CEDRIC LAMONTE DEAN (born June 14, 1972) is an American author, activist, and educator. He is perhaps best known for writing "How to Stop the Killing," "How to Save Our Children from Crime Drugs and Violence," and "How to Stop Your Children from Going to Prison." Dean is founder of Safeguard Atone Validate Educate (SAVE), which is a national morality-centered movement dedicated to preventing lawlessness and building character in misguided minds, and Save a Child Month, an annual (New Year) initiative to make young people job-ready instead of jail-ready.

EARLY LIFE AND BACKGROUND

Cedric Dean was born in Charlotte, N.C., to a single-parent Christian mother.

At 13-years-old, Dean was re-birthed into a new world of crime, drugs, guns, and violence. He had a short-lived stint as an armed robber of drug dealers. When he was sixteen, he was charged and convicted of robbery with a dangerous weapon, and he spent five and a half years in prison.

Eleven months after his release in February 1994, Dean was charged in a six count federal indictment for Conspiracy to Distribute Crack Cocaine and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. He was convicted of the charges May 20, 1996 and sentenced to Life plus five years.

AUTHOR

Seven years into his second prison term, Dean was placed in a Special Housing Unit, where he was confined in a cell for 23 hours a day. With a lot of free time on his hands, he read an urban street novel entitled: "B-More-Careful" by Shannon Holmes, who had also served time in prison. He enjoyed the book so much that, upon completion of reading it, he started writing a tale of his own: "For the Love of the Streets," Dean's first literary work, which was published in 2008.

"Mine is the tale of someone whose faith in God, willingness to change, strength, and infatuation to overcome barriers, impediments, and unusual odds can be a blueprint for anyone on the path of (premature) death and self-destruction," Dean wrote in "How to Save Our Children from Crime Drugs and Violence," a self-help book published in 2010. "Cedric Dean has himself crossed over the threshold of crime and violence to become the advocate for responsive change in our youth," said author Eugene Linwood, founder of 'Reaching Out Beyond Bars.' "I have proudly watched him mentor, teach and apply tough love to redirect the pain, fear and uncertainty of young prisoners into courage, dedication and commitment. Cedric has done what many people have tried to do with our youth but you must walk the walk and talk the talk."

When Dean entered the literary arena in 2002, he had very little to look forward to, serving Life without parole. He read books on writing and studied the styles of established writers. He first enrolled in an inmate-taught Creative Writing Class. He completed that and went on to eventually teach a writing course of his own. "I was also not supposed to become a teacher and transform gangsters into gentlemen inside of prisons," Dean wrote, "but I made a promise to the people who helped me along the way that I would help others who are living like I used to live. I didn't think it was possible for someone with a past like mine to be given the opportunity to teach anyone anything." It was. And Dean's teachings have helped hundreds of prisoners obtain their General Education Diploma and thousands more change their lives for the better. "His ability to focus his energy in a positive way has set an excellent example for many of the younger inmates who look to him as a leader," Lance Cole, a Federal Bureau of Prisons Supervisor of Education, said about "Dean's infectious energy and enthusiasm."

SOCIAL REFORMER IN PRISON

Around 2004 aged 32 Dean took a teaching job at the United States Penitentiary (USP) in Coleman, Florida. This assignment was pivotal: it introduced him to character education methods, to psychoanalysis, to activism (he served as the executive director of NAACP Prison Branch 5135), and also to taking direct action to bring about social change. The work and experience with the NAACP were without question very significant in the development of Cedric's own ideas and direction, and all from a low-profiled teaching appointment.

Cedric's early specialization was prisoner analysis, in which his interest and research expanded following his transfer to USP Atwater (in California) in 2005, where he also engaged in activist work and teaching GED, and later life skills.

Cedric's early work focused primarily on testing and extending Gandhi's theory in relation to the effect of Truth and Love as supreme values of human psychology, with a strong emphasis on how society affects childhood maturation. This research entailed detailed social activism and awakened him to the doctrine of non-violence and love, notably conducted in early 2006 with grieving gang members of the CRIPS, whose infamous co-founder, Stanley "Tookie" Williams, had been executed. These experiences especially helped Cedric to realize that Gandhi's ideas lacked vital urban criminal dimensions, and provided a key for his 'biopsychosocial' perspective.

Cedric subsequently moved to four other United States Penitentiaries, continuing his focus on prisoner welfare, and eventually expanding his concentration to child welfare, and also created Save a Child Month in 2012 to address juvenile delinquency, treat trauma and mental illness. When the Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting devastated America, Cedric provided some key solutions to the surge in gun violence in his book: "How to Stop the Killing," which he released on the one-year anniversary (December 14, 2013). He was awarded a lesser security transfer, but he continued his research and writing, leading the largest prisoner-led movement in America - Safeguard Atone Validate Educate.

COMMUNITY ACTIVIST

In 2009, Dean founded Safeguard Atone Validate Educate with the objective of helping all young people with academic, behavior, and financial problems graduate from high school and become more employable. One year later, in 2010, he received the Federal Bureau of Prisons' highest award: Call-to-Service Award - becoming the first United States Penitentiary Lee inmate to receive such an honor. He was known throughout the prison as "A Leader's Leader."

In late 2010, Dean reached for wider outreach by recording the first in a series of motivational speech presentations for the international media. "Here is a young man who is doing stuff out of prison that we are not even doing in our communities," said Janice Peak-Graham, radio host of 'Our Common Ground.' "We need 10 Cedric's in the community on the outside." He conducted online motivational counseling sessions not only for at-risk youth but also for the parents and teachers of at-risk youth. "This urgent call to action for each of us and for our Country is to work with one another and government officials in our communities to find ways to make our communities safer and to foster positive relationships with our children," Dean said in his "I have A Plan" speech. "My plan will SAVE - safeguard, atone, validate, and educate our children. With this plan we will be able to teach our children how to live side-by-side and deal with their differences without malice or violence. With this plan we will take major steps to substitute the pipeline to prison with a pipeline to prosperity for many of our children."

BOOKS

Dean details his life and the relationships that have helped reshape it in his 17 published books. Much more than an average incarcerated author, Dean's life-saving books, which are divided into a series of written exercises in workbooks, focus on areas of peer pressure - such as bullying, anger management, and misguided thinking - as well as on areas of self-worth, such as self-confidence, courage, and character. "I applaud you, even while serving time in prison for stepping up and taking responsibility for helping find a solution," Kevin Jennings, former assistant deputy secretary of education wrote to Dean in 2010.

In 2011, Dean collaborated with the Federal Bureau of Prisons and launched a replica of his SAVE Program called RISE (Rehabilitate Integrate Stimulate Educate). "The hearts, souls, and minds of each of you can rise," Dean wrote in a message to the misguided. "Power is in your ability to use your mind. The more you think, the more powerful you become."

5-LEVEL PARADIGM OF PEACE

1. Goodwill - kindness, compassion, sympathy
2. Genuineness - honesty, acceptance, contrition, consideration
3. God-fearing - faithful, trustworthy, devoted, honorable, virtuous
4. Gracefully - balanced, dignified, self-respecting, diplomatic, prudent
5. Gradually - step-by-step, bit-by-bit, forward-looking, ducks in a row

"We must practice each principle simultaneously, emphasizing the third, which deals with the most significant for procurement of peace," Dean said about the 5-level Paradigm of Peace. He gave these examples in use:

"You can't achieve peace when you have goodwill (level 1, but you're not God-fearing (level 3), which represents the CENTER of the five principles....You can be honest (level 2) but you must also be prudent (level 4) in your pursuit for peace."

Subject: Volunteer Waiver for Cedric Dean

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department is currently sponsoring Mr. Cedric Dean to provide youth oriented training in support of the Community Empowerment Initiative. This program is currently being delivered, in conjunction with the Charlotte-Mecklenburg School system, at Martin Luther King, Jr Middle School and Thomasboro Academy. CMPD is aware of Mr. Dean's criminal history, which most recently includes a felony arrest and conviction for an incident in 1995. Mr. Dean currently provides youth-oriented education through the SAVE (Safeguard, Atone, Validate, Educate) program, which seeks to reduce juvenile delinquency and prepare youth for career readiness through education, and to build resiliency against decisions which would lead to criminal justice system involvement. CMPD supports the authorization by CMS for Mr. Dean to provide this CMPD-funded programming at CMS facilities..

POLICE

POLICE DEPARTMENT

To whom it may concern:

My name is LeBraun Evans and I serve as the lieutenant over Community Engagement for the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department. I have been a police officer for 25 years. Although I have worked in various areas of the department during my career, this assignment is by far the most rewarding. I get to interact with community members from all over the County and ensure that they have real dialogue on the issues that both separate and bring us together. I also oversee our youth programs that seek to change the image of officers to our youth and to introduce them to law enforcement as a profession once they come of age.

I had the opportunity to meet Cedric Dean at a panel discussion on police community relations hosted by Stephanie Mills. The event was at times contentious and some sought to blame CMPD for the actions of officers in other states. Cedric was very open and honest about his past and his interactions with officers. He sought to have real dialogue on how persons committing crimes should interact with officers that are trying to suppress crime. His message was very powerful.

Our interaction on that day carried over into observing Cedric's work with SAVE, Promise Youth and many other community engagement efforts. I have seen him partnering with Sheriff-elect Garry McFadden and our own Police Chief Kerr Putney. One of my direct reports, Community Liaison Deon Wimbush is assigned to assist Cedric with all of his efforts.

In his weekly reports to me, Deon has highlighted a level of work and commitment to youth and the underserved in this community that is unparalleled. Cedric has been a model to community activism and uplifting youth since he returned to this community. He is always willing to acknowledge his past mistakes and to offer his time and support to those that are attempting to make a better life for themselves. He is always willing to make himself available at any time of the day or night to help someone.

I fully support Cedric Dean in all of his efforts to improve opportunities for youth and this community as a whole.

Sincerely,

LeBraun Evans

Subject: Cedric Dean

Dear Sir/Ma'am,

I have been working with Cedric Dean and his SAVE program for several months as part of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department's Community Empowerment Initiative. Mr. Dean has been a strong advocate for the work the CMPD does with youth in our communities, and he provides children and young adults with very candid and sincere information regarding the consequences of their actions. Mr. Dean also works closely with CMPD as a mentor in the Promise Youth Development program, where we meet weekly with young men in middle school and high school, and work to build their resilience, self-reliance, and develop skills so they can believe in themselves. Mr. Dean, because of his life experience, has tremendous credibility when he shares examples or provides insights. It is also impactful to see him working closely with the police because of his previous interactions with the criminal justice system. Mr. Dean continues to be a strong partner in the community outreach efforts that CMPD participates in.

Regards,

MAJ Ryan M. Butler

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to offer a character reference for Cedric Dean based on frequent interactions with him over the course of the last year.

Over a little less than eleven months ago, I came to know Cedric Dean after his release from federal prison and not long after I was appointed District Attorney for Mecklenburg County. I initially met Cedric at a community forum, where—after only few weeks removed from prison— he sought to meet area leaders to determine how he could make an immediate impact on young people. In the weeks that followed, I would come to see Cedric accompanying young men as they learned how to dress for the workplace, as they discussed police-community relations, and as they learned about our political process. Cedric developed a plan to start his own program for young people called SAVE (Safeguard, Atone, Validate, Educate), where he sought to offer kids from some of Mecklenburg County's most challenged neighborhoods the type of direction and structure so many of them seemed to lack. Where many have talked about developing sustainable programming for youth, Cedric actually delivered. I observed him building trusting relationships with leaders in criminal justice, education, media, and the clergy, with a singular focus of designing a program that both nurtured and provided accountability for our juvenile population. Within six months, Cedric successfully executed his vision, yielding a successful summer program that served scores of children.

In my time as a prosecutor, I have seen many people return from prison and have significant difficulty figuring out how to make meaningful contributions to their community. Cedric has accomplished his reentry with comparably remarkable ease. Cedric's drive, talent, and commitment to do good work has been immediately apparent to all those he encounters. He has done so much to become an engaged citizen, becoming consistently active in political discussions and campaigns. He readily admits mistakes he has made in his past, but he has displayed a strong desire to intercede on behalf of our community's children to divert them away from criminal behavior. In so many ways, Cedric has proven himself to be an asset to this community, and I am proud to attest to the high character he has exhibited in the time since I have known him.

Please feel free to contact me if you would like to discuss this reference further.

Sincerely,

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing in regards to the contributions of Cedric Dean, Reg. No. 11907-058, to Education programs since his arrival at USP Lee in March, 2010. Dean immediately sought me out to express his interest in developing a series of classes and programs designed to have a positive impact on the other inmates in this institution, as well as people in the community. He began tutoring GED students during the day and several nights each week, helping them prepare for the Official GED Exam. At the same time, he developed a Writer's Workshop course he began teaching in April, 2010.

This past spring, Dean teamed with another inmate to present a one day leadership seminar entitled "Leaders Breed Leaders." This seminar met with such a large response from the population that it had to be presented on three separate occasions. In August, this seminar was presented again, this time in the institution's chapel to an audience of over 130 staff and inmates. This fall, he has volunteered to teach a variety of evening classes, including Leadership, Self Awareness, and Motivational Speaking.

In addition to teaching or leading programs, Dean has taken and completed several classes including, Microsoft Office 2007, a Teacher's Assistant Apprenticeship program certified through the Department of Labor, Training for Literacy Tutors, Self Awareness and Motivation.

Dean's infectious energy and enthusiasm has had a very positive impact on the programs and activities offered at USP Lee. His ability to focus his energy in a positive way has set an excellent example for many of the younger inmates who look to him as a leader. Through his words and his actions, he has demonstrated a strong commitment not only to personal improvement, but also to the betterment of the people in his immediate community, and the community beyond these walls.

To whom it may concern:

My name is Garry L McFadden, a retired homicide detective from the Charlotte Mecklenburg Police Department who was rehired by the department after 30 years of service. I am currently assigned to the Office of The Chief and work in various roles including community relations. Since my returned in 2011 I have worked in the community with what is commonly known as "at risk kids". Over the past four years have developed many programs and recently recognize by President's Obama Task Force on 21 Century Policing.

I was contacted by Cedric Dean who I have known most of career. While being incarcerated Cedric Dean has written me several times to provide me his focus, which I have seen significantly change over the years. Because of that it is my intention to support the efforts of Cedric Dean immediately upon his release and support his SAVE Program by working very closely with him to save misguided children from premature death and imprisonment. Having worked in Homicide for over two decades and seen lives destroyed by senseless violence first hand, I know "Cedric" could make a difference if provided a chance.

We need more unconventional programs in our community like what "Cedric" is proposing to reach our youth from a different perspective that only someone like him could provide. If given the chance I am sure that Cedric Dean would make a difference and I would strongly encourage him along the way and implement his program in our community efforts.

Thank you and please contact me directly should you wish to verify this letter or have any questions.

Sincerely,

G.L. McFadden
