Kuklok's Corner

Happy Friday, TRM families!

I am not sure how you felt about waking up to a snow-covered yard, but my heart sank, and my children's hearts soared. I love the change of seasons, but I always dread the cold and darkness of winter. I hope we have a good balance of snow-filled days, but not too much, and sunshine to keep our spirits up this winter.

This week I have been consumed by the Annual and World's Best Workforce reports. This summative report of the school's operations from the previous year. I learned so much about the students and staff as I dug into the data and examples of what makes us an authentic Montessori school. I will also use this report to guide us forward to strengthen operations, our instructional programming, and our Montessori philosophy. I believe that taking time to reflect on the past helps to navigate us into a bright future. After the board sees it next week, you will find the updated Combined World's Best Workforce and Annual Report on the TRM website.

Next week we have parent-teacher conferences. I hope this is a time to celebrate the learning that each student at TRM has done up to this point in the school year. I will be here both days of conferences, so if you'd like to carve out some time to connect, please let me know, and I would be happy to accommodate! We have seen some fantastic things happening in our Montessori classrooms, but above all, I want to highlight the connections that staff make with your children daily. We are in a unique position as we are in the business of serving people, and not only people but our clients are our most important, young people. We take that responsibility seriously and strive to ensure that your children have the best experience here at TRM each day. I wish you a restful week off next week, and we look forward to welcoming you and your children back on Monday, October 24th.

My best,
Antonio Kuklok
Executive Director and Principal
