Progress slow towards new agreement

More than 40 days after the expiration of the last CBA, virtually no progress has been made toward a new agreement

signability often go into team's thinking such that the value of high draft choices is lessened. Last year for example, Pittsburgh with the first pick selected a college catcher thought to be less of a talent than others in draft. The Pirates selected him because he was signable for less than the slot money allocated to that pick, allowing Pittsburgh money to pay over slot value for players selected later in the draft.

The players have campaigned for a shorter period for players to reach free agency and want revenue sharing reduced. The owners did not address those issues at all. The expansion of the playoffs to 14 teams and making the designated hitter universal in both leagues still looks doable.

It is still a disappointment that more than 40 days after the expiration of the last CBA, virtually no progress has been made toward a new agreement. Certainly, spring training opening on time for Major League players looks to be delayed, and it won't be long before the March 31 start to the season looks to be in jeopardy.

On the local front, the Texas Rangers held a camp this week in Arlington for six top prospects in their farm system. The players included pitchers Jack Leiter, Cole Winn and Owen White, and position players Josh Jung, Dustin Harris and Josh Smith. Teams are not allowed to have contact with players on the 40-man roster, but none of these prospects are on the 40-man roster at this point. The players were involved in both active workouts and small discussion groups. This may prove to be especially beneficial to Jung, as he could be the Rangers' starting third baseman this Jack Leiter garnered particular interest from local media. Last year's top draft pick threw more than 100 innings for Vanderbilt, so the Rangers delayed his professional debut to this season. Leiter has worked out at Vanderbilt's baseball facilities and continued working towards his college degree since being drafted. He is now headed to Arizona for more pitching instruction from the Rangers.

DHUMPHREY24@GMAIL.COM MEMBER: USBWA

On Thursday, representatives for MLB and the MLB Players Union met for the first time since the lockout was instituted to discuss the core issues. The players and owners seem miles apart but getting together for a virtual meeting Thursday had to be a good sign. MLB put forth a new proposal. Unfortunately, the players were not impressed, and the session ended earlier than hoped. The union is said to be meeting to formulate a response; but there is no timetable in place for a response, nor are there any additional meetings scheduled.

From a fan's standpoint, it is disappointing. Spring training camps are set to open in about a month; but with the snail's pace of negotiations, opening on time with the Major League players looks improbable.

Fans will hear balderdash about trying to bring competitive balance and other noble solutions to problems in the game. However, ultimately, there is only one issue - $$$$. The players want more, and the owners don't want to give it to them. For example, under the system in the expired collective bargaining agreement (CBA), there was a minimum Major League Salary of $570,500 in 2021. The minimum had increased every year this century. Owners discussed a tiered salary system for players in their first three years from $700,000 to $800,000. Players want a minimum salary of $775,000 that would escalate over the term of the agreement to $875,000.

The players want changes in the luxury tax on teams, which they view as a de facto salary cap. The threshold for the luxury tax was $210 million in annual salaries last season with penalties that escalated by the amount over the cap as well as consecutive years of being over the cap. The owners offered to increase the threshold to $214 million escalating over the term of the agreement to $220 million, but with more severe penalties on teams with payrolls that exceed the threshold. The players want the luxury tax threshold moved to the $245 million range.

MLB has offered a draft lottery system like the NBA to discourage teams from tanking to get high draft picks. The owners have proposed a lottery for the first four draft picks, while the players want the lottery to cover the first eight picks. How much impact this will have is questionable. High draft choices are certainly treasured in baseball, but unlike football and basketball where the top draft picks are expected to play immediately and become impact players; high picks in the baseball draft have less chance of ever reaching the Majors, and even a smaller chance of being an impact player. Other factors such as

Keeping an open mind on learning golf

TOMPWARD@SBCGLOBAL.NET

As we embark on a new year it's important to have an open mind when it comes to learning and educating yourself, regardless of the indeavor.

In golf, it's really essential to be vigilante as there is a lot of mis-information available that can be quite confusing. I will act as a guide, helping to navigate to improving your game and having fun in the process.

One of the real challenges when working with people on their golf games is getting them to have alternative ways of viewing something that could really open their minds to quicker improvement.

Getting someone to see something different than what they perceived in the past can be a formidable task. When people come to me I try to ascertain quickly what they have been working on and find out their strengths and weaknesses. It's critical to know where people are coming from and to try and get as much information on them as I can. This helps to formulate a game plan and get them pointed in the right

There are many outside influences that affect how we play the game. Family, friends, co-workers, coaches, Golf Channel, magazines, videos, televised tournaments, etc.. All of these sources have made significant impact upon us, sometimes unconsciously, and can affect how we proceed in playing the game.

Over the years I have used a helpful tool that I learned from a well-respected psychologist many years ago while giving him lessons. Take a good look at the two color photos and carefully describe what you see. In the top photo what is the immediate image you see? Do you see the head of a horse? In the bottom photo do you see the profile of a young woman? What if I were to tell you that you're not completely correct. The top photo can also be a frog sitting down. The bottom photo can be a black panther on a tree branch overlooking a bird perched on another branch. Look closely at the photo again. Can you now see images of two different things in both of the photos? So Who's right?

The point I'm trying to make is that two people can see the same thing, disagree, and still be right. It's not logical; it's psychological. I've had a group of golfers argue over whether they saw a horse or a frog in the top picture, and a young woman or a panther overlooking a bird in the bottom photo. This all occurred after viewing the photos for only 10 seconds. They were adamant about the image they saw and in many cases couldn't see the other image right away. Imagine, if only 10 seconds can have that type of impact on the way people see things, what about the conditioning of a lifetime?

The great Albert Einstein once said, "All significant problems we face cannot be solved at the same level of thinking we were at when we created them".

Golfers tend to like quick fixes or band aid solutions and unfortunately they usually lead to disappointment and frustration. "A thousand mile journey begins with the first step" and you can only do that one step at a time. What will create a successful solution for you is to commit to developing good habits. For our purposes a habit is defined as the intersection of knowledge, skill, and desire.

Knowledge is the what to do and why of your golf swing.

Skill is the how to do it.

Desire is the motivation, the wanting to

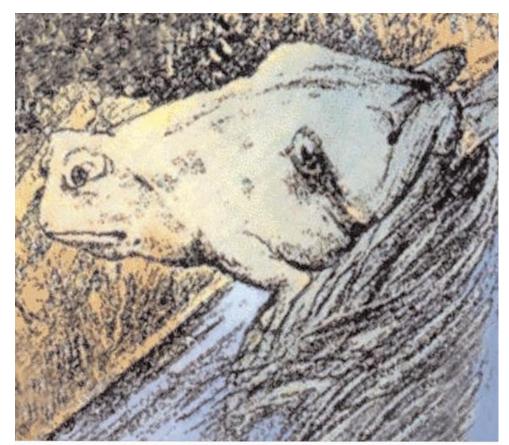

I can teach a golfer the knowledge and skill aspects to improving their game pretty quickly, however you as player wanting to get better must possess the desire component to make this all come to fruition.

Change can be a painful process unless you allow yourself to be motivated by a higher purpose. Your willingness to find happiness playing the game at a high level is to subordinate what you think you want now for what you really want later. It's this type of investment that will give you years of pleasure and purpose as it pertains to the

So look again at the two photos and see if you view two images in each photograph now instead of one. Once you have the ability to look at something objectively you may experience an "aha moment." This can become a powerful motivating force to help move forward in your golf game because now you'll see things differently, think differently, feel differently and finally behave differently.

My hope is that by shining some new light your way will open the mind to experience new possibilities to improve your golf game in 2022.

LAST TIME: Despite nearly withdrawing on Wednesday due to a rib injury, Kevin Na notched his fifth career PGA TOUR win at the 2021 Sony Open in Hawaii. Na shot a Saturday 61 – the low round of the tournament – to earn a spot in Sunday's final group alongside Brendan Steele. As Steele played his final nine holes in 2-over, Na kicked into gear, playing his final six holes in 4-under, including a birdie on the par-5 finisher. Na, whose win in Hawaii marked four straight TOUR seasons with a trophy, topped Chris Kirk and Joaquin Niemann by one shot. In his final start on a major medical extension after stepping away from the TOUR in May 2019, Kirk got up-and-down for birdie on his final hole to satisfy the requirements of the extension. Webb Simpson, Marc Leishman and Steele finished a shot further back at 19-under and tied for fourth.

Five things to know about Waialae CC

Waialae Country Club is the home of the Sony Open in Hawaii.

By Jeff Eisenband PGATOUR.COM

The PGA TOUR shifts from Maui to Oahu this week, and while the state may be the same, the island change calls for a dramatically different style of golf. Gone are the sweeping elevation changes of Kapalua and in comes the flatter, European and Hamptons-inspired Waialae Country Club, home of the Sony Open in Hawaii.

Waialae pre-dates Hawaiian statehood, was featured in a popular 1960s comedy flick, and has been part of the PGA TOUR schedule since 1965. That's a lot of tournament film to study, but Waialae still packs a few new punches every January.

1. It pays tribute to legendary courses

When golf course architect Seth Raynor and his then-associate Charles Banks crafted Waialae in the early part of the 20th century, they looked to some of the famous courses of the day for inspiration.

Raynor designed the first hole, now a 488-yard par 4, with the "Road Hole" from the Old Course at St Andrews in mind. Like the 17th hole in Scotland, the first hole in Hawaii demands an approach shot into a shallow green with a deep bunker guarding in front.

No. 7 at Waialae is a sibling of No. 6 at National Golf Links of America in Southampton, New York, one of the trademark courses of Charles B. Macdonald, Raynor's mentor. Both par 3s play short – the back tees at National Golf Links stretch to 141 yards and the Sony Open hole reaches 162 yards – but both provide a layer of bunker troubles in front of a wide green. Raynor originally surrounded the entire green with sand as a further tribute to Macdonald, but today it's only in the front.

Waialae's par-3 17th hole employs a "redan-style" green that was recently restored to Raynor's original vision with a large bunker on the left and four smaller bunkers to the right of the green.

Macdonald and Raynor were important figures in establishing the redan concept in the U.S., bringing it over from its origin at North Berwick Golf Club in Scotland.

The par-3 fourth hole at Waialae, with its 55-yard green including a deep swale running across the middle, is said to take its shape from the Biarritz Golf Club in France

Unfortunately for Raynor, he never saw the full fruit of his labors, as he passed away in January 1926, one year before Waialae officially opened.

2. The front and back nines are flipped

Hawaiian golf is primetime golf in the contiguous United States. And to make sure fans see the most picturesque views of Oahu as they watch the late-night action, the Sony Open swaps the front and back nine for tournament play.

There are two notable reasons for the change. First of all, aesthetics: The back nine holes (front nine for members) best highlight the beauty of the Hawaiian sun setting in the west. Second, this affords the opportunity to use the par-5 dogleg left 18th hole (ninth hole for members) as a dramatic finishing hole. While the 18th only played 546 yards in 2021, a series of bunkers at the dogleg require a precise tee shot to set up a feasible second shot into the green.

Last year, Kevin Na put his second shot through the green on 18 before getting up and down for birdie and a one-shot win. In 1983, Isao Aoki holed out for eagle from 128 yards to become the first Japanese player to win on the PGA TOUR.

No matter what the contenders do on 18, it's almost always entertaining.

3. It's a mad, mad 'W'

The most iconic feature of Waialae is the "W" formed by four coconut trees behind the 16th green. This formation is on purpose, and while it has only been around since 2010, its history goes back more than 50 years.

In 1963 – two years before the debut of the Sony Open – Stanley Kramer's "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" debuted in theaters, and it featured one of Hollywood's all-time star-studded casts with Spencer Tracy, Milton Berle and Sid Caesar, among others. The film's plot revolved around a group of individuals racing to uncover $350,000 hidden under a W-shaped tree in the fictional California city of Santa Rosita.

Waialae member Ethan Abbott estimated he was around 9 or 10 years old when he originally saw the movie. His boyish enthusiasm about the film never left him, and as an adult in the 2000s, he started lobbying the course to create its own W. After some initial pushback, Waialae relocated four trees from the hundreds on the course, planting them behind the No. 7 green for members. The entire alteration cost $3,500 and came from a gift already earmarked for a project on the course.

While the trees are tricked into thinking they are growing straight, they now form one of golf's iconic images, with the "W" appearing on Waialae merchandise and earning the club a series of national landscape awards. Weddings have even become common at the "W," a prime photo opp spot for golf enthusiasts.

But did Abbott hide any cash under the trees? That remains unknown.

4. Justin Thomas has the course record

In 2017, Justin Thomas arrived at Waialae directly from a victory at the Sentry Tournament of Champions. He backed that up with an opening-round 59 at Oahu, a new course record, surpassing Davis Love III's 60 in 1994. Thomas started on the back and book-ended his round with eagles on No. 10 and No. 9.

At age 23, Thomas became the youngest player to ever shoot a sub-60 round

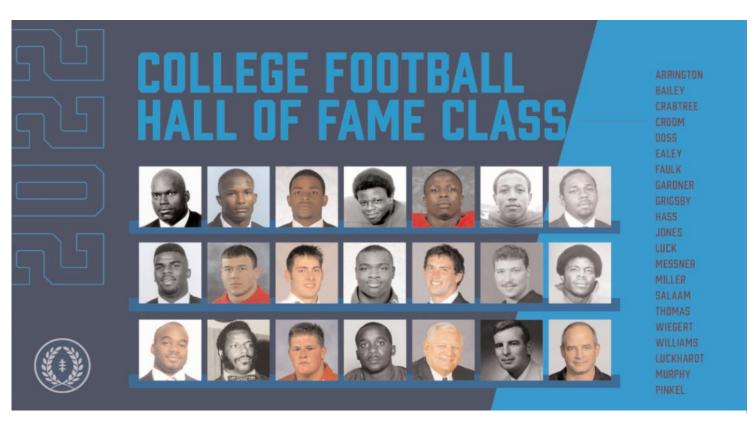

Along with the 18-hole record, Thomas proceeded to set the 36-hole, 54-hole and tournament records at the Sony Open, finishing at 27-under 253 to beat Justin Rose by seven strokes. The Sony Open was Thomas' third of five wins en route to his 2016-17 FedExCup title.

5. It's a flat track

The Sentry Tournament of Champions field climbs as high as 510 feet above sea level at the Plantation Course at Kapalua. At Waialae, players can leave their hiking boots back at the hotel. The Oahu course has an elevation change of roughly 10 feet. While Waialae includes features unique to Hawaii – coconut, monkey pod and kiawe trees, along with Pacific Ocean views – water hazards are minimal and 83 bunkers span the grounds. Breezes can play a factor, but after the mountains and unexpected winds of Kapalua, Waialae presents a more subdued atmosphere.

The last three Sony Open champions are Kevin Na, Cameron Smith and Matt Kuchar, which suggests ball-striking and putting are more important than distance on this classic course.

JOHN LUCKHARDT Washington & Jefferson College [PA] (1982-98), California University [PA] (2002-11) Head Coach, 225-70-2 (76.1%)

A stalwart on the Western Pennsylvania football scene for the better part of three decades, John Luckhardt turned two programs into perennial national contenders, winning an astounding 76.1 percent of his combined games at Washington & Jefferson and California University of Pennsylvania. He becomes the first person ever to represent the Vulcans in the College Football Hall of Fame and the fourth person with ties to Washington & Jefferson.

In 1982, Luckhardt took over a Washington & Jefferson program that had only produced four winning campaigns in the previous 17 seasons. By 1984, Luckhardt had turned the Presidents into a 9-2 team, winning the team's first Presidents' Athletic Conference (PAC) title and earning the school's first trip to the NCAA Division III playoffs. The program never looked back, amassing winning records every season under his watch, culminating in 1998 with a 137-37-2 record during his 17-year tenure.

Under Luckhardt's guidance, W&J claimed 13 PAC championships and made 11 appearances in the NCAA Playoffs, including two trips to the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl (1992 and 1994). In 1992, he was named the AFCA National Coach of the Year, and CNN named him the Division III Coach of the Year in '94.

Following his time at W&J, Luckhardt led the program at nearby Cal U from 2002-11. His tenure with the Vulcans witnessed the best 10-year stint in school history, and he exited as the school's all-time winningest coach with an 88-33 overall record. He led Cal U to the NCAA Division II Semifinals in three consecutive seasons after capturing NCAA Regional titles in 2007, 2008 and 2009. The 2008 season marked the program's first Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) championship since 1984. Two more playoff appearances in his final two years at Cal U gave him five consecutive seasons of double-digit victories and five NCAA Division II Playoff appearances along with seven consecutive PSAC West titles.

Luckhardt's teams appeared in 16 NCAA playoffs during his 27-year coaching career, and he coached 11 First Team All-Americans, nine Academic All-Americans and two NFF National Scholar-Athletes. He was named the PAC Coach of the Year 11 times and the PSAC West Coach of the Year once.

A native of Western Pennsylvania, Luckhardt played college football at Purdue for College Football Hall of Fame Coach Jack Mollenkopf, and he was the center on the 1967 Rose Bowl team that beat USC. He began his coaching career at Northern Illinois and then Lehigh. Luckhardt has been inducted into the Pennsylvania Sports; the Washington & Jefferson College Athletics; and the California University of Pennsylvania Athletic halls of fame. From 1994-98, he served on the American Football Coaches Association Board of Directors. From 1996-98, Luckhardt also served as Washington & Jefferson's Director of Athletics.

BILLY JACK MURPHY University of Memphis (1958-71) Head Coach, 91-44-1 (67.3%)

The winningest coach in Memphis history, Billy Jack Murphy headed the Tigers' program for 14 years, posting winning records in all but two seasons and leading the school into the national rankings. Murphy, who passed away in 2008 at 87, becomes the second person with ties to Memphis to enter the College Football Hall of Fame.

In 1958, Murphy became head coach at Memphis, then-known as Memphis State, and he would take the program from obscurity to national prominence with multiple firsts while winning 67.3 percent of his games before his exit after the 1971 season with an overall record of 91-44-1. In 1960, he led the team's transition to major college status as a member of the NCAA University Division while posting an 8-2 record. As the Tigers' program grew in stature, Murphy replaced small-college opponents with major programs, including wins against Florida State, Houston, Miami (FL), Mississippi State, Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia Tech and Wake Forest. In 1962, Murphy led the Tigers to their first win over a member of the SEC, a 28-7 victory at Mississippi State.

In 1963, the Tigers posted the school's first undefeated season since 1938 with a 9-0-1 record, and Murphy claimed National Coach of the Year honors from The Detroit Times while Memphis running back Dave Casinelli claimed the NCAA rushing title and the defense posted five shutouts. The team finished No. 14 in the UPI Coaches Poll, the highest ranking in school history. The lone tie that season, a 0-0 tilt, came against No. 2 Ole Miss who had not been shutout in 47 games. In 1967, Murphy and the Tigers would finally gain the upper hand, claiming the program's first win against Ole Miss, 27-17, at home.

In 1968, Memphis ended its 27-year run as an independent, joining the Missouri Valley Conference, and Murphy would earn Missouri Valley Conference Coach of the Year honors in three of the school's first four seasons in the conference. On Dec. 18, 1971, Murphy led Memphis to its first appearance and first win in a major bowl with a 28-9 victory over San Jose State in the Pasadena Bowl. The game marked Murphy's final appearance as a head coach, and he transitioned fulltime to athletics director, a role he had started in 1966 and held until 1981.

Murphy grew up in Siloam Springs, Arkansas, before enrolling at Mississippi State in 1939 and playing as an All-SEC tailback for future College Football Hall of Coach Allyn McKeen who had previously headed the Memphis program. In 1943 and the midst of World War II, Murphy joined the Marine Corps Reserve and transferred to Duke University for training with the V-12 Program. He served heroically in the South Pacific, narrowly escaping with his life on at least four occasions and receiving the Bronze Star, the Presidential Citation and the Navy Citation. Following World War II, Murphy returned to Mississippi State as the captain of the 1946 Bulldogs team.

After graduating from Mississippi State, Murphy took his first job as an assistant coach at Memphis for a five-year stint. In 1951, he returned to Mississippi State under head coach Murray Warmath who he then followed to Minnesota in 1954 for four seasons as the running backs coach before becoming the Memphis head coach at the age of 37 in 1958. Murphy has been inducted into the State of Tennessee Sports Hall of Fame, the Mississippi State Hall of Fame and the Memphis M Club Hall of Fame. Each year the Billy J. Murphy Award is presented to a former Memphis athlete who has excelled in their chosen profession after graduation, and the Tigers' practice facility is named in Murphy's honor.

GARY PINKEL University of Toledo (1991-2000), University of Missouri (2001-15) Head Coach, 191-110-3 (63.3%)

Standing at No. 20 for most wins in Football Bowl Subdivision history at the time of his retirement, Gary Pinkel's legacy as the winningest coach in school history at both Toledo and Missouri makes him one of only three coaches to hold the distinction at two Division I programs. He becomes the first coach from Toledo and the sixth coach from Missouri inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame.

Pinkel began his head coaching career at Toledo in 1991 and during the next 10 years he would take the Rockets to new heights, winning 65.9 percent of his games and amassing a 73-37-3 record, the most wins in school history. His nine winning seasons at Toledo included the 1995 MAC championship, with the Rockets going 11-0-1 and finishing at No. 24 in the final polls. Pinkel would lead Toledo to three other MAC West Division titles. In 1997, the Rockets finished 9-3, climbing as high as No. 18 in the national rankings. They repeated as division champions again in 1998 with a 7-5 record. In his final season with the Rockets in 2000, the team went 10-1, including a 24-6 win at Penn State. The team finished the regular season with the MAC West Division title and ranked No. 25 in the AP Poll. He was named the MAC Coach of the Year in 1995 and 1997.

Pinkel took over at Missouri in 2001, inheriting a program that had produced just one 10-win season in school history and two winning seasons in the previous 17 years. Pinkel would transform the program, leading the Tigers to 10 winning seasons (including five years with 10 wins or more), five conference division titles, 10 bowl appearances and six bowl victories. The end result: an overall record of 118-73 and the distinction of being the school's all-time winningest coach.

Pinkel's Missouri teams posted final top-20 national rankings five times, including AP rankings of No. 4 in 2007 and No. 5 in 2013. In 2007, he was named the National Coach of the Year by FieldTurf, and he won conference coach of the year honors in 2007 (Big 12) and 2014 (SEC). In 2007, Mizzou claimed the school's first No. 1 national ranking since 1960 after a watershed 36-17 win against archrival Kansas in the Border Showdown at Arrowhead Stadium on Nov. 24, 2007. The Tigers subsequently fell short against Oklahoma in the Big 12 title game, but the team ended the season with a school-record 12 wins, including a win in the Cotton Bowl and a No. 4 final national ranking.

Pinkel's finest year may have come in 2013, one year after Mizzou joined the SEC. Picked to finish sixth in the SEC Eastern Division, the Tigers finished 11-1 as East Division champs, and they gave Pinkel his second victory in the Cotton Bowl and his second 12-win season along with a final No. 5 ranking in the national polls. Pinkel would lead the Tigers back to the SEC Championship Game in 2014, falling short against Alabama. The team finished the season with a win against Minnesota in the Citrus Bowl and an 11-3 record and No. 14 ranking in the AP Poll.

After his final game in 2015 and announcing his retirement because of a diagnosis of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, Pinkel ranked as the third-winningest active coach behind future College Football Hall of Fame inductees Frank Beamer of Virginia Tech and Bill Snyder of Kansas State. Pinkel also is one of only three coaches in history to be the winningest coach of two college football programs, joining College Football Hall of Fame inductees Bear Bryant (Kentucky, Alabama) and Steve Spurrier (Florida, South Carolina). Pinkel coached 10 First Team All-Americans. three Academic All-Americans, three NFF National Scholar-Athletes and 79 first team all-conference players.

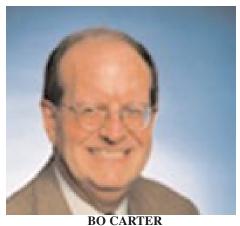

Prior to becoming a head coach, Pinkel was an all-conference and Honorable Mention All-America tight end at Kent State, playing for future College Football Hall of Fame Coach Don James. Credit Card Debt?

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

CreditGUARD of America, a non-profit licensed debt management service provider, is making a new program available to lower debt payments and become free of all credit card debt in only three to five years. Consumers need only $2,000 or more in total credit card debt and at least 30 days behind on any account, to cut their payment by 35% to 50%, and reduce or eliminate interest charges altogether.

Over 200,000 families, located throughout the U.S. have regained financial independence with CreditGUARD's licensed, bonded and insured service. CreditGUARD of America has received high marks in consumer surveys showing high consumer satisfaction and confidence. The CreditGUARD debt management program can lower your monthly payments by hundreds and save you thousands!

One such case is Sandra L. who proclaimed "CreditGUARD cut my monthly payment by $656 and saved me over $29,206.53 in interest. They saved my way of life and gave me back my peace of mind! Now I can see myself on my way to becoming debt free." or Jeffrey C. who said "CreditGUARD of America helped me consolidate 3 of my credit cards into one affordable payment. They are now saving me nearly $200 a month. Now I will be debt free in 2 years or less"
