Tanell Davis Biography

Tanell's journey began at just 15, when she started designing clothing patterns in her bedroom. By 17, she was gifted her first sewing machine, igniting a passion that would shape her future. In 2018, she launched Edge By Tanell LLC, a brand renowned for its meticulously crafted garments that offer more than just clothing—they are an experience – wearable attitude! Her designs are a testament to her relentless creativity, focus on quality, and commitment to empowering individuals through fashion.

Beyond fashion, Tanell has made significant contributions to media and entertainment. In 2010, she founded Lexington Style Magazine Corp, a national lifestyle publication that gained recognition during NYFW for its coverage of major designers and celebrity interviews. She also created and hosted The Lex Show, a web talk show where she connected with women through insightful and engaging discussions.

Throughout her career, Tanell has worked with some of the biggest names in entertainment, from Sports, Cleveland Brown's Mike Adams, R&B legends Dru Hill, Faith Evans, 112, and Jodeci to industry moguls like P. Diddy, Kedar Masssenberg, Mark Pitts, John Salley and Smokey Robinson to name a few. Her creative work spans film, television, music, and publishing, with collaborations that include the co-authorship of Carmen Bryan's autobiography (2006), released by Simon & Schuster.

An accomplished writer, Tanell's screenplays and creative projects have attracted the attention of major studios like MGM, Miramax, and Fox Searchlight. Her work with Troy "Lil Troy" Carter on a pilot for Will Smith's Overbrook Entertainment is just one of many milestones in her dynamic career.

Tanell's influence extends beyond her creative pursuits. She was invited as a guest speaker at the annual "Tribute to Women in Hip-Hop" event, and her insightful quotes have been featured in Source Magazine's May 2002 issue on the subject of "Prosperous Women." In addition to her creative endeavors, Tanell is a passionate mentor and leader. She currently serves as the Zeta Amicae President of Westchester County, NY and is dedicated to inspiring the next generation of entrepreneurs and creatives.

With her relentless drive, innovative spirit, and dedication to her craft, Tanell Davis continues to make an indelible impact on the worlds of fashion, entertainment, the younger generation and beyond. Tanell currently resides in New York.
