

OUT OF DEBT

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

OUT of debt and something saved! Talk about your joys! Other people may have raved Over tinsel toys— But, for something really sweet, That's got any other beat!

Out of debt and in the bank!— Something laid away For the time your luck is rank, For a rainy day. Talk about your "safety first!"— That's the best, against the worst.

YOUR Last Name IS IT DELANO?

THE name of this family might be included in a list of names that are peculiarly American, because while it is of French origin, you will never find its like in France.

You may trace it back to Phillip de La Noye, who was probably the son of Jean de Lanney, or de Lanoy, Phillip came to Plymouth on the Fortune in 1621 from Leyden. Governor Winslow in his history of the colonists tells us that he was born of French parents and that when he had expressed his desire to come into communion with the English colonists he proved himself to have come "from such parents as were in full communion with the French churches."

His father, Jean, was born about 1603 in Leyden.

Phillip was married in Duxbury, whether he went after leaving Plymouth, to Esther Dewsbury, and later to Mary Pontus, widow of James Glass. Later he went to Bridgewater, and then was one of the purchasers of Dartmouth and later of Middleborough.

The name Delano was not spelled in that way until the time of Phillip's grandchildren. It is interesting that one of his great-grandchildren, Susannah by name, married Noah Grant, and was therefore an ancestress of Gen. U. S. Grant.

The name has been traced to its French source, and it is believed to be identical to that borne by a prominent family of Brittany, to which belonged Francois de la Noue, known as "The Lion-armed." He was a brave warrior, and bore his sobriquet because after having lost an arm in battle it was replaced by one of iron to answer the purpose of holding his reins while on horseback.

PITT—From residence near a pit. MASTERS—A Norman place name.

GOOD REASON

Bug—What makes you get rattled so easily? Rattlesnake—Because I'm a rattlesnake, that's why.

Have Yearning Dreams Are dreams really one way to enjoy things we want but cannot have in reality? So the psychologists contend—and the dreams of orphans support this contention. For orphans, like other people, dream when they sleep, but their dreams have a striking similarity. Visions of mother, father, home, and in particular that the parents have come to take them home constitute orphan dreams, the Kansas City Post says.

Noe's Creek Again

Let us not forget the issue. In the last two or three years or more, both political parties have come out squarely and told the people that they are in favor of closing up Noe's Creek. It has been rumored about town that petitions are being circulated, calling for a referendum on this important question. If it is true, it is not too early, the sooner the better. In a way it is a very good idea to give the people an opportunity to express themselves; but on a project such as this, where our health is at stake, we believe that the State Board of Health can compel the officials to close up this creek.

We can flutter and frown as to the cost, but with the increase in building construction and other property in our Borough, we would not feel an item of this expenditure, for in years to come it could be very easily paid for, and aside from the financial end of it, suppose one soul were taken sick and departed his or her life because of this unhealthy condition, would we not all have given our most to help that one, for after all what is life, if we cannot enjoy it, live healthy and happy.

It is a project which should receive the unanimous approval of the voters in town. It is not a political issue. It is something that has to do with each and every one of us, our health and happiness of the present and future depend largely upon the abatement of this nuisance.

At present, it is the biggest thing our borough can undertake to do along the lines of construction, and just as soon as it is started, it cannot be too soon.

Judge Pickersgill in his daily editorial column of last Saturday in the Perth Amboy Evening News had occasion to mention the matter as follows:

"Old King Canote is credited with an ineffectual attempt to force the ocean waves to retire from the beach by merely commanding them to do so. Mayor Mulvihill, aided by modern methods of engineering, will probably meet with greater success in his efforts to wipe out the creek, which now bisects his thriving borough and adds to the discomfort, if not the ill health of the people of Carteret."

World Has Forgotten Where Conqueror Died

Lin Pan Shan—the Six Loop pass—was a hard day for the mules, which had to relay each other's loads and thus get a double climb. They were much delayed by a broken-down cart, which finally had to be upended in a deep cutting to let us pass. Half way up the mountain, set in an elbow of the road, was a decrepit temple of no particular age or grandeur to attract our attention, writes Langdon Warner in World's Work. On hearing its name, Kuan Ti Miau, Wang dug up a schoolboy memory that it was the place where Genghis Khan had died. No more Genghis Khan had died. No more Imperial outlook could be found in all China for that old tiger to rest his eyes on for the last time. The temple was squeezed between the ridge and the cliff; from it one gazed down and afar off to the east over the road that we had come. The trees that lined the track made a straight, double ribbon across the flats, but curled about the mountain roots and slanted up the foothills to find an easy way, till the pass at our feet was reached and they set themselves doggedly to the task of zigzagging up as steep a slope as mules and carts could tolerate. Groups of farmhouses and hamlets were marked by thickets near the brooks which emptied into the Chin, while far away, clear over the edge of the world, the great line of trees dipped out of the great plateau. We searched in vain for an inscribed stone to tell of the emperor's death at the little temple. The old priest knew and cared for nothing but his flock of half a dozen goats and sheep

Cooled Their Enthusiasm

Here is a story for feminists only: Mrs. Fawcett, one of the pioneers of woman suffrage in England, tells an amusing story of how, many years ago, she was taking around at a political meeting a petition asking parliament to pass the married women's property bill, then before it. Those present were mostly Suffolk farmers. She explained the petition and asked for signatures, but obtained very few. One old farmer voted the feelings of the majority. "Am I to understand you, ma'am, that if this bill becomes law and my wife had a matter of a hundred pounds left her, I should have to ask her for it?" Of course I was obliged to confess that he would have to suffer this humiliation, and then I obtained no more signatures. Subscribe for The News.

Zoning Idea Spreads in American Cities

Zoning has been adopted by 320 cities in the United States, separating their territory into areas, for exclusive use as business, residence, industrial and unrestricted zones, the United States Department of Commerce reports.

In 1924 the most marked progress was made by the zoning idea, 62 municipalities adopting the system. "In adopting zoning ordinances," the department's statement says, "these cities, towns and villages have sought to protect home owners and other land owners in the reasonable use of their property. Zoning seeks to regulate the use to which buildings may be put, the area of the lot which they may cover, and their height in different sections of the city that the land in each district may be used for the purpose to which it is best suited."

New Jersey still leads in the number of zoned municipalities, having 72. New York has 56, California 38, Illinois 30, Massachusetts 24, Ohio 21, Wisconsin 14, Michigan 9, Indiana 5, Kansas, Missouri, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Virginia, 4 each; Florida, Minnesota, Oklahoma and Washington, 2 each, and Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Georgia, Iowa, Maryland, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee and Utah, 1 each.

Clean Community Pays Dividends to Citizens

City cleaning is given the aspect of a national enterprise by the civic development department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which reports that 1925 will see new records established in this field of civic activity. Chambers of commerce all over the country are taking the initiative in community housecleaning.

For their guidance and the guidance of cities embarking upon anti-litter campaigns the department has issued, in response to many requests for suggestions, a resume of the methods successfully followed in many of the larger cities where annual cleaning has become an established community practice.

Millions are being expended annually for the beautification of American cities, it says in a foreword, and then, with care and thoughtlessness abandon, people scatter litter where they will and streets and parks bear mute testimony to their negligence.

Cleaning up a city and keeping it clean, the department holds, is not merely an esthetic undertaking, but sound business. Ample dividends are paid in the form of stable property values, improved health conditions and decreased fire losses.

Suburbs Grow Rapidly

Thousands of people continue to move into the cities each year from the farms, and thousands, after residing in the city for a few years, come to the conclusion that life there isn't worth living and move out to the suburbs. Thus the cities continue to grow; but the suburbs are growing faster in proportion. Now that people are discovering that cities are not particularly good places in which to live, industry seems to be discovering that cities may not always be particularly good places in which to establish industrial projects.

BRIARS

IF A young woman, unmarried, in walking through the fields or along a country road has a briar stick to her dress, it is a common thing for anyone who happens to be with her to say: "Oh, you've got a beau." And the common superstition is that the briar should be named by the young lady after the young man whom she desires for her sweetheart. Then if the briar remains attached the young lady's affections are returned. If it drops off they are not.

Here again we have our old friend sympathetic magic, and also that magic which, by the ancients, was supposed to reside in a name. This latter idea pops in the magic of people who are today living in a primitive state. The name is supposed to partake so intimately of the person to whom it belongs that in some savage tribes the real name of a man is never spoken lest some conjurer might, by getting possession of it, work him mischief. He is given another name for everyday use or else spoken of in a symbolic or roundabout manner.

So the young lady in naming the briar endues it with the personality of the young man whose name she utters. After that it is as if it had been fastened by a knot or by being sewed there, bringing in the "doctrine of knots" which doctrine has been elucidated already in this series. The briar is endued by being named with the personality of the lover; the briar is attached to the girl's dress and therefore to her. The physical union suggests a spiritual union, accomplished by sympathetic magic. If the briar falls off then the charm is broken, the sympathetic current destroyed.

Entrances into Town Should Be Attractive

It is a fact that there is no lack of beauty along the railroad lines in England, France, Germany and other places. Liberal planting of grass and shrubs, either by the railroad or the various municipalities, has transformed these railroad lines into lanes of beauty.

The aim of American civic authorities should be to make the railed highways of the country as attractive as any of those in the old countries. Particular attention will be given to the approaches to towns. The idea is spreading rapidly. The American Railways Development association has passed resolutions recently to further the aims of the real estate men by co-operating with them in this important work.

Committees have been organized in New Orleans, Milwaukee, Duluth, Atlanta; Erie and Lancaster, Pa.; South Bend, Dayton, Des Moines; Trenton, N. J.; Providence, R. I.; Lockport, N. Y.; Dade City, Fla.; Kankakee, Ill.; Madison, Wis.; Little Rock, Ark.; Arkansas City; Ogden, Utah; Casper, Wyo.; Albany, Ore., and Pasadena, Venice and Riverside, Cal.

They will urge upon the manufacturer located along the railroads the advantages to him, his business and the town of keeping his factory yard as clean and attractive as it is economically possible.

The plan calls for new station signs prominently placed. Besides the name of the town, it will give the total population, real estate and business wealth, and the town's chief industry.

Painters Have Much to Do With City's Safety

The house painter is as vital a member of a city's public safety forces as the fireman according to J. P. Rising, president of the Illinois Master House Painters' and Decorators' association.

"His position is unofficial," he said, "but he protects the citizens from destruction more devastating than fire and from losses far greater than they might suffer at the hands of the most unscrupulous burglar."

The painter, according to Mr. Rising, saves life and property by means of his commodity, paint. Rot and rust attack unprotected surfaces. Disease germs flourish in the decaying parts of wood and on all rough, damp surfaces. Rot and rust are more insidious than fire, but their action, an oxidation of wood and metal, is a "slow-motion picture," as Mr. Rising termed it, of the more spectacular flames.

"The difference is," he added, "that whereas fires are occasional occurrences, rot and rust are at work continually. A house must be always protected against them."

Home and City Synonymous

Home is more than the house, it is more than the grounds, it is deeper than any designation of physical boundary and more rich than anything made with hands. It is the dwelling place of the spirit—if the liberal thinkers will admit that each of us has such a thing—as well as of the body, which they seem to admit that we do possess. The house is the center of home, but it is no distortion of the truth to say that the city of one's abiding place is his home also. It is the wider home, but it is his. As a man labors to provide for his house, as a woman gives of the best of her strength and forethought to make goodly the house that is her own, so ought they both, proportionately, to do their best to make their larger home, which is their city, a prosperous place. —Connersville (Ind.) News.

Garden Adornment

Garden architecture must echo and reflect and be consistent with the architecture of the house itself. Pergolas of classic design cannot unbend to a rambling, careless little bungalow, nor can a rustic pergola rise to the dignity of a Georgian mansion. Naturally, if there is architectural adornment in the garden, it should be interrelated with that of the house. The use of a pergola is to support vines and to provide a pleasant, shady walk. But there is no reason for its existence if there is no vine for it to support, no destination to lead to. —The Designer Magazine.

Within Reach of All

A little town can't attract much favorable attention with posters and painted signs, but it can be talked about throughout the country, if it has ten acres of flower gardens along its streets. And that's something that's within the reach of the little town.

Many Like Maples

Maples are popular, says the American Tree association of Washington, which invites you to join the tree-planting army. The maples have opposite leaves, with deeply recessed edges, and always bear keys, or seeds, with a long winglike appendage, in pairs. These are as characteristic as acorns are of the oaks. The leaves are borne in pairs, one opposite the other, along the stems. The association, for a 2-cent stamp, will send you re-planting suggestions.

Who's Educated?

Ramsay MacDonald, former British premier, says that the most educated man he knows is one who can't sign his own name. He defines an educated man as one with "certain subtle spiritual qualities which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings and rational in all the affairs of his life."

THE MISER-FLY KING

By DOSS BRITAIN

A HEAVY ring of smoke from Old Barney's pipe obscured the rough counter, as Dave Willetts carefully poured an ounce of gold into the scale-pan of the general store at Balladene. "Hi! Look out there!" exclaimed the storekeeper, and Willetts turned in time to see a monstrous horsety dab down on the little yellow mound, turn quickly over, and flit away like a heavy yellow moth. The scales no longer balanced. "Might as well try ter ketch yer shanlder!" cried Barney, as the miser made an ineffectual effort to grasp the insect as it darted out of the door. "How long have you been out in camp? Haven't you read the papers?" Inquired the storekeeper, while Willetts poured on a good half-thimbleful of gold to make up for the deficiency caused by the fly. "Why? What's in the papers?" asked the discomfited prospector. "Here—I'll show you," replied Barney, selecting a copy of the Sacramento Echo from a pile of yellowing papers under the counter, and pointing with wrinkled, stumpy finger to a displayed article headed "Depredations of the Miser-Fly." Rapidly Willetts scanned the account, with its large "senre" head, dwelling on the extraordinary performances of an insect which naturalists pronounced to be the common horsety, but which had now acquired a new name, through its apparent thirst for gold. Then he went on ordering the rest of his outfit of beans, canned goods, powder, fuses and tools, weighing out the dust as the amounts were called off. "Careful, stranger! Don't you see 'em?" again shouted Old Barney. "Cover your gold, or you won't have any to weigh!" Four large horseties flew heavily over the head of Willetts, yellow with dust. While he was staring at them, another dropped down on the little yellow cone, flipped over with acrobatic agility, eluded the gold-hunter's grasp, and was gone. Willetts was gaining experience and losing gold at the rate of many dollars a minute, and the rest of the transaction was carried on by means of a small bell-glass placed on the scale-pan. It had a little hole in the top, fitted with a funnel-shaped accessory, into which the gold was dropped. But, even as it was poured, two enormous horseties alighted on its side, and were with difficulty driven away to permit a reading of the scale. "Tell me more about these critters!" cried Willetts, now interested in them nearly forty dollars worth. "Well," replied Old Barney, "the first I knew of 'em was early in March. We had a saucer of gold dust in a broken showcase, and in two days it was empty. We filed it up, and in about the same length of time the dust was all gone. Then we watched, and found the flies getting in through a small break in the glass. They were covered with some sort of sticky stuff, and were unusually active. They walloped in the dust, just as you have seen them, and flew out. We caught a few, by stopping up the hole, but couldn't wash 'em off the metal. We had to burn the flies—actually smelt 'em—before we could recover the gold!" And he ended with a laugh which somehow jarred upon the ears of his listener. Early next morning, with what dust Barney and the flies had left him carefully concealed in a buckskin belt, Dave Willetts left Balladene, with the intention of making the trip back to his camp in two days. By making a slight detour he meant to stop over night at the cabin of an old friend, Ben Richway, who, he had heard, was prospecting some forty miles south-east, in Green Gulch, about half way to his own camp. He had not seen Ben since the old days, when they had been suitors for the same girl, for when David Willetts had married Helen, Richway had responded to the call of the gold, and gone West to search for it. David's thoughts, therefore, ran backward and forward, shuttle-like, as he picked his way down the almost perpendicular walls, hundreds of feet high, of the deep canyon called Green Gulch. Time had passed unnoticed, but when he looked at the sun he found it was within an hour of being down. His burros stepped carefully, with cat-like tread, so steep and precarious was the trail. One of the crags gave forth a piercing scream, and a startled eagle flew down the canyon and disappeared. As the eye of Willetts followed its flight, he perceived a light blue smoke curling upward in the still air from a prospector's cabin at the bottom of the gulch, and he knew from the directions he had received that it must be the abode of Ben Richway. It stood on the edge of a precipice, a sheer thousand feet above an apron of ragged granite blocks, and he recalled his informant's remark: "You'll have to climb mighty hard, and you'll find him a peccoliar cuss. Think he's about two-thirds locoed!" Willetts had been but little astonished—a remembrance of certain of Ben's old idiosyncrasies coming back to him—and when at length he came in sight of a man sitting in a moody attitude at the foot of the perpendicular cliff on which the cabin was perched, he had to cough to attract attention. Never had he seen a human face marked with such an expression of hopeless despair as that of his old companion, but its nightmare look gave way at once to the light of recognition and cordial welcome, as the staring eyes were lifted to his own. "You are the very man I was just wishing for!" Ben Richway exclaimed, springing to his feet, dropping the rifle that lay across his lap, and holding the hand of Willetts tightly in a grasp of extraordinary warmth. But, even as he talked, helping to unpack the burros, his strange gray eyes gleamed with the untamed brilliance seen in those of a coyote. Half an hour of hard climbing, lightened by gay chat, was required to reach the airy dwelling of Richway, which Willetts saw, to his surprise, to consist not of one log cabin, but two, with a considerable space between them. In front of them, just balanced over the abyss, was a huge boulder of granite, weighing perhaps a thousand tons. David Willetts attributed the rock to a freak of nature, and the peculiar double house to a whim. When their pipes were aglow after supper, they lived over again their old schoolboy experiences, but some subjects were tactfully avoided, and it was even with some reluctance that Willetts brought himself to ask: "How are you getting along prospecting?" It was with a strange, careworn face that Richway replied: "I'm not doing any just now—in fact, I've done none since early spring—but he seemed unwilling to speak further. Willetts lay awake a long time, haunted by the awful look of despair, the fierce, unhuman brightness of his eyes, and the odd behavior of his host. But while wondering why there was no apparent means of communication between the two semi-detached cabins, and fancying that Ben replied: "The flies would bother me to death." He thought the big balanced rock in the front yard, putting half its length over the precipice, was about to fall upon him, when he awoke in broad daylight to find Richway shaking him vigorously, while a delicious odor of frying bacon filled the room. After breakfast David ventured to put the question that filled his mind, and Richway, with seeming carelessness, led the way to the mysterious apartment, windowless, and with a door opening outward. As they approached the door, Richway, who was about to open it, paused suddenly, snatched his guest's watch-chain loose and crammed it into David's pocket, exclaiming: "You don't want any gold about you here! For God's sake, man, close your mouth—Your teeth are full of it!" Before Willetts could recover from the amazement caused by this strange and uncanny address, Richway had jerked open the door, and there was an angry roar, as if a hundred bees-hives had given up their inmates. Millions of buzzing insects darted out in every direction—lighting everywhere, but staying nowhere. Willetts, who thought his eyes would be knocked from his head, could only see that they were of mammoth size, and darted wildly from place to place. For a moment he stood staring, open-mouthed. Ben Richway smiling slowly at his blank astonishment—and then there was not an insect in sight. "What are they?" he stammered, at length. "They are the Miser-Flies—millions of them—and I am their king!" cried Richway, leading the way into the gloom of the pitch-dark interior, and closing the door. Then, bidding David stand still, he opened, at the opposite end, a shutter two feet square, and dozens of insects darted in with bullet-like velocity, dropped with a splash into a broad vat of fluid covering two-thirds of the floor, until, in a few minutes, it was alive with swimming, scrambling creatures, which Willetts now recognized as horseties. After wallowing in the liquid, they crawled out on slanting boards, dried themselves, and flew slowly to a row of holes in a canvas compartment, occupying most of the other third of the building. In the dim light Willetts stood, amazed and awed, watching swarm after swarm of Miser-Flies, yellow with gold, dart in, almost exhausted from lengthy flights, drop into the vat of mystic liquor, gradually assume their normal dark appearance, dry themselves, and disappear behind the canvas screen. Ben Richway tilted the vat, and a sixteenth of an inch of gold dust glistened upon the bottom; "It will be an inch thick by night!" "How do you make them do it?" Willetts could not help asking, as they walked away, while flies continued to drop into the golden pool with a patter like that of a tremendous rainfall. "That is my secret, but I am going to impart it to you before you go," said Richway, pointing to the tilting rock which they were approaching. "I have been at this thing since early spring, and I don't know how much I am worth—but there are sixty-two sacks full of gold in that grotto!" He indicated a black spot on the face of the great granite boulder. As if to give his guest a nearer view of the opening to his titanic treasure house, Richway jumped lightly upon the rocking boulder, and advanced toward its center. "I want you to have it all, Davy, and make Helen happy!" he said, a glad light shining in his peculiar eyes. While he spoke he took another step forward, the great rock with its golden hoard tipped slowly, and then, with the roar of a thousand thunders, plunged into the abyss. "Tot Falls From Window; Life Saved by Shoestrings" Baltimore, Md.—Fate in the person of an iron-thewed chauffeur and a slender shoestrings saved the life of tiny Anita Danzie as she hung suspended, head downward, from a rusted staple insecurely set in a window on the second floor at her home. The rescue of the three-year-old was as dramatic as it was miraculous. Playing about the second-floor apartment in a new pair of shoes, little Anita fell from the window. Her fall was checked by the slender string in one of the shoes. Gregory Jakimovick, a chauffeur, dashed up the stairway and just as he reached for the feet of the child the rusty, weatherbeaten staple broke. With a frantic grasp he secured a grip on the tiny dress and drew Anita to safety. The Carteret News, a paper with a foundation, having passed the stage of infancy. 552 Roosevelt Avenue

Halts Train and Dives 35 Feet to Save Child

Laurel, Del. — Three-year-old Fred Marvel, son of Capt. Fred Marvel and great-grandson of two former Delaware governors, wandered away from his nurse recently to the railroad bridge and fell into the Laurel river. Bridge Tender H. W. Dunn held up a fast freight train, made a 35-foot dive from the bridge and rescued the youngster.

CLIMBS ON PILOT TO SAVE CHILD

Fireman Makes Sensational Rescue of Small Boy.

Pocatello, Idaho.—A sensational rescue of a little child from death beneath the wheels of a passenger locomotive on the Payette Valley branch is told in a communication stating that Oregon Short Line Fireman George Ramsay had descended to the pilot of the engine via the running board and pushed the two-year-old youngster from the tracks where he was crouching.

According to the account of the near-accident as given by J. F. Whalen, engineer on train 377, the child, Daniel Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orson Smith, was seen when nearing a private crossing by Engineer J. E. Hutchinson, who thought it was a chicken because of the odd position of the child sitting on the engineer's side of the track, leaning back with his head on the rail. He was dressed in a dark coat and had very fair hair, and the engineer was confused as the object grew nearer as to whether it was an animal or a baby. As soon as it was apparent that a child was in danger the air brakes were applied and the fireman, George Ramsay, made his way to the pilot and succeeded in pushing the baby from the track with his hand before the wheels could touch him. Other than a few scratches and a soil smudge on his cheek from the fireman's glove, little Daniel was unhurt. The train was traveling at about fifteen miles an hour, according to the report of the crew, and was stopped four feet beyond the spot where the child had been sitting. Orson Smith, father of the baby, is an employee of the Boise-Payette Lumber company. The mother was ill in bed, which accounts for his being on the crossing, having wandered there while the gate was open.

Crow an Ideal Thief

The crow is an ideal thief. It never bungles its job. Naturalists say that it can carry away the egg of another bird without spilling a drop of the contents. To do this it accomplishes another difficult feat, that of driving its bill partially through the egg without breaking the shell on the other side.

"Holy Carpet" Elaborate

The "Holy Carpet," which pious Mohammedans carry to Mecca every year from Cairo, where it is manufactured, is a very elaborate piece of work. It takes a great part of the year to prepare and costs, when complete, about $2,500,000, the greater part of this expense being due to the enormous amount of precious metal required for the wire used in the embroidery of such a huge piece of work.

THE FAITHFUL PRINCE

ONCE upon a time there lived a king who had three sons and as they were all brought on the same day by the stork the king could not decide to which one to leave his crown.

The king had great wealth in jewels, bags of gold and a vast kingdom. In one room in the stronghold under his castle he placed all of his bags of gold, in another room he placed all of his jewels and in the third room he placed a pearl casket and in this he put a scroll on which he wrote that all his vast kingdom should go to the son who proved worthy.

Then the king called to him his three sons, whose names were Rollo, Carlos and Zalito, and to each he gave a key which fitted the three doors in the stronghold.

To Carlos was given the key to the room in which the gold was stored, to Rollo the key to the jewel room and to Zalito the key which unlocked the door to the room where stood the casket.

"I am getting to be an old man," said the king to his sons, "and the time is not far off when one of you must reign in my place. I am going on a journey and if at the end of one year I do not return unlock the doors which your keys fit in the stronghold of the castle."

One old and trusted servant shared the king's secret and took food to him and attended to his needs.

For awhile all went well. Every day the three brothers went to the stronghold and dusted the keyhole of the door to which they held the key and went away without anything happening.

But one day while the king watched from his secret hiding place he noticed that Zalito as he dusted tried to peek through the keyhole into the secret chamber.

"He," said the king, "is not the one to rule after me."

But not only Zalito was getting impatient, his brother Carlos had once slyly tried the latch of his door to Eaters Turn Junglers Back in Brilliant Fashion in Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Innings While Pounding Out Seven Winning Runs—Clifford Hits Second Home Run of Season in Fifth With Man On.

Every day in every way the games in the Twilight Loop are getting better and better. This fact could have been seen in the game played between the Tigers and Cadillacs at Brady's Field last evening.

The outfield would be made up of Cobb, Spenser and Keeler. I have selected Keeler in preference to Ruth because I regard him as a greater team player.

Shower Breaks Up Game With Sacred Hearts in the Third Inning When Locals Were Going Good and Leading by 1-0 Score

Rain halted the Crosswords and Sacred Hearts in their crucial contest at South Amboy, Sunday, in the third inning with the locals leading 1-0.

The Hearts seemed to have been in for their second defeat at the hands of the Crosswords, who have been playing great ball in the county league thus far, being in a tie with the Levins for second place just two games behind the leaders.

This Sunday the Crosswords will meet the Port Reading A. C. nine at Brady's Field at one o'clock sharp and afterward the Mohicans in a league game at the Port.

The contest with the athletic club will be sort of a grudge affair, since the both teams played once before at Brady's. This game ended in the fifth inning with the score even at four runs.

THREE KILLED AS TRAIN CRASHES INTO AUTO

LOCAL PEOPLE LOSE LIFE AT L. V. GRADE CROSSING

MR. AND MRS. THEO. BLOODGOOD OF CENTRAL AVE. AND LATTER'S MOTHER ARE TOSSED INTO ETERNITY BY LEHIGH VALLEY EXPRESS TRAIN AT GOODMAN'S CROSSING, LAST NIGHT.

AUTOMOBILE RIDES PILOT FOR MILE

Mystery Circles Tragic Accident, As Engineer Is Unable to Bring Two-Car Train to Complete Stop Until After Travelling a Mile—Mr. and Mrs. Bloodgood Are Hurlled From Auto, While Mrs. McCartney Dies Huddled in Back of Car.

One of the most horrible and tragic happenings ever to befall local people, occurred last evening at about 7:42 o'clock, when Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Bloodgood, well known throughout the borough, and Mrs. Bloodgood's mother, Mrs. James McCartney, of East Orange, were instantly killed by a flying locomotive of the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Terril Road, between Plainfield and Rahway.

The pilot of the locomotive, traveling at a record speed, struck the automobile, in which the three persons were riding and carried it for more than a mile before the train was brought to a complete stop.

The little party was bound for Plainfield, taking Mrs. McCartney to visit some friends, after she had paid a visit to her daughter, earlier in the day at the Bloodgood home in Central avenue. After dinner Mr. Bloodgood proposed a little ride to Plainfield where they would call upon friends. As they were approaching Goodman's crossing of the Lehigh Valley road, witnesses told the police, the siren of the oncoming locomotive could be plainly heard.

Mrs. Bloodgood and her mother were naturally talking of something and the running of the motor of the car was making a noise as they neared the crossing. Some say that the automatic gong at the roadside was ringing at the time also. The automobile had cleared the track half way when the pilot of the locomotive struck it.

Mr. Bloodgood was hurled on top of the railroad embankment about fifty feet from the place of the accident, and was dead when witnesses ran to him. His wife was thrown out of the automobile and fell beside the tracks, thirty feet away. She was also dead when reached. Mrs. McCartney was carried in the sedan on the front of the locomotive for a mile before the engine driver could stop his train. It was evident that she had been killed by the impact. Mrs. McCartney was seventy years old. Her home was at East Orange.

The engineer claimed that Mr. Bloodgood appeared oblivious to his danger, and made no attempt, whatsoever, to stop the car. The train, which was bound for New York and was not due to stop until it reached South Plainfield, was making good speed and it was impossible to bring it to a stop until it had gone far beyond the crossing. The automatic gong on the road was ringing, he said, and he added the shriek of his whistle to its din.

Passengers Also Thrown
Passengers in the two cars of the train were flung about as the engi-

Community Building

Experts Say Average Village Lacks Beauty

Nearly 20,000,000 persons in the United States, or about one-fifth of the population, live in villages, and 80,000,000 farming people use these villages for purposes of business, education, religion, health and social well-being. Yet these centers of rural population are usually unattractive and often very ugly.

Some examples of leadership in this respect are recorded by the department, which has been studying the problem of village planning from the standpoint of its importance to the rural community and particularly to the farmer.

It is more as a buying than as a selling place that the farmer makes use of the village. In marketing his principal products he generally deals with some large distributing center.

Care in Beautifying Grounds Means Much In planting it is well to follow some simple rules. Avoid scattered effect of plants; it is better to plant them in groups.

Benefit of Home-Owning "More than one-half the homes in the United States are owned by men who make less than $2,000 a year," declared W. D. Carter, former president of the New York State League of Savings and Loan Associations.

For Tree Planting With attention and care, trees of small size will thrive in small patches of soil where larger trees, with their spreading root systems, might languish, says the American Tree association of Washington.

"Grounds" Mean Much The front lawn and the back yard in some ways are an index to the home, and most persons believe that if the "grounds" in front and rear of the home are untidy there is some indifference in housekeeping in the dining room, kitchen and basement.

Better Taste Needed in City Development Turning American streets into hanging gardens by means of flower boxes on the windows and lamp posts is regarded as an enterprise of doubtful value by the civic development department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Merely Larger Ships "Capital ships" are so called because they are the principal ships of the navy just as the capitals of the various states are the principal cities of the United States.

Continent Believed to Lie Under Ocean

Does the Atlantic ocean roll over a lost continent? Le Plongeon, who deciphered the hieroglyphics among the ruins of Yucatan, in Central America, came upon inscriptions describing a catastrophe which submerged the old Atlantean continent, legends of which have survived in literature from the earliest times.

It may be that this catastrophe gave rise to the equally widespread belief in the flood which destroyed the early inhabitants of our planet. Certain it is that the American continent, although called the New world, is geologically the oldest land on the globe, and the monuments found in the jungles of Yucatan were ancient when the pyramids of Egypt were built.

The catastrophe is supposed to have taken place about 9000 B. C., and at that time there was a highly organized civilization in Yucatan, which would seem to be a remnant of the lost continent. It is not a very large country, yet, in spite of the great difficulties of exploration, the ruins of 172 cities have been discovered.

Easy to Foretell Changes in Weather It is not always easy to tell what the weather is going to be, but a few signs are very reliable. When it is raining you will sometimes notice that the sky starts to clear in the form of an arch.

Longevity From Sap? Longevity through the utilization of sap from trees as a food for human beings is the theory of an Oregon scientist, who is investigating whether there is any foundation for a myth that the ancients who lived to a great age drank the sap of trees.

Pigeons Fly Far Up to the year 1913, 800 miles was the record distance flown by any homing pigeon, but in that year a flight was organized between Rome and Derby, and a bird belonging to C. H. Hudson, a Derby fancier, arrived safely at its loft four weeks after being liberated in Rome.

Chinaman Takes Meals at His Convenience

Among the working class of China, as well as many other countries of the Far and Near East, eating is an outdoor sport. Summer and winter they take their food from little open-air side restaurants, and chopstick it into their mouths, sometimes standing and sometimes sitting, either in the street or in a doorless, windowless shelter beside the street.

The eating goes on continuously. This does not mean of course that every workman eats all day long—as it might seem—but each workman eats when he can, and the restaurants are busy every hour of the day, knowing no separate time for lunch, breakfast, dinner or supper.

Then there are the walking kitchens. One man carries on a pole slung over his shoulder, a cook stove suspended from one end, and a pantry with a counter on top of it on the other end. He moves his stand from time to time, going where business is best for the moment.

Queer Contributions to Medical Science The Warwickshire county councillor who bequeathed his body to the General Hospital, Birmingham, in the hope that light would be thrown on the origin of headache, "the unmerciful scourge that has wrecked my happiness from my earliest recollection," followed a long line of posthumous benefactors to medical science.

Hospitals often receive queer bequests. Charing Cross hospital not long ago received a bag containing forty-eight farthings, a bust of Queen Victoria, and the return half of a railway ticket. Another famous hospital received the deeds of a freehold house, a pawdicket for a valuable sporting trophy, a diamond ring, several prize rabbit skins, and twenty apidistrians in pots.—London Times.

Atmosphere Above Earth The exact height of the earth's atmosphere is not known. Some estimates, based on the calculated heights of shooting stars when they first become luminous, place the limit at which atmosphere has a density sufficient to produce any observable effects at about 200 miles.

Surely All Can Do This Little towns say they can't afford to beautify themselves on any plausible plan. We believe they can afford to beautify by planting all the roadsides with peonies, roses, dahies, canas and all such flowers as require only the expense of multiplication and spade work.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Arrange Shrubbery as Nature Has Placed It

Don't forget to observe nature's way in arranging shrubs, trees and flowers. In the woods you seldom find trees growing in straight lines, stiff and formal. The margins and outlines of woods and thickets have indentations, bays and openings which give beautiful pictures and vistas.

Don't forget that looking from the inside of your home each window should frame a nature picture. Don't think of home gardening as only a summertime effect. Your home can be planted with hardy, permanent shrubs and trees to secure equally beautiful wintertime pictures.

Don't permit your planting to obstruct the sunlight and ventilation of your home. Don't needlessly cut and prune trees. A good tree on your building site may be the key to a successful planting plan.

New Proposition to Make Desert Useful The suggestion was made recently that the Sahara might become the greatest power-station in the world by the utilization of the heat of its countless miles of burning sand.

Tribute To Carteret News

In a personal letter sent to THE CARTERET NEWS, Judge Cornelius Doremus, defeated candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, pays a tribute to this newspaper for the courteous and fair way THE CARTERET NEWS presented articles in connection with his candidacy.

He says:

"I have had so many things to do and the pressure has been so great since the close of the strenuous campaign for the Governorship that I have been unable to do much in the way of correspondence.

"I want to take this opportunity to express to you my very sincere thanks for the very kindly attitude taken by your paper toward my candidacy. You were most courteous and fair, as well as prompt, in presenting to the people of the State all the facts relating to me and my efforts in connection with the gubernatorial nomination. I shall always have in mind the importance to my campaign of the support of your valuable paper. The fairness with which the papers covering this campaign treated the gubernatorial situation is marked and appreciated.

"I am sending this letter to the papers whose support I feel was fair and broad and if you care to publish it you have my permission."

A Good Showing

Safety first marked the celebration of Independence Day in Carteret, because of the fact that the fireworks did not claim any victims. While in other communities many children burned their fingers, received powder-filled eyes and received other injuries, this community escaped it. Only one small incident of burned fingers was noted.

This is good news for our town. We believe it sets a new record, for in years past, numerous children were victims of firecrackers. The fathers and mothers of the children should be complimented for the warnings they have given the tots, and also the police for the splendid supervision throughout the day.

No mishaps were reported during the holiday jam of traffic through our main streets, which is also most encouraging.

Tree Rings Will Tell

Secrets to Scientists
Scientists of the Field Museum of Natural History expect to learn what the weather has been like for 200 years or more in the vicinity of Chicago by studying the rings on oak and willow stumps, says a museum bulletin. It has been found that trees of various kinds register within their trunks a fairly accurate record of the seasons, because the wood that grew in the summer and that which grew in the spring can be distinguished in the annual rings. By these comparisons, deductions as to the amount of rainfall and sunshine that the trees received can be made.

Carrying the study further, the microscope is expected to disclose what part of the wood was formed during cold, rainy and dry seasons, for the structure of the little sap tubes differs according to these conditions. Experiments and observations also have shown that the greatest growth in trees occurs on the side opposite the direction of the winds. For instance, there are trees in Colorado in which the heart of the trunk is close to the bark on the side from which the prevailing winds blow.

Squeak in Doc's Motor Turns Out to Be Cat
Chicago.—Dr. Simon Stern, 5920 South Michigan avenue, couldn't get his car started one morning. Every time he tried the starter the engine let out ear-splitting yowls.
In spite of the rain the doctor had to get out and look at last. As he lifted the hood something that seemed as large as a horse and proved as active as a cyclone jumped off the engine into his face and shot down the street in a streak.
When the doctor recovered he found the tip of a black cat's tail and some scraps of black fur on the engine. He remembered then that he had left the hood up all night.

DROWNS AS SISTER ATTEMPTS RESCUE

Little Girl Is Saved Only by Friend's Heroism.

Chicago.—Ten-year-old Ruth Zemke made a desperate effort to save her brother and a girl chum from drowning in the lake at the foot of Thirty-fourth street. She succeeded in dragging the girl to shore, but her six-year-old brother sank beneath the surface before she could swim to where he was struggling in the water.
Bertha Batmas, eight years old, 8343 Lowe avenue, who was saved by Ruth's heroism, was uninjured as a result of her narrow escape from drowning.
The two girls and the little boy were playing on the shore. The boy began to fling stones in the water, standing on the piling. He lost his balance and fell into the water which was deep at that point.
Bertha screamed and leaning over, attempted to extend a helping hand to the boy in the water. She, too, toppled in. Ruth, the oldest of the trio, was the only one who knew how to swim. She leaped in, seized Bertha by the hair and helped her to climb out.
Then she turned to help her brother. He had sunk beneath the surface and though she dived twice in frantic efforts to find his body the girl was forced to give up the search. Exhausted, she was barely able to climb upon the piling.

Murder Confession Bared After 80 Years

Ithaca, N. Y.—The fate of a woman who disappeared some eighty years ago became known by a statement made public by Miss Amelia Crum explaining the disappearance of Mrs. Edward H. Ruloff, wife of a man who was hanged in Binghamton for the murder of a store clerk. It was always understood that Ruloff died on the gallows denying that he could explain his wife's disappearance. But the criminal, prior to his execution, did confess to his lawyer that he had murdered his wife and had sunk her body in Cayuga lake, near Taughanock falls. He placed the body in a chest and weighted it with iron. It was never found.
Ruloff's lawyer, on his deathbed, related the confession to Landon D. Crum, a cousin to Mrs. Ruloff and father of Miss Amelia Crum.
Interest in the mystery was recently aroused by the discovery of a woman's skeleton by excavators near the new State Agriculture college. The theory that it was that of Mrs. Ruloff was disproved when several other skeletons were found, indicating a forgotten graveyard. However, the talk induced Miss Crum to make her statement, clearing up the ancient mystery, all the parties concerned in it being now dead.
A daughter of Ruloff, who disappeared at the same time her mother did, had been given away by the unnatural father, he confessed. She was brought up in Philadelphia, and later married a government employe in Washington.

Prince Sleeps in Park; Hopes to Win Rich Wife

Budapest.—Police seized an old man in rags who passed the night in a park sleeping on a bench, and from his papers he was found to be the former Prince Alexander Hohenloe-Oehringen. He had been wandering from one cheap place to another until he received help from a washerwoman, who gave him food and shelter out of pity. Meanwhile he asked a lawyer to find a rich wife for him, but the lawyer's endeavors were not successful.
Ex-Prince Hohenloe-Oehringen formerly served as colonel of a Bavarian cavalry regiment. In 1895 he married against his family's will; he had to renounce his right as Prince Hohenloe. The marriage was dissolved during the war. He left the German army and married in Vienna a second time, but his wife left him, it is alleged, in consequence of his having squandered her money.

Love, the Great Secret

I believe that love is the secret of the world; it is like the philosopher's stone they used to look for, and almost as hard to find, but when one finds it, it turns everything to gold. Without love man is a brute, and nothing but a brute; with love he draws near to God. When everything else falls away love will endure, because it cannot die while there is any life, if it is true love, for it is immortal.—Girl's Companion.

MACK STARS TRIP UP CADILLACS AND ATTAIN FLYING PACE

GAME PROVIDES A BIT OF RED PEPPER

George Morgan, Cadillacs' Plucky Little Catcher, Shows Host of Fans Some Pep and Boners in Close Game at Brady's Field Last Evening.

By Eddie Ekroy

Some pep enlivened last evening's ball game between the Cadillacs and the Mack Stars at Brady's Field. It was the Cadillac outfit which figured in this action, but the ball game did not go their way, in spite of the fact however, and the Stars grabbed a hard fought fight by an 8-7 score, winning when three Cadillac batsmen failed to bring Sabo in from second with the tying run, in the final inning.

George Morgan, the plucky little catcher of the losing aggregation, saw an opportunity to make an extra put-out, and he spared no time nor space in making it. He ran all the way to second to unpile several Star runners there, and after a scramble, a little lively running, and a bad bone, George tagged Fry out, who didn't know whether to run to first, second, third or home. He retired him at the halfway post between first and second, however. That made it the first out in the inning—the fourth—but Szelag one of the men piled up at second, scored because there was no one to cover home plate and receive Morgan's peg from second. Gerve Harrigan got his feet mixed up with his ears and hair and had a terrible time getting out of the pitcher's box. This fix can be blamed upon the comedy, which made Harrigan laugh heartily. It was, in fact, something worth laughing at.

The play gave the Stars a run, which the Eaters could not get back, even though it was starting them in their faces in the last frame, when Ernie Sabo was parked on second. Joe Coughlin started the frame with a walk and went to second on a wild pitch by Felix Mack, from whence he scored on a two-base swat by Sabo. Cutter popped to Biesel, Garber fanned, and Clifford hit a high one to Tom Ginda in left field thus ending the game.

It was the fifth game this season in which the Cadillacs lost by a single run.

BASEBALL NOTES

- It looks as though Bentley of the Glants was in for his best year. It takes nine men to win a ball game, but one of them can lose it. Outfielder Thrasher has been obtained by Pittsfield from Worcester. The Athletics, Connie Mack's clever baseball machine, average 22 years of age. It is being demonstrated again that the winter is no time to win a baseball pennant. E. R. Jentes, 23, shortstop, was elected captain of the baseball team of the University of Illinois. We may expect to see a great race for base stealing between Washington and Chicago this year. W. F. Christman, 23, has been elected captain of the varsity baseball nine at Northwestern university. Manager Eddie Onslow of Providence has cut loose two pitchers, a right-hander, and Murravy, a southpaw.

Lincolns Drop Seventh: Carteret Jrs. Now Enter

By Printers' Devil Due to the fact that they dropped their seventh straight game—not winning any—in the Junior Twilight League, the Lincoln baseballers decided that they should disband from the loop. Another team was quickly gathered up to fill the vacancy, however, when the Carteret Juniors consented to enter with Fred Lauter as spokesman.

The Juniors will sport the same classy outfit which travelled fastly despite bad breaks throughout the entire campaign of 1924. The team will have practically the same lineup as in former years with the exception of two or three men. Special arrangements were made with the other clubs in the circuit in regards to the release of players who in former seasons made their appearance with the Carteret Juniors.

The lineup is: Lauter, cf.; Duncan, rf.; Helley or F. Richey, lf.; Harrigan, p.; doubtful, c.; York, 1b.; Sexton, 2b.; Cromwell, ss.; and Skurat, 3b. The Juniors will square off with the Clovers in a battle at Brady's Field this evening. Sid Currie, who was chosen to catch in on a vacation and another backstop will have to be secured, probably Balerich.

Leaguers Wollop Newark A. A. For Eighth Straight

By Jennings Vila The usual happened again. The Carteret All League Stars found the Newark A. A. easy in their game at Brady's Field last Sunday, thus winning their eighth straight victory of the year, 14-8. The score does not indicate that Carteret had it all its own way. But when the visitors came to bat in their half of the sixth inning they were trailing by 11 to 0. Felix Mack and the rest of the boys incidentally let up and the Newarkers knocked a trio of counters across the dish. They repeated the act in the seventh and ended their scoring in the eighth with two more. Carteret, in the meantime added three to their total. It was pretty much one-sided. Hitting was not plentiful, however, and a majority of the runs should not have been scored. Carteret secured ten from the delivery of Pitcher Webber, who belted out a homer for his team in the eighth; while Mack was touched for a total of nine safeties. It was the poor infield playing that was responsible for the scoring of all these runs, for as it is seen, no more than ten hits were made by either side. Johnny Leshick, whose playing has always brought much favorable comment, alone committed four misplays, most of which were on easy ground balls. Gip Ginda and Ernie Sabo made an error apiece. The Newarkers as a team bobbed up a half dozen hit balls in addition.

CROSSWORDS TAKE PORTERS VICTIMS

Wallop Port Reading A. C. to Tune of 13-7 Score, After Spotting Them 5 Runs in Opening Frame—Rose Pitches Well.

By Correspondent

The Crosswords defied the Port Reading A. C. challenge to all comers in the County Junior League. And after spotting the Porters five runs in the very first inning of their game at Brady's Field, Sunday afternoon, they walked off with one of the easiest victories of their present campaign, 13 to 7.

"We challenge and will no doubt beat any team in the County League," was the objection defied by the locals; and they played remarkable ball in upholding the standard of the league, of which the locals are about the strongest team. The visitors made terrible threats but nothing resulted of any of them, with the exception of that in the first inning. Pitcher Rose was not exactly warmed up yet and the Port Reading batters maced his delivery for five counters. After that they were helpless and admitted defeat before many more innings passed into history. Both combinations met previously in the season and the combat ended in a four-run tie, the game being called due to a poor decision by the umpire. This victory gives the edge on the series to the Crosswords 1-0.

The Capitols of Elizabeth won a 4-0 shutout from the Don Boscos, a team hailing from that vicinity, Saturday afternoon, with Topsy Roth, local star, on the mound. Roth gave the losers only four safeties and fanned fourteen batters. It was an interesting game throughout, as the Capitols did not win until the eighth inning, when they walloped a brace of tallies over the plate.

TIGERS FAIL WHEN DOUBLE PLAYS ACT

Leshick, Ginda, Dunn Combination Stops Champions With Two Nicely Executed Double Killings Tuesday Night.

Although they played sparkling ball at all stages of the game, the Champion Tigers lost a 7-4 battle to the Belmonts at Brady's Field, Tuesday evening. The Belmonts played just a little bit better; and at just the right time to defeat their rivaling players. Leshick, Gip Ginda, and Roy Dunn executed two double plays which actually cut off all hopes of a Tiger victory for the evening. And then if it wasn't some outstanding play, Frankie Love would step in and make the Junglers pop up messily files.

CADILLACS FAIL IN PINCHES AND LOSE

Outbit Belmonts Seven to Four, But Safeties Do Not Come When Men Are On Bases—Leshick's Triple Wins Game.

Failing to hit in the pinches lost for the Cadillacs at Brady's Field, Friday night, and won another ball game for the leading Belmonts, 5-4. It was an interesting contest throughout; the winners took the Cadillacs' measure only after a desperate struggle whose climax was reached in the seventh inning when John Leshick sent a doubtful triple to left field and scored on Sabo's error of Joey Elko's ground ball.

The Eaters had several chances to hit runs over the plate, but helplessness with the bat never got a team to the top. Incidentally they got three hits more than the Harmonizers, although they were secured for naught! In the second inning Sabo and Clifford both singled, but Cutter fled to right, Lee struck out, and Trusko grounded out to Leshick at short. Cutter doubled in the fourth with only one out, but Clifford and Lee both failed to bring him through.

The fifth, however, was the only frame in which the Cadillacs meant business, and this was a result of a two base swat by Ernie Sabo. Coughlin also did good work. Trusko started with a single and after Salkay fanned, Morgan drew a base on balls. Casey lifted one to Gip Ginda in right, but Coughlin scored Trusko with another single and Sabo's double tallied Morgan and Coughlin. Sabo was left stranded when Cutter failed.

The Belmonts surely are the hardest bunch of players to tumble over. It is the opinion of many fans that the Belmonts could win a game without getting a hit.

Looks Like First Defeat

When the Belmonts of Elizabeth come here this Sunday to do battle with the All League Stars, the fans will be in for an interesting afternoon of baseball. There is no doubt that this statement will fall true to the letter, for the Elizabethans fought the locals in an eleven-inning contest about seven weeks ago, Carteret winning on Butch Worth's home run clout to right field territory. Kochansky and Gregory will take care of the visitors' battery work; while Felix Mack will fling 'em over to either Morgan or Frankie Fry.

Chapel Old Structure in Shakespeare's Time

Of all the beautiful and interesting buildings which arrest the attention of the visitor to Stratford-on-Avon, none arouses a deeper sentiment than the chapel of the Guild of the Holy Cross, standing right adjacent Chapel street as it does, and closing the vista as seen from both that and High street, the London Times says.

Founded about 1298, from which period the chancel dates, the nave was rebuilt by the famous benefactor of Stratford, Sir Hugh Clopton, about 1400.

To us, however, its main interest is that, in the time of Shakespeare's childhood it served—as, indeed, it still serves—as the school chapel for the boys attending the grammar school which adjoins it.

'BAD' CONVICT REFORMS; NOW MODEL CITIZEN

Conscience Hurts After Escape so He Returns and Finishes Sentence.

Houston, Texas.—Success as an engineer, social position, ease, a big salary—all these deserted for the life inside a Texas prison because a trusty could not run away from his conscience. This is the story of the "worst" convict in the penitentiary who came to be a trusty through the faith of a friend, who became a competent engineer with encouragement, and who broke his promise and escaped, only to give up an enviable position in life to satisfy the demands of an awakened conscience.

Bill Jones, a poor mechanic, was given a life sentence for the murder of a rich man who attacked him because he wanted to marry the rich man's daughter. Bill entered the penitentiary bitter and resentful.

Once, in a fight with guards resulting from an effort to bomb his way through the prison walls, he injured a guard seriously. He was tried and given an additional sentence.

A few months later he and another prisoner seized another opportunity to escape. They hung the engineer and fireman out of the cab of a penitentiary locomotive which worked in and out of the walls. They opened wide the throttle in a dash for liberty.

Liberty is Costly.

The sentries fired at them, and officers immediately gave chase. Bill was found with a bullet through his chest.

With a Bullet Through His Chest.

With a Bullet Through His Chest.

Chest and taken back to the prison where he lay for a long time hanging in the balance between life and death.

At length he began to mend, physically but not morally. The prison superintendent, then Col. L. A. Whately, decided he would try his hand with the man, after all the others had failed.

"Bill," he said, "if you'll give me your word that you'll behave yourself and try to reform, I'll make you a trusty."

Make him a trusty—Bill Jones, the worst man in the pen! The superintendent's sincere faith touched Bill's heart.

That was the beginning of Bill's reformation. The first step he took toward reforming was to take up correspondence courses in engineering.

By circumstances again thrust him under the hard-boiled sergeant under whom he had first served, and then trouble began. Finally Bill ran away, because, as he afterward declared, he knew he would be impelled to kill the sergeant if he remained.

Fortune Favors Bill.

Bill went to San Francisco, then down the West coast to South America, where he built railroads in the Andes. From there he drifted to Africa, and there became superintendent of a railroad company at a handsome salary.

He was free and safe from prison, but not from conscience. Flee to the ends of the earth as he may, he could not escape the accusing finger of self-reproach for having broken his promise to the kindly superintendent who had faith in him.

He made good again as a convict, and after a few years was granted a full pardon. Today he is a respected and honored citizen, and again holds an important engineering position in one of the large concerns of the country.

Key to Treasure House

Just think of the vast treasures of words full of rich and rare meaning that lie locked up in our language, hidden away from common use and enjoyed only by the learned few! It is as if, possessing the mineral wealth of the world, ready for the mint, we scornfully turned aside to remain in poverty.

The dictionary constitutes the treasure house of our language. As a people we needlessly deprive ourselves of the great helps of our command. In our daily tasks, not one of which can be performed without the use of words, we possess only the most primitive tools, while we might be equipped with the keenest and most efficient.

near applied his brakes. None of them were hurt, however. The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Bloodgood and Mrs. McCartney were taken to a morgue in Rahway. Dr. C. A. Brokaw, county physician, started an investigation of the case.

Mr. Bloodgood was an employee of the United States Metals Refining Company and, with his wife, was well known throughout the borough. Both were busily engaged, at all times, in Red Cross work; while Mrs. Bloodgood was occupied with attentions at the Free Public Library. They are survived by a daughter, Anetta, who is spending a vacation at Asbury Park. Anetta is of high school age.

Laborer Injured

Peter Wank, twenty-nine, of 29 Hudson street, sprained his back and sustained cuts about the body while at work at the plant of the U. S. Metals Refining Company shortly after 9 o'clock Wednesday night.

The injured man was taken to the Rahway hospital at 9:45 P. M. Hospital attendants said this morning that the man's condition was good. The cause of the accident was not given.

General indications point to a big success of the social and dance which will be held under the auspices of the Young Ladies of St. Elias Greek Catholic church on the night of July 18, at the community house.

Old Army Punishment

The expression "running the gantlet" meaning to suffer ill treatment at many hands, is derived from a form of military punishment once in vogue, in which the culprit, stripped to the waist, was obliged to run repeatedly between two lines of soldiers facing inward, each one of whom struck at him with a short stick or switch.

Variation in Story

Leon Bloy, to whose memory a monument has been erected in France, was a deep student of ingratitude. One day a lady asked him if the children of this era were usually ingrate. "Yes, madame. Allow me to tell you a story. There was a young villager who wanted to leave the parental roof, and who pestered his father into dividing the family live stock and giving him his share."

Hippo Carries Dentist

The hunters of Africa say that the hippopotamus carries his dentist around with him. The latter is in the form of a bird which accompanies the big animal in his wanderings, and after indulging in a full meal the hippo will stretch out in a comfortable position and with its mouth wide open will give a big grunt or two, and this is the signal for the bird, which flies into the animal's mouth and makes a round of the latter's teeth, picking the molars perfectly clean of all particles.

Constant Assortment

"Life is an endless battle against clutter," says a writer in Scribner's. Precious Metals

Statisticians compile some enormous figures at times when they are seeking a total for something, as for instance the amount of gold and silver in circulation in the world, or if not in circulation, accounted for. They have set forth that the value of gold is, roughly speaking, $18,100,374,530, whereas the value of silver is about $18,256,918,134.

Odd Lightning Facts

Photography reveals many things about lightning. One is that a great many flashes are multiple, consisting of several discharges in rapid succession along the same path, says Nature Magazine. These flashes are studied by means of a camera mounted on a vertical axis and turned from side to side by clockwork. The pictures are taken at night, the shutter being left open until a flash occurs.

Portable Stove Was Ben Franklin's Idea

The first stoves were simply hot stones. In using his flint knife, man evidently discovered that stone held heat, and soon he was utilizing his discovery. Huge round stones have been found which appear to have been used for purposes of cooking food. Some are flat, some concave. A large pot of a later period has been found containing several smooth, round stones. It is believed that early man heated water by dropping hot stones into it.

When Greeley Proved He Was No Minister

Most people know Girard college, if they know it at all, for its stringent rule that no clergyman shall ever enter its gate. Mr. Walling reported that the Perth Amboy Gas Company is now installing gas mains along Edgar street, that as soon as this is completed, the gas mains will be extended through Sharot street, Lincoln avenue and Warren street. In regard to the extension of lines to St. Ann's street, officials of the company requested the filing of a petition from the land owners of that street.

The cruelty was discovered by neighbors yesterday and Joseph Galvanek, a member of the Board of Health, was notified. He in turn advised the police and Motorcycle Officer John Andres invaded the house, made use of a hack saw and released the boy.

PETITION FOR ATHLETIC FIELD

Carteret Parent-Teacher Association and Approximately 1,000 Citizens Urge the Purchase of Site at High School.

MOVE IS FAVORED

Brief Session of the Board of Education Is Held Tuesday Night—Another Meeting Is Scheduled for Monday Night.

The Board of Education held its regular meeting on Tuesday night. Present at the session were Commissioners Heil, Coughlin, Bishop, Bradford and Schwartz. A plea for an athletic field and playground, situated in the rear of the new high school was made to the board in the form of a petition signed by members of the Carteret Parent-Teacher Association and about 1,000 residents of this borough. The petitioners urged the board to buy a plot of ground to be used by the students of all the schools as an athletic field and playground.

Commenting on the petition, President Heil said the request was a timely one, that the need of an athletic field was evident. In providing proper space, the pupils would be taken off the public highways where there is constant danger lurking. He believed that the purchase of a strip of land in the rear of the high school would be most advisable. The president suggested the appointment of a committee which would select the site. The matter would then be brought to the attention of the voters at a special referendum for their approval or rejection.

Commissioner William V. Coughlin, who originally suggested the idea of an athletic field, declared that the rear of the high school would be central for it. He hoped that this plan would be quickly adopted.

Commissioner Lewis N. Bradford suggested that the board as a whole could serve on the committee on the plan. Commissioner Theodore Bishop also favored the petitioners' suggestion, but he would make use of vacant spaces adjoining the existing schools. On motion of Commissioner Isadore Schwartz, the board decided to discuss the question next Monday night when the entire board will be in attendance.

In the absence of Commissioners Alex Lebowitz, Frank Brown and Robert Jeffreys the payment of bills was held up until next Monday night. Miss Ethel Decker, of Lineoleumville, and Miss Kathryn Higgins of Merchantville were appointed to teachers upon recommendation of the supervising principal and the teachers' committee.

The Universal Audit Company, of New York, was selected to audit the books of the board for 1924-25.

The cost of the night school here for the last three years including teachers' salaries, text books, educational supplies, medical supplies, library books, manual training and economics was: 1923, $132.13 per pupil; 1924, $120.92 per pupil, and 1925, $105.59 per pupil, according to figures presented last night.

The State Board of Education approved the regulation of the high school here as doing four years of approved secondary school work.

The following rules were adopted for the playground: Open daily, excepting Sunday at the specified hours, 9 to 11 in the morning, 3 to 5 in the afternoon and 7 to 9 in the evening; instructor is on the grounds during the hours conducting regular and organized play; a nurse is on the ground during the specified hours giving all her attention to the health of the children; the truant officer opens the playgrounds, prepares and operates the apparatus during the specified hours and closes the playground at the close of each play session. A guard has charge of the playground every night from 9 to 1 o'clock.

This coming Sunday the parish of St. Joseph's church will hold its family excursion to Highland Beach and East Long Branch. Like in years past, all the participants are promised a most delightful time. Some will enjoy the bathing, others the many amusements offered and others will stroll about the beach and enjoy the fine ocean breezes.

Everything is in readiness for the trip. The train, specially chartered for the trip, will leave the Chrome station at 10.51 A. M.; Liebig's lane, 10.54; Roosevelt avenue station, 11 A. M.; East Rahway, 11.10 A. M.; Port Reading, 11.15, and Perth Amboy at 11.23. Returning the excursion will leave the Highlands at 7.30 P. All the members worked hard. A printed program will be distributed so that the passengers may enjoy reading while on the way for the days outing.

Highland Beach is one of the finest on the coast. The bathing at this point is excellent.

INDUSTRY HERE IS RECOVERING

Armour & Company's Fertilizer Business In the Year Just Ended Was Best Since the Year of 1920.

RECOVERY IS NOTED

The Outlook For the American Fertilizer Industry for the Current Year Is Exceptionally Good, Says Report.

Results of Armour & Co.'s fertilizer business for the year ending June 30 indicate that the year just closed was the best one since 1920. The whole American fertilizer industry, according to Charles H. MacDowell, president of the Armour Fertilizer Works, has apparently turned the corner to increasing prosperity and is now in a more favorable position to render service to agriculture and to earn profits than it has been in the last five years.

In a review of business conditions affecting the industry, Mr. MacDowell says:

"The outlook for the American fertilizer industry for the current year is exceptionally good. During the year just ended operations have been conducted on a more profitable basis and there are indications that not only Armour's fertilizer interests, but also the industry as a whole, are now in a more substantially sound condition than at any time in the last decade.

"This improvement is due primarily to three factors: better business methods in the industry itself, greater buying power on the part of most farmers and prices which enable economically operated plants to make reasonable profits.

"Naturally this betterment is reflected in the operation of the Armour Fertilizer Works, which is one of the largest factors in the business. Armour's twenty-odd plants, covering the territory east of the Mississippi, from New England to the Gulf, as well as in Cuba and Porto Rico, produce about 12 per cent of the total tonnage of manufactured fertilizer. Our earnings for the last year, considering the fact that the industry as a whole is now on a more substantial foundation than it was during the war and years immediately thereafter, will be the best we have had since 1920.

"Undoubtedly the most important factor contributing to the fertilizer industry's recovery from the post-war depression and to its present increasingly satisfactory position lies in the reorganization of its methods of doing business. It is now more nearly on a cash basis through sales to merchants at firm prices instead of as heretofore on credit terms, involving uncertainty of price to both customers and manufacturers.

"In other words, the fertilizer business is getting nearer to a short-time basis rather than extended credit basis, which prevailed heretofore on the theory that the farmer should pay for his fertilizer out of receipts from the growing crop. This necessitated on the part of manufacturers extensive financing, as well as manufacturing and distributing operations. With a lessening of the credit risk and expense consequently entailed the industry should benefit materially in reduced cost of carrying on its business."

Spectacles Go Back to the Middle Ages

The little storm rushes with which so many people have to cover their eyes, and generally known as spectacles were first invented in the Middle Ages. At that time Latin was in universal use as the language of all science and scholarship, and it was therefore only natural that this new invention should be given a Latin name. Spectaculum comes from the word which means to see or to look at, and this was the title, afterward corrupted into our "spectacles," that was given to these aids to vision. Later on in history, the clumsy framework of the old spectacles was improved upon, and the new and lighter glasses were called eye-glasses or pince-nez (pinch nose), to distinguish them from the old spectacles. In a sense, of course, all eye-glasses are spectacles, but we use the word only as denoting a special form of frame.

Old Mythical Hero

Siegfried is a semi-fabulous personage of superior strength and beauty, who occupies a conspicuous place in various Teutonic legends and is especially distinguished as the hero of the great German epic, the Nibelungen-Lied. He cannot be identified with any historical personage. In an old saga, he is represented as having slain a dragon and bathed in its blood, whereby his skin became as hard as horn, except in one spot where a leaf intervened. But he is most celebrated for having vanquished the ancient fabulous royal race of the Nibelungen and taken away their immense treasures of gold and gems. He was finally slain by Hagen, who had learned from Chromchild the secret spot where alone Siegfried was mortal.—Kansas City Times.

"Gold Mine of Europe"

Transylvania, in the midst of the Carpathian mountains, was once called the gold mine of Europe, as that continent received most of its precious metal from that source. The production has greatly diminished.

In 1640 there appeared in a sheet-called M-derate the first-known English newspaper advertisement. It was an inquiry for a stolen horse and the offer of a reward for its return.

Such notice shall be mailed to the principal business office of said company at Newark, N. SECTION 10: The Borough Council may from time to time by ordinance reasonably amend this ordinance by changing the designation of the manner of placing, erecting and constructing under this ordinance, the poles, conduits or other fixtures, appliances or appurtenances of said Company, or the particular location of the same. A copy of any such amendment shall be served on said Company in the manner above provided at least ten (10) days before the public hearing on such amendatory ordinance. No such amendment shall affect the rights of said Company in respect to poles, conduits or other fixtures, appliances or appurtenances erected or constructed before the adoption of said amendment except as provided in the preceding section.

SECTION 11: Upon any of the streets, roads, avenues and highways in this Borough, now or which may be occupied by the poles or posts of said New York Telephone Company, its successors and assigns, or any other company or corporation having legal authority to erect and maintain poles or posts, said New York Telephone Company and such other companies or corporations may use the same poles, provided they can agree so to do.

SECTION 12: Said Company shall provide, free of charge to this Borough, as long as this ordinance continues in effect, space on its poles for the placing by this Borough of one (1) crossarm, or, in lieu thereof, two (2) pins on a crossarm of said Company to be designated by it, and space in its main subways (not exceeding in the latter one (1) clear duct of standard size), to accommodate the wires or electrical conductors operated by this Borough in connection with its police patrol or fire alarm telegraph signal systems; provided, however, that such crossarms, wires or electrical conductors shall not be installed, used or maintained in such manner as to interfere with the crossarms, wires or electrical conductors which said Company, its successors or assigns, may then have or may hereafter from time to time place on its poles or in its main subways, nor shall said Company be held liable for any damages arising from the attachment to its poles or the location in its main subways of any such crossarms, wires or electrical conductors used by this Borough. Before proceeding with the attachment of its said crossarms and wires to the poles or the placing of its said electrical conductors in the main subways or manholes of said Company, either on the part of itself or on the part of a person, firm or corporation engaged to perform such work, this Borough shall give to said Company thirty (30) days notice in writing, in order that the work may be performed under the supervision of said Company.

Main subway is to be construed as including all subways except single duct connections from manholes to curb lines.

SECTION 13: The permission and consent given and granted by this ordinance shall continue and be in force for a period of fifty (50) years from the date of the approval thereof, and throughout the full term of this ordinance, or of any renewal and assigns, shall furnish safe, adequate and proper service within this Borough, and keep and maintain its property and equipment in such condition as to enable it to do so.

SECTION 14: Nothing herein contained shall be construed to grant unto said New York Telephone Company, its successors and assigns, an exclusive right, or to prevent the granting of permission and consent to other companies for like purposes on any of the streets, roads, avenues or highways of this Borough.

SECTION 15: The term "Borough" as used in this ordinance, in its application to the Borough of Carteret, shall be held to apply to and include any form of municipality or government into which this Borough, or any part thereof, may at any time hereafter be changed, annexed or merged, and the term "Mayor and Council" or any other term herein used in referring to the governing body of this Borough shall be held to apply to and include the governing body of such other form of municipality.

SECTION 16: The permission and consent herein contained shall supersede and be in lieu of all other permissions, consents, rights and privileges heretofore granted by this Borough to The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company or New York Telephone Company, except that it shall in no way affect the right, privilege and authority acquired by said The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company (now New York Telephone Company), its successors and assigns, to construct, operate and maintain a system of subways, conduits, wires, cables, electrical conductors and fixtures, including the necessary manholes and street openings, with poles and lateral connections to property lines where necessary, in, through, upon and under the following public road or avenue in this Borough (formerly in the Township of Woodbridge) to wit: the road leading from Rahway Avenue, Woodbridge Village, to Rahway Avenue, Carteret, via Port Reading and Canda, now known as Woodbridge Avenue.

Carteret Juniors Play Well to Rout Libertys

Playing their first game in the Junior League, the Carteret Juniors romped home ahead of the Libertys at the Tank Oval by a 9-7 score, on Wednesday evening. The Juniors were scheduled to meet the Clovers at Brady's Field on Friday evening, but the latter team did not appear for the engagement, this making it the second successive time in which they did this trick. The Clovers lost by a forfeit, consequently, 9-0.

The Libertys were held to five hits by Pitcher Johnny Skurat, while the winners played fine ball, showing the losers something which the Lincolns were not able to in their seven games, all of which were lost.

DIDN'T LIKE NAME OF YANKEE TEAM

Watson Couldn't Stand for New York American League Club.

The recent release of Pitcher John Watson by the New York Giants recalls an interesting yarn Watson was wont to tell pertaining to the way he dodged a possible chance to play with the Yankees.

Watson was playing with Fort Smith then. A Yankee scout dropped into Tulsa, Okla., where the Fort Smith team was to play a series. The word got to Watson that the scout wanted to see him pitch and had a contract ready for him to sign if he showed the right amount of promise.

Watson, born and raised in Louisiana, had seen or heard little of the world when he began to play baseball and carried an inborn hatred of the word "Yankee" inherited from his ancestors of Civil war days. So he decided he didn't want to play with a team bearing that name.

Tulsa failed to collect more than a hit or two off him in four innings. Watson started to figure out some other way of discouraging the "ivory bunter." Suddenly he had a bright idea. He sat down on the bench after the next inning, calmly took off his shoes and socks, and with them in his hand walked across the diamond, through the exit gate and on to the hotel, a few blocks away.

The scout saw him go.

Later, when Watson sat in the lobby of the hotel, the scout gave him the once over with an odd expression on his face, then checked out and headed for the depot. Watson saw him go and followed him to the train to make sure he had departed.

Later on Watson got a chance to show his stuff to one of Connie Mack's scouts.

Joseph W. Lucey, former star pitcher for the Jersey City International league team, is pitching fine ball with the Boston Red Sox.

Rovers Can't Be Stopped Trim Libertys for No. 8

The Rovers continued their winning ball in the Junior League by beating the Libertys to the wire in a fast game at the Tank Oval, Friday evening, 4-1. John Rogers bested Mickey Miglecz in a pitchers' duel, allowing only four hits to the losers while Miglecz was tapped for a total of nine bingles. Rose played a good game for the Rovers.

One Play on Field Nets

Frank Chance $140,000

Frank Chance, the "Peerless Leader," who died in Los Angeles, Cal., gained part ownership of the team he so frequently led to victory through a single play, he once related. The one play netted him $140,000, since his stock in the club soared to that value.

It was in 1906, as Chance told it, and the Chicago Nationals were in second place fighting for the pennant and with only a few more games to play.

In a hot game at Cincinnati Chance hit safely and stole second with one out. Joe Tinker, shortstop and then a heavy hitter, was at bat. Everyone expected Tinker to swing heavily. But Chance signaled for a bunt. Tinker laid down a perfect bunt and Chance streaked for third. The "Peerless Leader" did not stop, but headed for home, sliding in safely.

Next day Charles P. Taft, the new owner of the Cubs, sent for his manager.

Chance quoted him as having said, "That was the greatest play I ever saw or ever expect to see. I am going to show you that I appreciate your work and efforts. I am going to let you buy a tenth interest in the club for $10,000."

Chance sold out for $140,000 after he left the club in 1912.

Ye Olde Tyme Ballgame

Carteret Trims Rahway, But Sayreville Wins 3-2—Jim Kelly Leads Locals in Rahway Assault.

"Christy Mathewson" Frankie Andres had the Indian sign on the Rahway Baseball Club batters and the Carteret Field Club won another ball game, 6 to 1, at Rahway, Saturday, July 4, 1908; but the local politician twirler failed in his ironman stunt of pitching the home team to its second triumph of the week-end holiday at Sayreville on the following afternoon, mainly because the umpire rendered poor decisions, thus doing him out of it by 3 to 2. Besides this the Sayreville rooters thought nothing of whizzing a rock by the pitcher's ear—hitting him sometimes, too.

I haven't much data on this contest, but when the boys returned home that Sunday night, they loudly boasted of the fact that they would have trimmed the other side by a 3-1 score had the umpire given them a square deal. They said that it was the rankest deal the home team had ever gotten since baseball was organized in the town. A great deal of kidding was done when the boys met at the bicycle shop that night, anyway; and the players swore that they would absolutely hand the Sayreville crooks a severe lacing, if the two teams ever meet again.

The Rahway contest was practically all Carteret. Jim Kelly, star first baseman, led the batting assault with three hits; while Andres had his hooks fooling the opposing hitters to "death," having allowed only five safeties during the course of battle. Voight was also effective against the Rahway twirler.

Bill Coughlin, the sensational kid shortstop, was slightly injured—to the regret of several home town fans—and it was posted that Billy would not play again for some time.

There is, no doubt, a good reason for the fans being sorry in regard to Coughlin's injury, for a hard game is scheduled for next Sunday at Liebig's Field. Blood and murder are expected to feature the battle. Woodbridge is bringing a gang of marauders to town, an especially hired battery and infield from the Plainfield Club; and an outfield composed of the best three players from the entire Woodbridge township. Something is bound to happen with a team like this serving as the opposition.

Little Lefty Mills, the fellow who umpired the game between Carteret and Amboy last year, will appear in the lineup for Carteret. Arnheiter, who played a whale of a game for Rahway, will take Coughlin's place at short. Kelly will not appear for some reason or other, and Boltz will be back at first again.

County Title Series

The baseball managers of the borough, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, and Sayreville will meet somewhere next Monday night and a county championship series will be started. If Sayreville enters, there will be some games between this team and Carteret—some more bricks will fly, probably.

Dudley Lee Is Star

Lee is a power both in batting and fielding.

Elect McMillan Captain

Hugh R. McMillan of Kansas City, for two years a forward on the University of Missouri basketball team, was elected captain of the 1925 Tiger five at a dinner given in honor of the Missouri varsity and freshman cagers. McMillan succeeds Frank Wheat, also of Kansas City, who is the only member of the Missouri squad to retire through graduation this year.

Billiard Cue Caddies a New Wrinkle in London

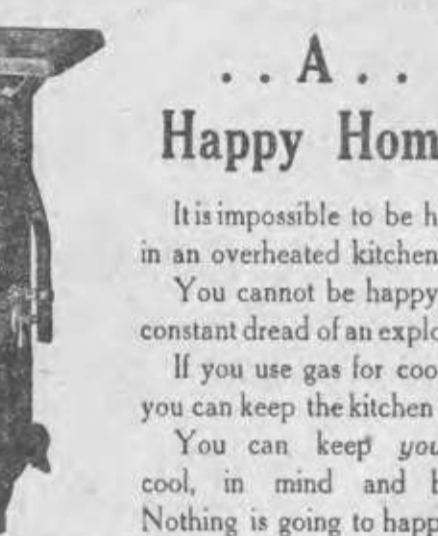

New wrinkles appear continually in sport. The latest is the use of a cue-caddy. The thing started in London, and has now been brought to New York, and it is thought will likely be popular amongst the more opulent players.

When a certain noted amateur appeared in one of the noted billiard academies of London, with a boy carrying a bag containing several cues from which he made a selection for different shots as the occasion arose, he created considerable of a furor in even such a biased sporting atmosphere.

The thing however has created a great deal of discussion pro and con. Tom Newman, the professional champion is dead set against it in championship play.

He thinks it might be all right for amateurs to give them a chance to develop different shots in practice, but he maintains that it would not only be against the spirit of the game, but would cause delay and confusion, since the professional looks upon his cue almost as part of himself, and has it so evenly balanced, and so sensitively aimed, that to change one during an important match, would bring him entirely off his game.

Athletic Field Needed

The petition of the Carteret Parent-Teacher's Association and one thousand residents, for the purchase of a site to be used as an athletic playground, should be given due and immediate consideration. We need, such a plot for the students of all the public schools, particularly for those who will attend the high school—a body of youth which craves for play and recreation.

The many plots adjoining the public schools in the various sections of the borough are out of consideration, because they are too small. We need a good sized plot—the largest the people of the borough can afford. Property here is getting higher almost daily, while the number of students rises from day to day.

Credit is due to Commissioner Coughlin, who originally suggested the plan. The P.-T. A. should be commended for taking action in circulating the petition.

As President Heil remarked in connection with the petition, "Do you want the children to run along the highways, where death is constantly lurking, or will you provide them with a proper recreation place?"

The Inspector's Work

Reports are reaching constantly The Carteret News of the wonderful and humanitarian work being done among the people of our poorer classes by Frank Born, inspector of the Board of Health. It appears that the inspector is devoting much of his energy, much of his efforts in a way that surely deserves words of praise and compliment.

Mr. Born has done much for our borough. He has worked incessantly to elevate health conditions among the old, young and babies. He is doing it persistently so that it produces the desired results.

Under the guidance of Mr. Born the clinics have grown, disease has been checked and the ill have been restored to health. The able inspector does not submit to the case of life. Almost night and day he is found working in behalf of cleanliness in our stores and restaurants and he is a foe of the milk peddler who attempts to dispose of his product that is not pure and fresh.

Aside from health work, Mr. Born is doing a great deal of humanitarian work. He is sustaining the spirits of the poor, always ready to give advice or help to bring the destitute atop the water.

The borough's people are undoubtedly fortunate in having Mr. Born as a health crusader.

Cedars of Lebanon Famed for Centuries

The cedar of Lebanon is native in Syria, Asia, Palestine and the island of Cyprus. It usually grows in the mountains at elevations of 4,000 and 6,400 feet above sea level. These trees, famous from early times in sacred and profane writings, are large, ornamental evergreens with wide-spreading branches. They are noted for the size of their trunks rather than for their height as many people suppose. Until the outbreak of the World War one of the original groves mentioned in the Bible was still standing at the head of Kedlisha valley near the ancient Lebanon. This last remnant of the cedar forests so often referred to in the Old Testament was visited by the English botanist Hooker in 1850.

them to be about 2,500 years old. Some of the younger trees were estimated at 100 years.

Many of these survivals of antiquity were destroyed during the great war. In ancient days the white gum which oozes from the trunks and branches of these cedars was used for embalming.—Pashander Magazine.

Famous Quotation

The quotation "Hew to the line, let the chips fall where they will" is taken from the speech of Roscoe Conklin at the national convention in Chicago in 1880 when General Grant was nominated for a third term. The exact words were "He will hew to the line of right, let the chips fall where they may."

PRINCESS PEARL

IN THE olden time, long before you or I were born, there lived under the sea a beautiful mermaid named Pearl. She had long silky hair as fine as spun gold and a beautiful tail as glistening and glinting as her hair.

Wherever she swam, she carried in her hand a long-handled mirror made of pink and white coral, and many times a day she would sit down on the ocean floor of white sand and comb her shining locks.

Princess Pearl had many sisters but she was not content to swim about under the water as her sisters were and often swam far away from the palace of her father, King Neptune, without telling anyone about it.

Mermaids never grow tired swimming, but they sometimes are afraid and that was what happened one day to Princess Pearl when she was swimming about alone.

Suddenly she came upon something on the ocean floor very big and black and still. It was not beautiful as was and live with me in my palace and you shall never want for anything that will make you happy."

Princess Pearl dropped her comb, but not her coral mirror that she still held in her hand, while she stared at the stranger who had come upon her so suddenly.

He was very handsome, much handsomer than her father, King Neptune, the Princess thought. His hair and eyes were dark and bright and when he smiled he won the heart of the little mermaid completely.

"Are you a man?" she said. "I think I shall like you and I will marry you and go with you to your palace."

All this time the Princess had been looking at the stranger's feet and wondering how he could swim without a long tail, for she thought the only way to get about on land or in the water must be to swim.

Princess Pearl sat so close to the water that her beautiful glistening tail was still in the water and quite hidden from the stranger's eyes, so when he reached out his hand to help her to rise he no sooner grasped it than he dropped it and stood looking at her in astonishment.

"Have you no feet?" he asked. "How do you get about without feet like mine?"

"Feet?" questioned the Princess, "are those feet?" she asked, pointing to the feet of the stranger. "I think my tail much handsomer than your feet and I am sure I can swim much faster with it than you can with those queer things you call feet."

But it was too late to save her beautiful glistening tail, for the stranger, who was a Prince, had been given a gift from a fairy at his birth, the power to have all he wished come true, and he was so in love with the beautiful Princess that he wished she had feet instead of her beautiful tail.

"Oh," she cried looking at two pretty pink feet in place of her tail. "Oh, I like these queer things, I can jump and run."

The Prince caught her in his arms and kissed her, telling her she was the most beautiful creature in the world and they would be married and have a big merry-making at his palace.

That night when the Palace was still and everyone slept, the Princess with her mirror crept out of the door and found her way to the Ocean again; it was a long way, but just as the sun showed its head over the tip of the hills Princess Pearl slipped into the Ocean with a splash and a cry of joy, for her feet had disappeared and again she wore a beautiful shining tail.

Never again would she leave her beautiful Ocean home, where mermaids never grow old or wrinkled.

The power to have his wishes granted could not reach her in the kingdom of her father, King Neptune, and though the Prince wished many times for the return of his beautiful wife, he never saw her again.

Princess Pearl Began to Comb Out Her Long, Bright Hair.

everything else in her father's kingdom.

That night she asked her father what it could be that she had seen and he replied that once it had been a mighty thing called a ship and belonged to Man.

"He lives above us," said King Neptune, "and if he had stayed on the land as he should have done and left to me the waters he would not have come to grief. Never speak of it again, my child, for Man's ways are not the same as ours."

But instead of being satisfied with this reply Princess Pearl was now all the more curious. She wanted to know what this Man her father had told her of was like and she resolved to swim to the surface of the sea and find out for herself.

Finding a nice sunny rock by the side of the ocean, Princess Pearl sat down upon it and began to comb her long, bright hair, singing as she worked.

"Oh, beautiful madden," said a voice close beside her, "never have I beheld such beauty as yours. Be my wife

Woman's Stern Eye Tames Wild Man

San Antonio, Tex.—"Como," the wild man, captured in the depths of Africa, is a wild man no longer. Some time ago he was chained to a post in one of the carnival tents at the Fiesta de San Jacinto in this city. Perspiration streamed down his almost nude brown body and he shook his mane in beastly defiance at the crowds.

Mrs. Keeton had been taking in the carnival when she was attracted by groans from the "wild man's" tent.

She went in to see and was warned not to get too close to "Como." And then "Como" turned a pair of blue eyes at her and exclaimed: "Why, mamma, what are you doing here?" Mrs. Keeton took her son, James, sixteen, home to soap and water.

BACK TO NATURE MOVE MEANS JAIL

Thought He Was Promenading South Sea Island.

Chicago.—Clothes make the man, sure enough, but then again there are times when the lack of clothes makes a man's undoing.

At least so it was early in the morning when William Rosnow, thirty-four, of 648 West Madison street, believing he was promenading the shores of South Sea island, took a little walk, minus a few of his clothes, and finally landed in a restaurant at 10 South Canal street with nothing on but a very attractive mustache and a shirt that had shrunk just a little bit in the wash.

"I knew I shouldn't have had that last drink," groaned one of the night owls, as he fell off a quick lunch stool.

"Where did you get that shirt?" chanted away a song composer who started stirring mustard into his coffee in his excitement.

And Policeman William Granger reached for his gun. As he did Rosnow, who, rumor has it, was just a little bit under the influence of liquor, a strip poker game and jealousy of women's abbreviated styles, reached for his shirt.

Officer Granger, realizing the seriousness of the situation and fearing that a shot might strip Rosnow of still more of his shirt, brought a little football into play and made a flying tackle.

A few minutes later Rosnow and Granger arrived in the Desplaines street police station, the policeman leading his prisoner by the mustache.

"Couldn't even keep his shirt on him," groaned the officer.

"Nobody can say I wasted my money"— Peter DePaolo—1925 Indianapolis Race Winner

This statement from the young race driver, who purchased a Buick a week after he wheeled his car to victory at Indianapolis and broke the record of that famous Speedway, sums up the nation-wide opinion of Buick.

For, just as DePaolo recognizes the superiority of valve-in-head engines for the race track and personal use, so too have more than a million everyday motorists recognized the dependability and performance of Buick and the Valve-in-Head type of engine upon which Buick has concentrated for 21 years.

De Paolo bought a new Buick with the motor car expert's discriminating eye for performance, for dependability and genuine value. And his purchase is further evidence of the regard in which Buick is so universally held.

Origin of Coal - The romance of the origin and forming of coal has been expressed by a scientist in the following words: "The rough dirty lumps are the memorials of a silent forest of strange trees. They contain the stored-up energy of the sun which shone on these primitive plants."

Virtue in Square Deal - Slipping things over on the other fellow yields but momentary satisfaction. Smartness of this kind always carries with it a feeling that you have invited treatment of the same sort. Only from giving the square deal comes genuine and lasting satisfaction.—Grit.

Garlic in the Milk - One minute after garlic is eaten by a cow the flavor is present in the milk.—Science Service.

Range of Man's Actions - Man's actions here are of infinite moment to him and never die or end at all. Man, with his little life, reaches upward high as heaven—downward low as hell; and in his threescore years of time holds an eternity fearfully and wonderfully hidden.—Carrie.

WHEN CUPID WAS ON TIME

By LUCIUS L. WITTICH

MISS BALLARD finally opened the letter, having wisely concluded that the identity of the author could be established to a greater degree of certainty in that manner than by merely scanning the exterior of the epistle. As she tore the missive open a bit of crisp, pale blue paper fell from within.

"A check, a wedding remembrance," she almost gasped, seizing the precious particle of tinted writing material. Then she made out the following words, inscribed in a big, manish hand, on the face of the check:

Pay to the order of Mrs. Albert Garvin Mefford, Five Thousand Dollars.

EGRA C. HOCHKINS.

In large, dark red letters across the top of the check Miss Ballard saw printed the name, "Springbrook National Bank," and she realized that the gift was not bogus. Her next move was to rush to the telephone and tell Mr. Mefford the joyous news.

"Oh, Albert, dear," she panted into the transmitter: "Uncle Ezra, Ezra Hochkins, no, no, not hog pens, Ezra C. Hochkins, you know—Uncle Ezra, of West Springbrook. Well, the dear old darling, what's that's what I said, the dear old darling. Well, he has just sent me a check for five thousand dollars. Just think of it, dear, hello, hello, central we are still talking. Please do not interrupt us, hello, hello, is that you sweetheart? who's the police station? oh, heavens, I have the wrong number." Failing to re-establish a connection, Miss Ballard returned to the perusal of the letter which had arrived in the envelope with the check.

West Springbrook, Kans., July 1.

Dear Marjorie:

I understand that you are planning to celebrate the glorious Fourth in a rather unusual manner. I am glad to hear this, for I am a strong advocate of early marriages. You will find a check for five thousand dollars enclosed, which I sincerely hope you will accept. There is one condition, however, which I must insist upon, Marjorie, and that is this—the check must be endorsed before you reach the age of eighteen. You were ushered into this world at noon on July fourth, almost eighteen years ago, so in order to comply with my one condition you will necessarily have to enter the holy bonds of matrimony before the hour of twelve o'clock, noon, next Friday. You cannot, of course, endorse the check before you have actually become Mrs. Mefford.

About a year ago I made a small wager with your uncle, Dudley Maybritt, to the effect that you would become a matron before you reached your majority. Ten thousand dollars was the amount of the stake and your Uncle Dudley took the negative and of the proposition. So, as you are to be wedded on the fourth, I feel confident that my little offer will induce you to select the forenoon for the ceremony. I would be happy if you would select my home as the place of marriage. Wishing you and your prospective husband a long and prosperous married life, I remain,

Your affectionate uncle,

EGRA C. HOCHKINS.

"Oh, the horrid creature," wailed Miss Ballard. "I won't touch a cent of his old money, and yet—and yet" (she glanced longingly at the blue bank check), "and yet," she concluded, "why shouldn't I?"

Evening came, and so did Mefford. And it took Mefford just three seconds to settle the question decisively.

"Of course we shall accept the dear old gentleman's offer," he said, and then they drifted off into the land of air castles.

Next morning Miss Ballard found herself again puzzled over the script on the smooth side of an envelope. As she opened the missive a bit of crisp, pale blue paper fell from within and alighted in the grass at her feet.

"I check, another wedding remembrance," she almost gasped. Then she made out the following words inscribed in a bold hand on the face of the check:

Pay to the order of Miss Marjorie Winifred Ballard, Five Thousand Dollars.

DUDLEY ARTHUR MAYBRIT.

In large, dark letters across the top of the check Miss Ballard saw printed the name, "Springbrook National Bank," and she realized that the gift was not bogus. Her next move was to rush to the telephone and tell Mr. Mefford the joyous news.

After phoning, Miss Ballard returned to the perusal of the letter which had arrived in the letter with the check.

"Springbrook, Kans., July 2.—Dear Marjorie:" the missive began, and in many respects it was a similar production to the one of the morning before. In one detail, however, it differed materially, and Miss Ballard soon reached the detail in question.

"There is one thing, though," she read, "that I must insist upon, Marjorie. The check must not be indorsed until after twelve o'clock, noon, of July fourth." Following this was an account of the wager made twelve months before and also a request that if the prospective bride cared to accept the offer she should appear at his home, unmarried, at the hour specified.

"Oh, the horrid creature," murmured Miss Ballard. "This is not a real, sure-enough wedding present, either. It's only a horrid bribe like the other check was. And the worst of it is we cannot accept it if we accept Uncle Ezra's, and we cannot accept Uncle Ezra's if we accept Uncle Dudley's. Now, if it were only possible to accept both—oh, o-o-oh, ten thousand dollars—o-o-oh. I must tell Albert," and thirty seconds later the telephone wires were again busy.

Mefford studied over the proposition a long while that evening.

"Well," he finally said, "it seems to be a case of five thousand for us any way we fix it. I reckon it doesn't make so very much difference whether we are married before sun-up or after dark. It's all the same to me, but the quicker the"

Suddenly he paused.

"I have it," he finally ejaculated.

"Have what?" exclaimed Miss Ballard.

"A schema. A great schema," Mefford paused an instant to regain his breath. "I have solved the problem," he continued. "Marjorie, we shall accept both—oh—er—bribes as you term them. Now, don't ask questions, dear. It is growing late. Good night, dear, and say, by the way, be ready to accompany me to your Uncle Dudley's home shortly before noon tomorrow. No, not another question tonight."

The guns and crackers were still thundering merrily when Miss Ballard arose late on the morning of July Fourth. Arraying herself in wedding attire, and avoiding the volley of questions hurled at her by mother and sisters as best she might, she awaited the arrival of Mefford, who soon appeared in a car with Rev. Mr. Stone.

"Good morning, Marjorie. Tell your mother and sisters to drive out to Mr. Hochkins' place," called Mefford. "And tell them to be there early if they wish to witness the show."

Miss Ballard delivered the message, and, seated by her fiancé, was soon whizzing away in the direction of Dudley Maybritt's residence. Arriving, they were welcomed most heartily by Mr. Maybritt.

"Aha," he chuckled, kissing his niece, "so you are still single, eh, little girl?"

"Yes, Uncle Dudley, we have decided to, to er, to er," she glanced helplessly at Albert.

"She is quite right, Mr. Maybritt," explained Mefford, "we have decided to accept your offer. We shall remain single until after twelve o'clock."

"Good," ejaculated Maybritt, but it was not until after the hall clock had tolled the hour of twelve that he looked entirely satisfied. Then, glancing at his own timepiece to assure himself, no doubt, that it was actually noon, he heaved a great sigh of relief.

"The wager is won," he croaked. "The ten thousand is mine. What will old Ez say?—Mad, oh, wow, but he'll be hoppin'. It'll be worth a twenty-mile walk to see the old codger take on, ha, ha, ha!" The laugh of victory was still ringing in the air when the wedding party left, shortly after.

The check, by the way, had been properly indorsed by Miss Marjorie Winifred Ballard and Dudley Maybritt had witnessed the signature.

From Maybritt's the minister drove toward West Springbrook. Across the Kansas prairies, where the sun gleamed with an intensity that was far from pleasant, they sped. It was ten minutes past twelve when they crossed the B. U. & M. tracks, which marked the division between the two Springbrooks. As they sped by, Mefford delivered a ludicrous salute to the two threads of shimmering steel which stretched away to a mere exclamation point in the gray distance. He offered no explanation for his remarkable antic and Miss Ballard was too deeply engrossed in trying to solve the mysterious actions of her lover to ask further questions.

By Mefford's watch and by the watch of Rev. Mr. Stone it was just twenty minutes past twelve o'clock when they drew rein before the home of West Springbrook's wealthiest citizen, Ezra C. Hochkins. Mr. Hochkins, Mrs. Ballard and the two Misses Ballard were there beneath a big cottonwood tree waiting to welcome the arrivals, and it was there in the shade of the tree that Rev. Mr. Stone performed the wedding ceremony a few minutes later.

Mr. Hochkins was in an ecstasy of delight.

"I knew I would win," he kept repeating. "I told old Dud that I would win. Poor old Dud, how I fooled him this time, haw, haw, haw. Won't he be mad, though? Whoopee. Jest wait till the old fellow hears the news and that'll be somethin' doin'."

The old gentleman's hilarity was assuming alarming proportions when Mefford suggested that his bride indorse the check before the time limit had expired.

"Why, sure," ejaculated the host. "I'd jolly near forgot about the check. But I reckon youse hadn't, Marjorie, come with me," and the two hastened into the house to procure pen and ink.

Mrs. Mefford was greatly puzzled, but, by a herculean effort, she managed to restrain herself from asking questions until she and Mefford were seated alone in the car and spinning toward Springbrook.

"Why, darling," exclaimed the groom in answer to her query, "haven't you solved the mystery, as you call it? It's so simple, dear, that there is really no mystery about it. We simply changed time when we crossed the B. U. & M. tracks. It's just one hour earlier on this side than it is on the other. There, you can see the tracks now, off there is the distance. Strange that neither of your uncles recalled the fact that time is just an hour later in Springbrook than in West Springbrook. But it will be brought to their minds soon enough now. Oh, wow, I'd almost be willing to give up one of those checks to see the old fellows when they get together to settle their wager. It's dollars to doughnuts that they won't see the funny side of the affair."

And they didn't.

Original Hooligans

The original hooligans were a spirited Irish family of that name who made things lively in the neighborhood of Southwark about thirty years ago. Just as the aristocratic ruffians of the eighteenth century took a Red Indian name—Mohawks (spelled Mo-hocks)—so the Parisian street ruffian has borrowed the Red Indian name Apache.

WHERE 150,000 GAS METER DIAPHRAGMS ARE MADE FROM SHEEP SKINS EACH YEAR

One of the more recent activities undertaken by the Gas Department of Public Service Electric and Gas Company is the manufacture of gas meter diaphragms. A section of the Newark Meter Shop has been equipped for this purpose and here a large force of men is turning out about 150,000 diaphragms a year.

The diaphragm is the vital part of the meter, each meter having two, whose service, in the operation of the meter, is similar to that performed by the lungs in the human body. The diaphragm simultaneously inhales gas from the mains and exhales it into pipes that carry it to the kitchen or elsewhere.

When the gas flows through the meter the amount used is registered in the upper section by means of connecting gears which record the quantity in cubic feet.

Diaphragms are made from sheep skins, and the best obtainable bark-tanned skins are used. New Zealand skins are preferred as in that country there are no barbed wire fences nor briars to cut the skins and thus make defects in the finished leather.

There are eighteen distinct operations necessary in the manufacture of diaphragms, first and the most important of which is the examination of the skin itself. Each one received at the shop is inspected thoroughly for defects such as thin spots, cuts from the skinning knife and porous places, any one of which would cause a leak in the diaphragm.

Next comes the cutting of the skins into strips of the required width. Each skin should make an average of five and one-half diaphragms of ordinary household size.

Special Sewing Machine

For sewing the lapped ends of the strips a specially contrived sewing machine is used, which sews the seams without allowing the needle to go all the way through the leather, for if it did, the diaphragm would not be gas-tight. The machine is electrically driven and frequent adjustments are necessary for slight variations in the thickness of the leather.

After the laps are sewed, all seams are examined under a powerful electric light. Those that have holes or thin spots are cut out. There are two rims to which each side of the diaphragm is tied. The wide or partition ring is soldered to the partition of the meter and the narrow or disc ring is the one to which the disc is soldered.

Sheets of tin are trimmed to size and then cut in strips for the rings. The strips are then run through a machine which puts on the beading and gives them a circular form. The ends of the rings are soldered together and all surfaces of the rings on which the leather will rest are heavily coated with shellac to prevent injury to the leather.

The diaphragm leathers are tied on the rings over a device made for the purpose, Italian hemp twine being used. Another inspection for defects is made and the twine is subjected to several coats of shellac to prevent moisture. The diaphragms are next placed on rods, each rod holding seventy, and taken to the oiling room. Here they are immersed in a trough of warm oil and petrolatum. The rods are then hung on a rack where they remain three months, being given a slight turn each day. At the end of this period they are thoroughly seasoned. The rack in the Newark shop holds 12,500 diaphragms.

For the manufacture of 150,000 diaphragms, the following material is used: 27,272 perfect sheepskins, averaging six square feet each; one and one-half tons of Italian hemp; 150 spools of sewing silk; 12,000 sheets of tin; 200 gallons of shellac; 1,500 gallons of oil and 300 gallons of petrolatum.

Community Building

Home Owner Always Makes Good Citizen

Home ownership is a big factor in the making of a good citizen. A man who owns his own home, or has started to pay for one, is a much more stable and dependable person than the one who rents his living quarters, because he feels himself a member of the community, writes Allene Lyle in the Chicago Evening Post. He expects to make it his permanent home and he is interested in improving it. The man who lives in a rented house or apartment can always move on short notice if there is something in the community which is not to his liking, and he is quite apt to do so, but the man who lives in a house which he owns himself is much more apt to try to bring the community up to his standards and ideals.

A home owner feels that he belongs to the community and it belongs to him. He pays taxes and he is concerned about how this public money is spent. He wants good streets and highways; he is interested in transportation facilities, lighting and improvements in sanitation; he demands good laws and their enforcement for the protection of his property and his family he is vitally concerned in his community's schools and churches.

Overlook Chances to Redeem Blighted Spots

While they are centering their attention on the conservation, protection and improvement of Illinois' beauty spots nature lovers and others interested in the state's natural beauty should not lose sight of the many blighted spots that have almost unlimited possibilities for improvement, in the opinion of Karl B. Lohmann, in charge of landscape gardening at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

Many of the farm building groups in the state, hundreds of school grounds and miles of so-called improved roads unfortunately come within this class of blighted features, he said.

"Despite the luxurious acreage which they command," he explained, "thousands of farm building groups in Illinois are desolate because they are not in good order, they are not arranged efficiently for maximum convenience, they are not compactly and well disposed about agreeably shaped and effectively paved courts and they lose the picturesqueness that is possible with suitably placed trees, shrubs and lawns, hedges and fences.

"Stretches of grass should front the school structures and trees should be introduced."

Formal and official city planning is comparatively a new art in this country. Most American cities have been allowed to grow in a haphazard way, and the way is usually to their disadvantage in attractiveness and convenience. It is only after they are well established that residents usually begin to think of the future development and to regret earlier mistakes. To correct all the unwise features and to remove or reconstruct obstructive and ugly buildings is too costly an undertaking, and for the most part the planning that can then be done looks to the suburban growth and to public and business structures that, as time and progress go on, are necessary to replace old ones.

Dying, Wants Pets Killed to Join Her in Heaven

New York.—Mme. Kitty Berger, harpist, who died of heart disease in the Presbyterian hospital, left word that her four cats should be killed at once so they might go to heaven with her, her friend, Mrs. Adolph Schminke, said. Mrs. Schminke said she gave the cats to the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, to be killed.

Mrs. Schminke added that when Mademoiselle Berger was told, two years ago, to go to the hospital for treatment, she refused to do so, saying no one else could care for her cats, and that before her death fowers were brought to her from the grave of her favorite cat.

Mademoiselle Berger, in private life Mrs. Paul Pancretius, was born in Austria, where her parents were members of the household of Emperor Francis Joseph. She played before the emperor, Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra and President Roosevelt.

Leaves $50 to Burglars, Gets Note of Thanks

New York.—Arthur Bohm, who lives from mid-April to mid-October at Grand View, N. Y., near Nyack, where his daughter has a real estate business, has on his return to his Brooklyn home every fall for seven years left a $50 bill on the middle of the living-room table with this note:

"I have taken all the valuables from this house. Only the furniture remains. Please accept this bank note for your trouble in breaking in. Please depart without doing any damage. Thank you. ARTHUR BOHM."

Mr. Bohm started the practice after a number of his neighbors' homes at Grand View had been pretty well wrecked by thieves looking for plunder during the winter months.

Every spring until now he has gone back to Grand View to find his note with the $50 attached still on the table. But when he arrived in Grand View from Brooklyn with his wife and daughter the $50 was gone.

Across the face of the note was scrawled in lead pencil the word, "Thanks."

Welcome News

The announcement made this week by the U. S. Metals Refining Company to Health Inspector Frank Born that a converter is being built for the elimination of bad gasses at the plant, is news that every citizen is pleased to hear.

Time and again has this situation been brought to the attention of the plants. Complaints after complaints have been filed, but nothing definite has been received in the course of days that have past.

The officials of the copper works have finally realized that there is a big need for a converter of bad odors and have taken real action in this direction. This step is a splendid one, Firstly, it will help to make the borough a more habitable place to live in; secondly, it will break the ice for the other plants to follow the same way.

The Men of the Future Will Know Too Much to Laugh at Anything

By DR. CHARLES G. SHAW, New York University.

Man may be defined as a creature of laughter and tears. If pacifism, socialism and the like are seeking to efface all tears, it may happen that certain other causes will work for the destruction of laughter. Primitive men did not know enough to laugh, since wit involves a certain amount of intelligence. The men of the future will know too much to laugh at anything. There is so little laughter left now in the world that already we are forced to resort to the synthetic smiles of comic strip artists and vaudeville jokesmiths.

Laughter arises from the twin causes of incongruity and inequality. The laugh is at once of physical and social origin. We laugh at what seems inferior to us. In both cases our pride induces us to assume an exalted position and lofty air. Men used to laugh at Columbus and Galileo. Now they try to joke about Einstein and Freud.

The laugh is going fast. We have passed from the age of Shakespeare to that of Ibsen. Jokes are kept alive by professionals, who are like doctors administering oxygen. But the life of laughter cannot be saved. He laughs best who laughs first.

In All Future Reclamation Projects the States Should Contribute

By SECRETARY WORK, U. S. Department of Interior.

The obligations of settlers on existing reclamation projects should be adjusted on a basis provided for future payments. This will require a re-appraisal of areas to determine their ability to produce profitable crops under irrigation.

On all projects undertaken hereafter the state in which the development is located should participate in the selection of settlers and the development of farms. The states should not be required to contribute to construction costs, but should be required to contribute to the fund provided for advances to settlers for farm development as they now contribute to the construction of roads and to agricultural education.

A fund should be provided from which money can be advanced to help worthy, needy settlers improve and equip their farms. Such advances should bear interest, and, for permanent improvements, should extend over long periods. Four per cent is suggested as the interest rate.

Survey With Purpose to Show Public How to Use Its Leisure Time

By F. P. KEPPEL, President Carnegie Corporation.

It is, of course, difficult to make a general survey for the purpose of showing the public how to use its leisure which will produce results that are of real value. It is difficult to keep it from falling of its own weight. For that reason we have turned for advice and suggestions to organizations like the American Library association which are in touch with people who try to use their leisure to advantage. In fields where there is no central organization of this kind it has seemed wisest to bring together, quite informally, groups of men and women for the preliminary discussions, and to supplement their findings with further analysis and investigation.

The Carnegie corporation, in any case, is not an operating organization. It is our function to support and assist established agencies which are worthy.

As a guide for ourselves we have said that our survey should roughly fall into three parts: First, the library; second, the fine arts, and third, adult education. But, of course, such a division is arbitrary. The three lines of investigation are certain to overlap. But such sailing orders serve to enable us to seek out the various organizations in the different fields and become familiar with the needs and problems of each, so that we can decide how the money which later will be at our disposal may be best used to further their work.

Your Health By ANDREW F. CURRIER, M.D.

TYPHOID FEVER

AS ALMOST everybody knows, this is one of the commonest of diseases, more or fewer cases being present almost constantly. Wherever insufficient attention is given to drainage, water supply and general sanitation, there typhoid fever is apt to be prevalent.

It most frequently attacks young adults or those who are mature, but no period of life and neither sex is immune to it.

Essentially it is inflammation of certain groups of small glands in the intestine and its supporting band, the mesentery, and of the spleen. The germ which causes it is known as the bacillus typhosus and it may be found in the evacuations from the bowel.

It lives in water and grows with great rapidity unless it is destroyed by suitable antiseptics.

It gets into water that is used for washing, drinking or cooking and finally gets back into the human body. Possibly it is carried by the air and may be taken in by the nose or mouth and it is very frequently introduced by milk or other food, solid or liquid, which may have been contaminated by it.

Typhoid carriers are people who carry the germs about with them, perhaps for years, and do not themselves seem to be injured by them, but by infecting materials, particularly food with which they come in contact, they may transmit the disease to any number of people who happen to be sensitive to it.

When these germs reach the intestine of those who are sensitive, they attack the glands which were mentioned as the essential seat of the disease, and during the subsequent ten days to three weeks, the disease is incubating or developing.

The patient may feel rather miserable, but may be able to keep about and frequently promises himself he will be all right tomorrow.

But now his temperature begins to mount up, he has a chill, and every day during the following week his temperature rises steadily.

After this it may drop a little, mounting up again toward the close of the second week.

Then it begins to go down very gradually and in two weeks more has reached normal again.

During all this period inflammatory changes in the glands are progressing, the spleen gets very large and soft, the glands in the intestine swell and break and sores or ulcers are formed, from which, when formed, decomposed and putrid materials proceed.

This is very poisonous and more or less of it is usually absorbed and carried by the blood to all parts of the body.

On the surface of the abdomen there is usually a rash of small red spots, the bowels become distended with gas, perhaps to an enormous extent.

The patient suffers from loss of appetite, heart weakness, rapid pulse and frequently with great disturbance of the brain.

The diagnosis is often made by subjecting a drop of the blood to a test known as Widal's test.

Vaccination with a suitable vaccine furnishes an excellent means of protection from the disease, and is practiced as a routine measure.

Protection by vaccination lasts three years and is therefore of the greatest value to all who may be exposed to this disease by out-of-door life.

Old City of Wales Buried Under Sand

We are accustomed to buried cities of the East, and even in the forests of Africa one is not surprised to hear that ancient ruins have been buried in the jungle. But to find a buried city in Wales seems something of an anomaly.

Yet on the borders of Swansea bay, in the heart of a great sandhill, lies the buried city of Kenfig. There is today a village close by called Ton Kenfig. It is behind the sandhills in which the buried city lies, and from which the broken wall of a ruined tower projects to this day.

In the days of the Conqueror Kenfig was a walled city, a great commercial center, and filled with armed men. But an insidious foe—the blown sand—was always liable to break down its best defences. Year by year, bit by bit, it gained the victory, till by the time Queen Elizabeth began her reign there was little to be seen of the city except a dune and a ruined tower.

For ages tradition had it that the town was submerged by sand in a great storm, as Pompeii was overwhelmed by volcanic dust, but the chronicles of Margam abbey, which have recently been examined, make it plain that the sand encroachments lasted for many years, and that the process of burying this Welsh city was a slow one.—London Times.

Stupid Errors Made by Great Painters

Magnificent and incomparable as was the workmanship of the old masters, as found chiefly in the churches and picture galleries of the Continent, when it came down to detail, things both ludicrous and anomalous were apt to appear. A picture is to be seen dealing with the crucifixion in which a confessor holds out a cross to the dying thief. A painting by a Dutch artist, representing the sacrifice of Isaac, is to be seen in which Abraham stands over his son holding a blunderbuss! In the National gallery, too, may be found an old-master painting, in which a saint holds a very modern-looking pair of horn-rimmed spectacles. Painters of extremely advanced views seem to delight in this sort of thing.

Not long ago a picture of "The Deluge" was exhibited in London, by a student of the Slade school, in which Noah and his sons wore derby hats.—London Mail.

The Man Who Counts

It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled, or where the door of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena; whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs and comes short again and again, because there is no effort without error and short coming; who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows the great enthusiasm, the great devotion, spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement; and who at the worst, if he fails, at least falls while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Wrong or Right

There is an old judge of the Supreme court in New York who recently in private conversation was heard to vigorously defend one of his friends who had fallen by the wayside. He was challenged for defending a man who had been proved to be wrong.

"That was only one failure," said the old judge. "Consider the fine things about him—"

"But," objected one of the critics, "I don't see how you can stand up for this fellow even if he is a friend. He certainly was wrong."

"Any man will stand up for you when you are right," replied the old judge. "But it takes a friend to stand up for you when you are wrong."

And there was silence.—Dellmeier.

Birth of Rocking Chair

Rocking chairs are commonly referred to as an American institution purely. They had their greatest development, of course, during the Nineteenth century, when they passed through the stage of makeshift rockers cut flat on top with the bottom in the form of an arc, to those which constituted an integral part of the chair, and from these to those monstrosities of furniture called patent rockers. That was the beginning of their decadence, says the Boston Transcript. Rocking chairs are made now, but they are simple in construction, and the elaborate arrangements of springs and bases are known no more.

Had Learned Something

A woman called at a studio for a sitting. The photographer made two negatives and promised proofs for the following day.

The next day her husband called for the proofs, but the photographer showed him only one. The husband said: "My understanding was that there were to be two proofs."

"I did make two sittings of your wife," replied the photographer, "but in one she held her lips apart and showed the end of her tongue."

"My goodness," gasped the husband, "let me see that one. I didn't know there was an end to it!"

Ancient Golf Club

The Royal Blackheath Golf club of London is said to be the oldest. Records date back to 1787 and tradition carries the club back to the reign of James I, 1603-1625. The old Royal Blackheath course has been closed since it was no longer possible to keep it in playable condition. It was crossed and recrossed by roads and railways and surrounded by buildings. The course consisted of seven holes, a match consisting of three rounds of twenty-one holes.

Insect Civilization

That insects do almost everything known to mankind, whom they excel in skill, is the belief of a well known nature student, who spoke before a meeting of the American Institute of Phrenology. While the less developed species live under rocks or in the earth and exist by hunting, trapping and fishing for prey, others colonize in large communities and keep herds, raise crops and use leaves for clothing and shelter. Many insects even build tiny streets and highways.

Feudal Dinner Custom

Many of the curious things connected with the service of the medieval dinner table were the result of the peculiar social system. Although widely separated in rank, the feudal baron ate dully with his retainers. But at a feudal banquet the lord of the castle and his chief guest occupied seats at the further side of the table or dais. They were said to sit at the dais, instead of at the table upon the dais. This feudal fashion of arranging the tables for a formal dinner survives in the modern custom of having a "raised table" for guests and speakers.

Evolution of Shoes

Among the ancient Jews shoes were made of leather, linen, rush or wood. The Greek philosopher, Pythagoras, would have his disciples wear shoes made of the bark of trees, which were made that they might not wear what was made of the skins of animals, as he refrained from the use of everything that had life.

Paul Was Puzzled

Glazed Cretonne

Starch is applied to the surface of cretonne to produce the shiny, glazed effect. The material is starched and put through cylindrical hot rolls. It is not practical for an amateur to do this. Cretonne glazed in this way is chintz, and the material is not washable.

MYRA

TAKEN from an evolutionary standpoint, Myra represents the eternal etymological question. It is said to mean "she who weeps," but where it comes from and how it reached its present form is clouded in mystery.

The consensus of opinion seems to be that it comes from the word marah, meaning bitterness, which was then supplied to the bitter gum, myrrh. The same term was used to designate the brackish springs in the desert to which the desolate widow of Bethlehem referred when she cried "Call me not Naomi (pleasant), call me Marah (bitter)."

This is, on the whole, the most satisfactory derivation of Myra, sometimes referred to in the Middle Ages as Myrrh of the Sea. Myra was frequently used in the early days of Biblical history and the heritage of sorrow which the name suggests seems generally to have accompanied its progress. It has been a great English favorite and has likewise had widespread vogue in this country, its popularity, curiously enough, being confined largely to the South.

Jet, the emblem of sorrow, is Myra's talisman gem, but by wearing it the ancients believed that she could escape her legacy of tears. It should be worn, however, against the flesh to insure its potency. Tuesday is Myra's lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

Britain's Constitution

The constitution of Great Britain, many of whose principles form the foundations of about every free constitution in the world, is an accumulation of statutes, customs and decisions. The Magna Charta, granted in 1215 by King John, may be regarded as a starting point. Other salient features are the Petition of Rights and the Declaration of Rights, the Habeas Corpus act, the Act of Settlement, the franchise laws, the practices and customs respecting the responsibility of government. The sovereign would accept or decline gifts of small value or of no political significance, according to his own wish or judgment; but a gift of very considerable value would not be accepted without the advice and consent of the ministry.

Great Early Teacher

Zoroaster was one of the great teachers of the East and founder of what might be called the national religion of the Perso-Iranian people, that is, speaking generally, the Persians. When he lived and taught is not exactly known, but it is held that it was between the years 1000 B. C. and 600 B. C. He taught a dualism of power, one good and the other evil. Light represented the former and darkness the latter. As corruption grew up the sun became worshiped as the great source of light and, therefore, of all good.

Vassar's Bootjacks

On one occasion a building foreman who had annoyed Mr. Vassar with too many needless questions asked what was to be done with a certain pile of hickory boards. "Oh, that lumber is to be cut into bootjacks," replied the irritated foreman. Whereupon the carpenter did saw out bootjacks by the hundreds. They were distributed throughout the dormitory and, when finally the first class came to Vassar, each girl found a bootjack in her room. —Charles A. Seiden telling of the founding of Vassar, in the Ladies' Home Journal.

Latin America

France, Spain, Italy and Portugal are known as Latin countries, because they were influenced by the Roman civilization and language more than the other countries of Europe. They speak what are known as the Romance languages. Since South and Central America were settled chiefly by the Spanish and Portuguese, they are called Latin America. Rumania, the French part of Belgium and the Italian and French parts of Switzerland were also affected by ancient Rome in the same manner as the other countries named.—Exchange.

Hard to Answer

Two commuters were discussing life in general. "I've been commuting three years," said one, "and I've never yet missed the train I intended to take." The other commuter admitted this was quite a record, but as an afterthought he inquired: "What in the world do you tell your wife when you miss the train she intended for you to take?"

The Baby Parade

Asbury Park has its annual beauty parade, Atlantic City has its annual baby and beauty parades and now comes Carteret with its first annual parade of the borough's babies, sponsored by the Board of Health. To some the parade has no significance, but those behind the project will tell you, what splendid work the clinic of the local health board has done to nearly three hundred babies. And these babies, whose health has been impaired for lack of food or lack of nutrition will play an important part in the parade. They will point with pride what all the forces of the Board of Health has done within the short time of a year.

Some mothers are still skeptical. They do not know the work of the local health organization. Most of them are foreigners naturally. There are many babies right here in Carteret which need looking over and probably saved to become healthy adults in time to come. The parade will be instructive for the parents, who do not understand. They will see with their own eyes the healthy status of youngsters, who only a year ago, were sickly, undernourished and worn to the bone.

The parade is a splendid move for Carteret. Those who can should co-operate with the health authorities in making Saturday, September 19 a big day. And we feel that the parade will be a signal success, for the undertaking is one of humanitarian interest, an interest of all those who have the care of our children at heart.

Leave Well Alone

Every day we meet in this borough a laborer, who has just returned from Europe. This man came here some years ago, worked hard at one of our plants, managed to save up a few thousand dollars and finally is lured for a visit to the old country.

The man finds conditions today different than he left them. He is being mulched out of his hard earned cash by his poor relatives, old time friends and others. Before a year elapses, this visitor is without a penny and unable to get work.

He comes back to Carteret. He starts life over by saving his money. We have many such instances in this borough. There are regrets, cries and agony.

If one can afford to take a trip to Europe, then well enough. But our many laborers who are lured to Europe will think over twice before taking that step. Here, they have a job, money in bank, etc. Going back they lose it.

Leave well enough all alone. Do not throw your money away for passage and bunkos who urge you to "come back to the old country."

New Battery System

Most of the telephone subscribers in Carteret have now the new battery system at their telephone apparatus. We all agree, that the new system is a great improvement. We have cranked the old battery so often, that our arms become stiff.

Women will appreciate the system. They can remain in comfort and call their favorite grocer or butcher or iceman without getting out of bed to "crank it up." We understand, that many husbands found it excessive work to crank up and call their wives. Similar excuses were given time and time again.

The new battery is also a step forward for Carteret. We are getting out of the rural class—and out of the rut.

ADENOIDS

IN ADDITION to the adenoids, we often see enlargement of the tonsils and of the uvula (the little cone-shaped body which hangs at the entrance to the throat), the entire opening to the throat being almost obliterated. Such children are often stammerers, their voice is thick and lacks resonance, and their intellect suffers. Their countenance is dull and expressionless, their complexion is bad, their upper lip is retracted, the septum of their nose deflected, and the glands in their neck enlarged. They are often victims of croup, hicough, St. Vitus dance, nose bleed, earache and headache, they suffer constantly from colds or deafness or weak eyes.

Not all children with adenoids have all these troubles; all have some of them, some have all of them, and most of them are benefited when tonsils and adenoids are removed.

Children may be born with adenoids, or they may have them soon after birth; and they are more likely to be in homes where the hygiene is faulty, the ventilation poor, the food unsuitable, and the conditions, in general, unsanitary.

The child is not responsible for all these bad conditions, hence the more important is it for those who brought him into the world to do all in their power to prevent the growth of adenoids or to have them properly and skilfully treated before his health is undermined.

No matter how poor parents may be, there is today no excuse for neglecting the health of their children.

There is hardly a town of any size, anywhere, which does not have a dispensary or hospital in which proper treatment may be obtained if needed.

Of course the earlier it is given, the better for the child; and in the case of such children as have been here considered, the treatment will consist in removing the adenoids (and the tonsils, too, if necessary), the administration of suitable tonics, and the giving of properly prepared and easily digested food.

Removal of adenoids is rarely a dangerous operation. It is usually better to perform it under the influence of a general anesthetic, and, when it is properly done, recovery will be prompt and the beneficial effects soon apparent.

WORDS

THE written word hath potency sublime. If it be penned in prose or hitting rhyme To lift the soul of man from depths of care Up to the pinnacles of freedom where He seems to touch the stars, and find the gain That comes to him who triumphs over pain. And in the simplest words of all we find The richest blessings of our days combined. For what is sweeter in these times of strife Than cheer, and hope, and love, and faith, and life? Espousal Rules

In the days when the espousal was in vogue the girl invariably received a ring if her lover had the money to buy it, and this band she wore on the right hand until at the wedding it was transferred to her left. If the future husband was too poor to buy or rent a ring he gave her a glass—so binding a token that the law allowed the woman, if jilted, to retain half of his presents.

Cheap for $1,200

A western young man visiting New York city thought it would be fine to buy his sweetheart's engagement ring there. Entering a Fifth avenue store he was waved from one lordly clerk to another down a long aisle and at last reached the counter where there was a personage who sold engagement rings. "Here are some rather neat rings," said the distinguished one. "Small, of course, but in good taste." Our young friend liked their looks, but was pained to learn they ran from $3,500 to $5,000 apiece. He admitted, in some confusion, that he wished something a little cheaper. Then the mighty one reached into a bin and brought up a handful of sparklers. "Take your pick," said he, politely repressing a yawn. "$1,200 each." The home-town jeweler sold that ring.—Capper's Weekly.

Lively Sense of Humor

"It always makes me laugh to have my fountain pen, pencil, watch and all the papers fall out of my pockets while I am stooping over trying to get the clinkers out of the furnace," remarked the hot-tempered man.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

FRANCOIS CATREAU-BRIAND

FRANCOIS RENT CHATEAUBRIAND was politician, rhetorician and author, a great figure in French literature who marked the transition from the old classical style of writing to the modern romantic school.

He was born September 4, 1768, in St. Malo, a region of France filled with legends and quaint customs which impressed him considerably. His father was strangely morose, his mother extremely pious, his sister passionately devoted to him—and all these influences tended to bring out the romantic in him, to give him a love of mysterious things and to build up his egotism.

He escaped persecution during the French Revolution (which occurred when he was a young man) by an attempt to discover the Northwest passage, during which journey to the Western continent, he found material for his "Atala," a sort of Paul and Virginia story. The piety of his mother must have influenced him greatly, for he labored years over a great work on the Christian religion, which was published just as Napoleon re-established the Catholic religion in France, and which brought him great political favor.

Chateaubriand was a great literary figure of his time, and his political pamphlets were works of great importance, though, curiously, his own opinions varied again and again.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT SEATON?

THE Seatons are of Scotch origin. It was Henry Seaton who came from Scotland in 1690 and settled in Gloucester county, Virginia, where he married Elizabeth Todd.

Although the Scotch were not so numerous in the South as in some of the Middle states, Henry found fellow countrymen among his neighbors and established a line of Seatons that may be regarded as one of the best of Scotch Southern families.

One of his many descendants was Augustine, who married Mary Winston. And their son, William Winston Seaton, born in 1785, in King William county, Virginia, was one of the first American journalists of distinction.

For many years he lived in Washington, from 1840 to 1850. He was founder of the Unitarian church in Washington, and when he was seventy-nine years of age he acted as a private in defense of Washington when it was attacked by the Southern forces.

The meaning of the name casts an interesting light on the early history of the family. It is said that in Scotland the name was given to men who lived in a sea town, or a town by the sea.

Excellent Idea is Umbrella "Exchange"

Brussels appears to be the only city which has a well-organized umbrella-borrowing bureau. The annual subscription is low, but if every umbrella-user were to join such a society, its income would be enormous.

The idea is rather similar to that in force at the British museum, National gallery and other public institutions, where you are required to deposit your "gump" before being allowed to go round the galleries.

Each member, on paying his subscription, receives a token, usually of metal stamped with an index number, which he carries in his pocket instead of an umbrella in his hand.

When the rain ceases the borrower deposits his umbrella in the next agency he happens to pass, and in exchange receives another counter.

Ostrich Father

"At this season on my South African ostrich farm," said an ostrich farmer, "you will see some male birds strutting proudly about with three or four broods in addition to their own, while other males mope wretchedly without any broods at all."

"The male ostrich, you see, is a very fond parent. He swaggers away from the nest in the morning to give his young ones an airing, and when he spies another male occupied in the same way he puts up a fight and, if he wins, he collars the beaten bird's brood."

"To see one of these proud males in the spring of the year swelling round with goodness knows how many little ones is a sight to bring tears to a true father's eyes."—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Mills for Milk

There is a tradition of a boy from London who was disappointed with the country, where he went for a holiday, because he saw them "pump milk from a dirty old cow."

The boy's idea of artificial milk is within realization, for after manufactured butter we are to have artificial milk. It is already consumed extensively in China and a mill is to be set up in France.

The Chinese drop a powder into water, stir it and it becomes milk. The powder is a soy bean crushed. The French mill is to treat the bean so as to enable the milk powder to be sold in packets. It is said that cheese is obtained by the same process.—London Globe.

Rose Bushes That May Be Classed as Freaks

As a rule rose bushes are not classed with yews and oaks among the long-lived and ancient, but a rose tree on the wall of Hildesheim cathedral, Prussia, can be traced back with certainty to the Eleventh century.

The castle of Chillon, on Lake Geneva, in which the famous "Prisoner" of Byron's poem was interned, has a very large rose tree of unknown age, and in the Marine gardens at Toulon there is one that spreads across a space of 80 feet by 15 feet, and which has been known to bear 50,000 blooms at the same time!

The biggest rose tree in Europe is in the Wehrle gardens in Friesburg, Germany. Its stock is a wild rose on which a "tea rose" was grafted 40 years ago. Today the bush is 120 feet high.

Bark "Wrapping Paper"

The Chopti Tibetans retain their individuality partly because they inhabit inaccessible mountains. At their capital, Choni, on the Tao river, lives the hereditary Chinese ruler of 48 tribes of this people. He can levy taxes, quell rebellions and administer punishment, but the Chinese say of him, "He has the pig's head, but cannot find the door of the temple." They imply that he is willing to give bribes to keep his position, but too many officials expect them, and he cannot tell which deserve the largest. A recent study of the province includes extensive botanical and zoological observations. One tree, known locally as the "red birch," is a boon to traders. It has a shining, brown, papery bark, which peels off in large, thin sheets, which are used by Tibetans and Chinese.

Bluebelle is a lovely girl. People like her. She has a way with her, a way that invites confidences. But sometimes one of her confiding friends has to take her to task mildly.

"Well, you remember it was a strange gate post," responded Bluebelle gravely.

His Business Proposition

By W. C. SHERLOCK

WNU Service

GENTLEMEN, I am thirty thousand dollars short in my accounts as trustee!

Howard Marriott, president in the legal profession, director of several banks and trustee of the estates of many widows and orphans, spoke calmly and deliberately.

The three gentlemen, each president of a large life insurance company, sitting on the opposite side of the long desk, stared at each other in blank amazement at Marriott's confession—then fixed their eyes upon the speaker.

"Gentlemen," continued Marriott, drawing three life insurance policies from his pocket, "as I said, I am thirty thousand dollars short in my accounts as trustee of various estates. There is no possible way by which I can repay this money unless you agree to my proposition."

"You're a cool hand, Marriott. I must confess," remarked Mr. Walker, half-admiringly. "Most men would either cut and run or commit suicide if they were in your fix."

"My proposition is this," continued Marriott, apparently not heeding the interruption: "I hold here, three incontestable policies on my life. Each is for twenty thousand dollars. The premiums that have been paid do not make a very large sum and the cash surrender values of these policies would not pay the shortage of which I have spoken."

"Then why have you sent for us?" demanded Mr. Washburne, impatiently. "Your affairs are no concern of ours."

"I have sent for you to offer to turn these policies over to you," replied Marriott calmly, "upon the payment to me of ten thousand dollars for each. That will enable me to make good to those who have been defrauded through me."

"Impossible! You must be crazy!" chorused the three presidents, rising, as if to terminate the interview.

"My proposition will save you, or rather your companies, ten thousand dollars apiece," continued Marriott, drawing a little bottle from his vest pocket and holding it so that it could be plainly seen. "Two or three drops of this liquid will end my life in as many minutes and your companies will be called upon to pay my executors twenty thousand dollars apiece. That will amount to sixty thousand dollars and will repay the shortage to those who have been wronged through me; the remainder, as I have no heirs, I have directed to be paid over to several charitable institutions. It is for you to decide, gentlemen. Will you pay the ten or the twenty thousand apiece?"

The presidents drew their chairs close together in whispered consultation.

"The thing is impossible," remarked Mr. Walker, irritably. "Marriott is a fool to expect us to do such a thing."

"It would be a precedent for every rogue in the country to extort money from insurance companies," interposed Mr. Shelton, with conviction. "I, for one, am opposed to any such compromise."

"Better be careful," advised Mr. Washburne, cautiously. "I fully believe Marriott means what he says and I, for one, don't care to witness a suicide."

"I shall give you five minutes to discuss the question, gentlemen," called Marriott, laying his open watch upon the desk. "Then I shall decide for you."

The whispered consultation continued, and at last Mr. Washburne, as spokesman for the three, turned to Marriott.

"Why did you take that money? he asked, earnestly. "You have always been considered honest and above suspicion, enjoying the confidence of every one."

"The money was taken from me by some one whom I will not name," replied Marriott, wearily. "I placed confidence in one person, who has repaid me by robbing me, not only of all I had but of that which was intrusted to my care. That is all I can say."

"We may do as you wish," continued Mr. Washburne, more pityingly than sternly. "If you will consent to two conditions. The first is that you will never tell anyone that we have bought your policies for such a sum, so far in excess of their value."

"I promise that," replied Marriott. "If you, upon your part, agree not to reveal my defalcation to any one."

"We will keep your secret inviolate," affirmed Mr. Washburne. "The second condition is that you turn over all trust moneys to some one to be appointed by the court. If you agree to that, we will accept your proposition, although we will have to request that we be permitted to oversee the transfer of the trust funds."

"It was my purpose," responded Marriott in the same listless tone, "in the event of your acceptance of my proposition, to turn over my trusts and never, under any circumstances, be responsible for a dollar of another person's money. If that is all, gentlemen, just sign these agreements to pay ten thousand dollars each when the court appoints a new trustee, and then accompany me to the courthouse to file my petition for release from my trusteeships."

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

BUBBLES AND MONEY

IN THIS country and Canada a common superstition is that bubbles floating on a cup of tea or coffee signifies that money is coming to you. In some sections it is considered necessary to try and take up the bubbles in a spoon; you will have as many dollars as you can catch bubbles. This is a remnant of the ancient magic art of hydromancy, divination by a cup of water as practiced by Joseph in Egypt. See Genesis 44:5. Water was used for divination by the Egyptians because Isis was sometimes regarded as the earth when fecundated by the waters of the Nile and a vessel of water was therefore carried in her processions. In ancient times any troubling of the waters, in a pool or in a cup, was considered of significance. In modern necromancy the coffee cup has succeeded to the divining cup of Joseph and tea and coffee to the fecundating waters borne before Isis. But as of old, the bubbles rising in our divining cup mean something.

But why money? Because the influence of Egyptian mythology upon Roman mythology was strong and though the cult of Isis was but slightly identified with the cult of Juno; yet Isis was the chief of the Egyptian goddesses as Juno was the chief of the Roman goddesses.

So it is the breath of Juno that rises in bubbles in our coffee cups and Juno, under her name of Moneta, means money. Doubtless when the ancient Romans practiced this rite with a cup of water they invoked the goddess.
