

Rhyming Through GENESIS

Rhyme by Robert Blair -- Illustrations by Joel Seibel

There once was a time, in a way,
When day were not days, you might say.
But the Lord spoke a word,
And the Universe stirred.
Now there's time day after day.

SEE GENESIS 1:1

Before clocks were invented, some people used sundials like this to tell time.

How do you suppose they told the time at night?

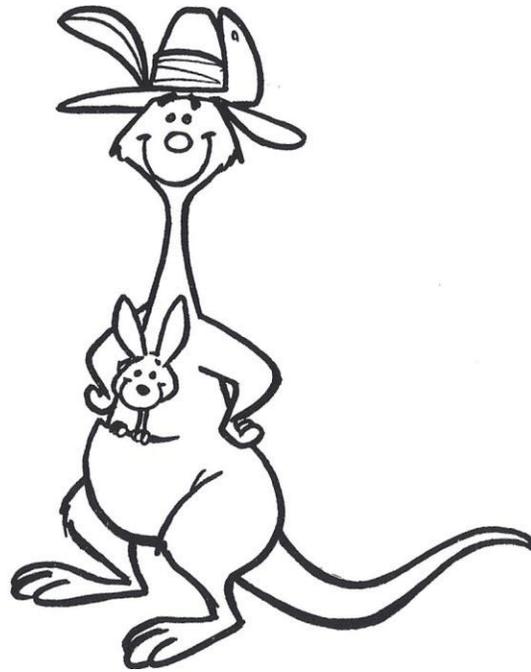

There once was an age eons back,
When things were way out whack.

To the jumble God spoke,
And disorder He broke.

Now there is order even in the outback.

See Genesis 1:2

Do you know where the outback is? That country has kangaroos.

The earth was in darkness deep.

There was no light, fancy or cheap.

God brought illumination,

To his creation

Now we even have lights on our Jeep.®

See Genesis 1:3

When are you most glad for lights?
