Choosing the right paving for you

When it comes to choosing your paving, it is important to understand the difference between the cost of your paving and the final cost of your project.

Buying a premium porcelain paving should not increase the cost of labour and overall installation.

When deciding on the right product for you, it's worth considering if the location is in a well-lit or dim area. If your patio is in a more shaded area of your property, porcelain is a perfect choice due to the low porosity. This in effect has strong stain and scratch resistant properties and will stop anything penetrating your slab making it easy to clean.

We also have a wide range of natural stone and granite products perfect for your more rural and homely renovations, in an array of finishes from the more natural riven to the smoother sawn. We have lots of choice to help you turn your garden space into something that you'll love for years to come.

We split packs across our entire product range to give you exactly the coverage you need.

We advise an additional 10% for wastage.*

New for 2022

We have extended our porcelain collection to include three new ranges; Marmo, Storm and Modella.
We have also added porcelain circle kits to our line up. These new ranges enhance our already comprehensive choice of porcelain paving which will suit any garden project.

Finishes Explained

Natural stone is beautiful in its own right, it can also have a range of "finishes" applied to it to create different surfaces, resulting in the products complementing each other. Below we have listed and explained many of the different "finishes" and illustrated examples of our products which have been treated in that way.

SAWN & HONED

To achieve a honed finish an abrasive is used to buff the surface to create a matte look and velvet-like touch.

PORCELAIN

Manufactured and printed outdoor tiles with a R11 anti-slip surface. Porcelain is non-porous, incredibly durable and requires very little maintenance.

NATURAL/HANDCUT

The natural finish is when the stone has been shaped by nature and the edges are cut by hand using a chisel. The result is a surface that is riven in texture.

SAWN EDGE

A sawn edge is achieved using a machine to saw the edges of the paving. This technique creates a smooth straight edge.

SHOTBLASTED

This process involves honing the product first, then at high velocity firing small beads of steel at the paving to achieve a textured non-slip surface.

TUMBLED

The stone is tumbled in a machine similar to a cement mixer. This process gives the stone a smooth weathered edge and surface.

BULLNOSED

This process can be done by machine or hand. A rounded edge is created which is perfect for steps & copings.

FLAMED

To achieve a flamed surface an oxy acetylene torch is used to "scorch" the top creating a non-slip surface.

Follow our guidelines for a successful installation

1 Inspect all the goods on collection or delivery
Please make sure you are completely satisfied with your products when they are delivered or collected.

Unpacking natural stone securely
Please ensure you take slabs from the middle of the crate working outwards, to ensure the crate does not tip over.

Unpacking porcelain securely
We advise to take extra precaution while unpacking as the slabs may become unstable after the secure straps have been cut. We recommend two people carry out the unpacking.

3 Mix the packs
Always mix the packs to achieve an overall even appearance. When installing natural stone we strongly advise to mix from multiple packs to create an overall even appearance.

4 Slurry priming
We advise that when laying that you apply a "primer" to the back of the slabs prior to laying.

5 Lay on a full bed of mortar
Always lay the slabs on a full bed of mortar, we do not recommend laying them on mortar spots.

Sub Grade

If you are laying directly next to a house then the finished patio should be at least 150mm below the damp proof course. So in essence, dig out the area to a minimum depth of 300mm below the damp proof course.

It's good working practice to compact the surface of the sub grade with either static or vibratory compact equipment. To ensure that water does not collect on the paving, the install needs to have a fall of 1 in 60, which means one centimeter of fall for every 60 centimeters of width. Ideally falling to storm drainage collection channels, planters and verges will surface as long as they drain freely.

Subbase & Geo Textile

Sometimes overlooked on its importance but choosing the correct sub base is essential in how the patio will perform later on. Geotextile should be rolled out over the area of the patio and cut to cover the total area. A misconception is that its main function is to prevent weed growth. But its main purpose is to stop the sub base migrating into the sub grade. Basically, preventing the chance of settlement in the patio.

Flexible sub base DTP Type 1 granular sub base at a depth of 100 to 150mm again dependant on ground condition. Compacted with a compactor plate or vibrating roller in 2 layers (half the depth of the stone or 75mm as rule of thumb). Rigid sub base should be a lean mix at a depth of around 100mm. Exchanging the geotextile for DPM at this stage.

Bedding - Laying Porcelain

Full wet bed: best practice on type 1 subbase. This procedure consists of placing the tiles onto a levelled-out bed of standard sand/cement mortar, prepared to a wet consistency. The mortar bed needs to be a 6:1 or stronger mix of grit sand with cement depth of 20mm to 40mm thick.

Thin bed adhesive: best practice on concrete. This method substitutes the sand cement for an outdoor grade polymer – modified cement. It is common in hotter climate outdoors but not as a standard practice here in the U.K.

A primer should be applied to the underside of the tiles prior to placement, to ensure there is full adhesion between paving and bed. Tile spacers are a must in keeping the paving uniform.

Bedding - Laying Natural Stone

Full wet bed: best practice on type 1 subbase. This procedure consists of placing the natural stone flags onto a levelled-out bed of standard sand/cement mortar, prepared to a wet consistency. The mortar bed needs to be a 6:1 or stronger mix of grit sand with cement depth of 20mm to 40mm thick. It is very much the same as laying porcelain. A primer should be applied to the underside of the slabs prior to placement to ensure full adhesion between paving and mortar bed.

Jointing

We recommend a porous jointing compound for a permeable subbase like Joint-it Simple, which is popular for its ease of use. For rigid subbase installs we recommend a non-porous jointing option like Flowpoint Smooth which requires an experienced installer due to the more complex nature of the product. Every effort must be made to keep the paving clean and free of muck transfer from boots, tools and machinery.

This can be achieved by using lots of clean water and taking time to clean up all surplus resin off on completion of the installation. 1 part jointing like Joint-it Simple is the fastest, cleanest and most user friendly form of jointing and becoming a favorite with contractors across the UK.

Colours

The images used throughout the brochure are used for reference purposes only, several may have been digitally enhanced for printing purposes.

It is best practice to open all of the packs being used for a project before yourself or landscaper starts laying the paving, this therefore ensures all the colours can be blended in naturally to create a beautiful patio. All products may have slight colour variations with tones and patterns. Porcelain batches may vary so please ensure all goods are from the same batch prior to laying.

General Information

Sizes & Thickness

Calibrated products have undergone a grading process to achieve a thickness of 20/22mm, our handcut range is split by hand and the thickness may vary from 15-25mm. All sizes and thickness on our products are nominal and could vary by +/- 3mm.

Maintenance

We highly recommend cleaning the patio on a regular basis using a stiff sweeping brush and warm soapy water to remove any dirt and moss on the slabs. Your paving can be pressure washed but extreme care must be taken as extensive pressure may cause damage to the jointing and the top surface of the paving.

Hard stains can be cleaned using special cleaning agents in the market, however please check their suitability and purpose with your special product. Acids should NOT be used on natural stone as this harms the colour and texture of the stone. Any strong coloured spillages should be cleaned immediately with a wet cloth or suitable products to avoid long term damage.

Health & Safety

Paving Stones Direct products are heavy and may be awkward to lift so extreme care is advised while lifting and manoeuvring them, to the appropriate place. Necessary clothes and accessories such as boots and gloves should be worn at all times. Safety mask and eye protection are essentials when cutting the stone. More Health & Safety Guidelines and instructions can be found on www.hse.gov.uk.
