DEFINITION OF A SAINT

The term 'Saint' is used in Christian religions, including the Roman Catholic religion, to describe a person who is perceived as being an example of great holiness, virtue, and considered capable of interceding with God on behalf of a person who prayed to them. A person who has died and has been declared a saint by canonization. The Roman Catholic Church has an official process for creating saints.

Canonization is the act by which the Orthodox, Oriental Orthodoxy, Roman Catholic, or Anglican Church declares that a person who has died was a saint, upon which declaration the person is included in the canon, or list, of recognized saints.

The process goes as follows: When a person dies who has “fame of sanctity” or “fame of martyrdom”, the Bishop of the Diocese initiates an investigation. One element of investigation is whether any special favor or miracle has been granted through this candidate saint’s intercession. The Church will also investigate the candidate’s writings to see if they possess “purity of doctrine”, essentially, nothing heretical or against the faith. All of this information is gathered, and then a transumption, a faithful copy, duly authenticated and sealed, is submitted to the Congregation for the Causes of Saints.

The next step is beatification. A martyr may be beatified and declared “Blessed” by virtue of martyrdom itself. Otherwise, the candidate must be credited with a miracle. In verifying the miracle, the Church looks at whether God truly performed a miracle and whether the miracle was in response to the intercession of the candidate saint. Once beatified, the candidate saint may be venerated but with restriction to a city, diocese, region, or religious family. Accordingly, the Pope would authorize a special prayer, Mass, or proper Divine Office honoring the Blessed.

After beatification, another miracle is needed for canonization and the formal declaration of sainthood.
