

My Vision

The government borrows money from the Bank of England based on the previous year's GDP. At the end of that year it replaces the borrowed money with funds generated by quantitative easing. This money would be used for a Sterling Bond whilst providing wage increases across the board based on the previous year's GDP figures to retain its value. The Sterling Bond would be an index-linked gilt (IG) locking in the rate of GDP to inflation/quantitative easing in one Bond thus maintaining the value.

This would ensure that our internal currency was the world's safest only to be affected by external currency markets.

I have a young family and want a better future for our children with a health and social care system second to none, police services to provide security, education that is fit for purpose and ecological sustainability. If you vote for me I will do my utmost to support local constituents with issues that concern us and convince fellow MPs that my vision should be taken seriously.

Please take time to look at my website which sets out my vision for the future and the changes I would like to see.

What did you notice first in the picture?

Canary Wharf or a homeless person? Surprisingly both have something in common but are worlds apart, I have worked in house renovation in the City of London for many years and have seen the enormous gap between the rich and the poor, those forced to fight for survival on the streets of our "great" capital. How can this be fair? Luxury apartments built and sold to foreign investors, only to sit unoccupied as assets to be realised at a later date. Neither will be able to vote on 12 December but you will!

Why Stuart McCutcheon?

I am standing in this election to make a difference by persuading a new government that there is a better way to raise capital and redistribute wealth more fairly to provide the funds we desperately need to invest in our country.

A capital storm is on the horizon, we need to act now!

As the fifth largest economy why are we borrowing so much? Because our tax receipts are not matching the rate of our expenditure hence the need to borrow in order to make up the deficit. The way that we do this at present is to use our GDP figures which is taking the growth generated by the economy to borrow against.

Let us think about what they are actually doing?

The country has worked hard and increased our asset value only to be told that the government now needs to borrow against it incurring further debt for generations to come.

Why should this continue when we have growth in the economy?

We are living in a global market economy where massive corporations and fat cats cream off GDP without contributing their fair share of tax in a broken system where 27 people currently possess as much wealth as 25% of the world's population.

So we need to look at financing our economy differently

We can do this by utilising GDP growth in a similar way to the Bank of England's quantitative easing process during the crash in 2007. The difference would be that the government would borrow to finance the economy from individual and business capital growth in turn for bonds. This approach would keep interest rates low and enable the government to adopt a fairer system of wealth distribution, thus releasing greater funding for our services and infrastructure programmes.

An attack on other parties' policies & the reasons why we need change

The financial services are becoming scared and I am concerned. It's rather like the movie "2012". I'm not sure which character I am; perhaps Woodrow Tracy Harrison in his camper van with the radio station screaming that the end is coming or John Paul Cusack whose book predicted it. We need to protect ourselves against what I define as "bad" capital and at the same time protect "good" capital.

What is the difference between them?

I consider bad capital to be that generated from short term investments gleaned from the company and not reinvested by way of expansion and job creation. It consumes good capital and globally has no loyalties. Good capital is that used for long term investments to improve productivity and provide more job opportunities. It is a loyal friend.

Our current market is exposed to the fast movement of bad capital

Compare it to the scenario of us using our computers without a firewall or antivirus system to protect our data. It would be foolish to do so and most of us are sensible and put protection in place. We therefore need to put a firewall around our country that can filter out bad capital and allow us to retain good capital.

I am the only candidate who is campaigning from this angle

The Green Party want to raise taxes to support their policies. The Labour Party's policies would lead to excessive borrowing because tax receipts could not cover the level of spending they propose and would incur massive debt. The Conservative Party wants to open the country up to cheap goods; disastrous for manufacturing as it would affect the balance of payments and lead to more borrowing to pay for it. The Liberal Democrats want to keep us in Europe thinking it to be a safety cushion should anything go drastically wrong with the economy. The EU, however, is no longer the stable institution it used to be.
