starts Oct. 1.

"We had a very successful enrollment this spring," he said. "We are very happy about that and are hoping to continue that."

Future enrollment periods hinge on extending or renewing the federal Farm Bill.

Idaho CREP acres already enrolled total around 9,620 as of the 2026 crop year, Sharpnack said. The total could increase to 16,015 based on spring 2026 enrollments.

At the Farm Service Agency, Andrus has a lower Idaho total for newly enrolled acres for the 2027 crop year — 2,107, the number accepted, approved and guaranteed.

Additional CREP acres have been accepted but not yet approved, he said. FSA county offices have until Sept. 30 to approve these acres.

Assuming all newly enrolled acres are accepted and the Idaho total moves to 16,015, "with a little luck and a good open enrollment period next year, those numbers will get better," Sharpnack said.

FALL GRASS SEEDS

(All bags 50#)

Later Orchardgrass CTD - $3.19 lb or $159.50 Bag
Excellent producer by itself and is great with Alfalfa… matures in sync with alfalfa.

Elephant Orchardgrass CTD - $3.29 lb or $164.50 Bag
Early maturing and quick rebound.

Pawnee Orchardgrass CTD - $3.24 lb or $162.00 Bag
Our "go to" dryland medium maturing orchard grass. Developed for drought and heavy grazing tolerance.

Fawn Tall Fescue - $1.89 lb or $94.50 Bag
(Endophyte Free) VVery high producer designed to put in that "tough ground." Very good in alkali and semi-drought areas.

Super Arid Tall Fescue - $2.24 lb or $112.00 Bag
(Endophyte free) Our best dryland pasture grass! Can take drought and keep on producing in some of the toughest ground. When you need more production than a wheat grass can deliver, this is it!

Johnson Festolium - $2.89 lb or $144.50 Bag
"I like this one." The answer for any tough ground. It's a fescue rye grass cross. Tough like fescue and big producer. Super palatable like rye grass. We sell to many customers in Montana, the Dakotas and Wyoming who love it.

Medium Red Clover Coated - $2.59 lb or $129.50 Bag
Medium Red Clover Non-Coated - $3.19 lb or $159.50 Bag
We love this clover because it lasts and lasts.

Meadow Brome - $3.04 lb or $152.00 Bag
The only brome choice. Higher forage yields and quality than smooth brome. More palatability. Stronger summer regrowth, rebounds quicker, very winter hardy.

Top Hat Timothy - $2.49 lb or $124.50 Bag
One of our favorites! Great producer, long-lasting, Plant this year, it will still be producing up to 29 years from now! Superior for hay or grazing, super palatable!

Reed's Canary Grass - $3.95 lb or $197.50 Bag

Ray's Perennial Ryegrass - $2.34 lb or $117.00 Bag
Sometimes new is better. This is not Granddad's ryegrass. Remarkable yields, superior feed quality. Fast to Germinate and establish. #1 in recent field trials! Super palatable and digestible.

Pasture Mix Special #7 - $2.64 lb or $132.00 Bag
A good all around mixture for those who like a mixture so that you have "season long" lush pasture. University Mix. 35% Orchard CTD, 30% Tall Fescue, 25% Rye Grass, 10% Annual Rye Grass

Pasture Mix Special #5 - $3.15 lb or $157.00 Bag
Similar to the #7 but a little more drought tolerant. A staple mix for decades! 35% Meadow Brome, 35% Orchard CTD, 30% Tall Fescue

Eric's Okie Dryland - $2.84 lb or $142.00 Bag
Need more production from your dryland pasture? This is it!!! A dryland alfalfa, dryland fescue, and a dryland orchard grass that will take a drought and heavy grazing!!! 20 % Creeper CTD Alfalfa, 30% Pawnee Orchard Grass CTD, 50% Super Arid Tall Fescue
