So often we have a wildly fantastic idea for our writing but struggle with putting it together structurally so it flows naturally. Even more so with poetry. When you have a collection of poems that have been penned over time that touch on a range of emotions and vantage points, it can be hard to decide how best to progress and bring your collection together.

If you are looking to get published or you simply want professional guidance on how your writing is progressing, looking at the structural and developmental progress of your collection, our manuscript critique service can help.

Our Editor will read your manuscript and prepare a broad, comprehensive assessment. You will receive specific advice on how to develop a stronger narrative, better pacing, and more engaging cohesion.

Our Editor will also identify the common threads throughout your poetry that will help bind your collection together. Because the manuscript critique is a big picture analysis of your manuscript, it should be done prior to the editing stages of your work.
