

KNUCKLES & MEATHEAD & PRINCE

KNUCKLES Ladies and Gentlemen, big boys and girls - we are very lucky this evening to have the pleasure of royalty joining the audience. He was due to be here for the start, but unfortunately he was coming by train, and you know what Thameslink are like. He has now arrived so will you all please be upstanding for his Royal Highness Prince William of St. Evenage

(PRINCE enters escorted by MEATHEAD, who shows him to his seat)

PRINCE (To the audience as he enters and takes his seat) Stop it please, all sit down, I am not that sort of Prince, I do not expect people to stand for me. I have just come to see the pantomime - please do not make any fuss.

MEATHEAD Ladies and Gentlemen the national anthem of St. Evenage...

(band begins to play Aga doo)

PRINCE (Standing up) Oh no, no, please – that song is awful (band stops) I would much rather hear something by Taylor Swift

KNUCKLES Sorry mate you should have been 'ere for the first Act

MEATHEAD Look here mincey Princey, you just sit there and look all stuffy and silly like all them other Royal's do.

KNUCKLES Yeah, and whatever you do – do not get involved in anything that goes on up there, (stage) right?

MEATHEAD Right – cause we have and we are regretting it see?

PRINCE OK fine I really only want to sit here and watch.

MEATHEAD Right come on Knuckles, we'd better get back.

(BOUNCERS take up the positions either side of the stage)

KNUCKLES Right – ACTION! (they both fall asleep)
