Synopsis

Spicer Breedan just wants to fit into the life he was born into.

He wants to be a successful businessman, but temptation is too appealing to him. With a lack of self-control and a love for expensive cars, he is somewhat of a loose cannon. His father Vic Breedan tries to teach him and slow down his fast-paced ways, but Spicer has deaf ears to it. Spicer is haunted by the memories of his mother and turns to cars, drugs, alcohol and women to ease his despondency. Nothing but the best for Spicer. No price is too high.

Spicer meets Peter Schmitz, a 'starving artist' or con artist as others would describe him. These men seem to bring out the worst in each other and a partnership ensues. Spicer thinks Peter is a good investment opportunity and that's how the train wreck of events start.

We get to know all the characters enough to feel for them, to know them personally and to hurt for them. Even the ones headed in the wrong direction. Each couple or partnership has their own side story which intermingles with the others. When the chaos starts to unravel, all these characters have a part in the events.

Spicer learns that he is not as strong as he thought he was and decides to get help for his addictions. The accident is his breaking point, and he learns that he cannot live with what happened.

With every bad, there comes something good. There is always a lesson we must learn. Life is about overcoming our hurdles but sometimes, even justice does not prevail, and we must make something good come of it ourselves.
