A SHORT HISTORY OF MAEOP

In the spring of 1940, ten secretaries were called to Jefferson City to set in motion plans to organize the Missouri State Association of School Secretaries. This name was later changed to the Missouri Association of Educational Secretaries (MAES).

Mr. Lloyd W. King, State Superintendent of Schools, was interested and instrumental in the organization of this group, which held its first meeting on November 8, 1940 at the Muehlebach Hotel in Kansas City. The following officers were elected and installed for the fiscal year beginning November 1, 1940 and ending October 30, 1941:

President	Martha Painter
Vice President	Ruth F. Hopkins
Recording Secretary	Adeline Fangman
Corresponding Secretary	Rosa E. Torbeck
Treasurer	Daisy Newman
Executive Committee	Georgia Davis
(members at large)	Elizabeth Segelcke

There were 23 paid members at the end of the first fiscal year. The first check of $5.00 was sent in to affiliate the Missouri State Association of School Secretaries with the National Association on August 21, 1941.

The first house organ for the Association appeared in 1941. Its editor was Jane Trogdon. The largest circulation for the magazine, The Missouri Educational Secretary, was in the early 1970's when our membership reached over 1,000!

Due to the expense of publishing and mailing the magazine, the Association voted and approved changing to a newsletter entitled MAEOP Show-Me Newsletter distributed mostly by electronic mail with a few copies sent by postal mail to members without access to a computer. (May 2013)

The name of the Association was eventually changed to the Missouri Association of Educational Office Personnel and then to the Missouri Association of Educational Office Professionals (MAEOP) to align with the National Association of Educational Office Professionals (NAEOP).

Jean DeBerry Fritsche from St. Louis County, who served as president of MAEOP for the 1959-61 term, went on to serve as NAEOP president in 1965-66. Her theme was, “Key to Opportunity.” To this date she is the only Missouri member ever to serve as National president.

MAEOP member, Margaret ‘Maggie’ Elder, was installed as the NAREOP (National Association of Retired Educational Office Professionals) President in 2006. Her theme was “Unlock the Future, with Keys from the Past”.

In 2014, Missouri’s Debbie Geib became the Executive Director of NAEOP. She was MAEOP President in 2009-2010, with the theme of ‘Back 2 Basics’.

In 2018, Missouri’s Kim Brannon was named the Olive T. Ritchie Educational Office Professional of the Year.
