A air conditioner is shown here installed in a hospital room, so unobtrusive and compact it takes up little space even in the cramped quarters of the

4.—Turn on the heat, or turn on the cold! This air conditioning unit does both, and to complete its responsibility of supplying perfect indoor weather the year round, it keeps Old Man Humidity on the run in the hot and sultry of the major demands and quests of mankindcomfort. In giving perfect indoor weather the year round, despite changing seasons and erratic activities of temperature and humanity they open the way for industrial and financial development of the tropics and the Orient, where white men swelter in misery under the depressing humity, and laborers collapse from the effect of hard, manual activity coupled with heat and sultriness.

The farmer who spends every daylight hour in the summer in the sun-baked fields will have respite, and his wife, accustomed to a hard working existence among the pots, pans and cooking range in the kitchen, will blossom out a changed woman.

Business men who should wear their coats and keep their ties tied will be able to work as energetically and as smartly appearing in the summer as in winter, and their clerks and stenographers will have the alertness and desire to please that helps so much in retaining the patronage of old customers, and building up good will with new.

The answer to the brighter existence held out by aerologists to followers of almost every activity is based on the fact that despite the hottest temperatures and most depressing humidiy of the working hours a man or woman can stand them day after day if they are able to sleep soundly in real comfort and repose, instead of fitfully and uncomfortably.

When air conditioning experts talk about homes and buildings with closed windows, a chorus of public thought sings out with these interjections: "What about carbon dioxide? How about headaches brought on by closed, stuffy rooms? How about that depressing feeling that overcomes us when we don't get enough fresh You forget what doctors say about fresh

The answer is on file in the public documents of the federal government in Washington, Privately many members of the medical profession have known for some years that factors other than a lack of so-called fresh air causes headaches and nausea in crowded places. But few have had the courage to be outspoken in the face of general belief and upset the belief imbedded in the public consciousness for so many

It is interesting to know how philosophers and scientists of centuries ago regarded air and how their findings stack up with modern scientific developments. Aristotle, founder of a school of thought that swayed the thinking of mankind for more than 1,000 years, regarded air as one of nature's four cardinal elements, the others being fire, earth and water.

Up until 1757 little was known about air. Then, Dr. Joseph Black, who was experimenting with chemicals, made the discovery of a gas he called "fixed air," now known as carbon dioxide. In 1775, Joseph Priestly isolated oxygen, calling it "dephlogisticated air," and thus, for the first time mankind began to have some exact knowledge of atmosphere.

Lavoisier, a leading student of his period, a few years later discovered carbon dioxide would extinguish flame. He concluded, therefore, that an excess amount of carbon dioxide formed by breathing would contaminate indoor air. His more coal, John . . . nor any of standing and reputation brought ready acceptance for this theory, and it was but a natural | fine, I know. step to the premise that fresh air, without excessive carbon dioxide and with an abundance of oxygen, was necessary for human well be-

A small number of scientists refused to concur in Lavoisier's theory but most scientists, engineers and medical men held their tongues in the belief nothing was to be gained by the voicing of contrary opinions.

Among the first public reports of these early theories is that of Dr. R. R. Savers, surgeon of the United States public health service, and chief surgeon of the Department of Commerce's bureau of mines, a division that knows as much if not more about pure and impure air than any research organization in the world.

In reprint No. 1150 of the public reports, Doctor Sayers states: "It was observed by many investigators that it was not until the oxygen content of the respiratory air fell below 10 per cent that animals began to breathe with difficulty. Friedlander and Herter concluded from the results of their experiments that inhaling of 20 per cent carbon dioxide for several hours has no poisonous effect. Not until a mixture of gas containing 30 per cent or more of carbon dioxide was introduced did they find an appearance of depression, Leblanc pointed out that under conditions in which the carbon dioxide content of the air increases considerably, in lecture_rooms, theaters, etc., the reduction of oxygen content is small and very seldom falls below 20 per cent, while the carbon dioxide content very seldom exceeds 1 per cent."

The same facts have been established by other investigators of standing since that time. W. Mehl, an engineer, in 1903 announced definitely the nonexistence of a "breath poison." He asserted the carbon dioxide content of a room is not a correct measure for the necessity of ventilation.

The scientific findings definitely established that it is the combination of heat and humidity that is so depressing and injurious to mental and physical alertness, and the consequent damage to business and industrial efficiency brought on by personal discomfort. With these facts, engineers working on conditioning of indoor air found that it is easy to be comfortable in a room in which the customary thermometer shows a temperature of 90 degrees, if the humidity is lowered.

Leading economists, engineers and builders have hailed air conditioning as the next big industry of the nation, an industry supplying a product that will take a place along with the telephone, automatic refrigeration and the automobile in general acceptance and necessity. They point out also that air conditioning is a new achievement that replaces practically nothing now in use, finds for itself a place in popular demand, and opens the way to increased manufacturing, sales and installation activity.

Prissy's Quest

By HELEN ST. BERNARD

THE Wednesday afternoon Ladies' Aid society of Midhill was stunned into silence. Eleven pairs of hitherto busy hands were idle. Eleven flannelette night gowns for the small inmates of the Orphans' asylum were forgotten. The twelfth member of the "Aid," Priscilla Pratt, was standing at the door, her hand on the knob, her round face flushed, her eyes shining. In her other hand, she held some gaily colored, descriptive circulars, the covers of which bore a picture of a diminutive steamer.

"Think of it," and her voice was husky with emotion. "Four months of romance! Panama-Honolulu-Japan! Cherry blossom time in Japan! India -and the Taj Mahal! Egypt! The Nile and the Pyramids! Italy and Vesuvius-Venice! St. Marks and the pigeons! Monte Carlo and the Rock of Gibraltar! Mine . . . for . . . four . . . whole . . . months!" Prissy had read the literature of "The Golden Tour' thoroughly. Mrs. Carruthers, the minister's wife, was the first to speak. "We are glad you had the money left you by your uncle, Prissy. You have worked so hard taking care of your folks. Getting along in years . . and never having married. Money . . . " The newly made heiress started to button on her coat, her eyes traveling from face to face. She spoke slowly and distinctly. "Yes, all that! Getting along in years . . never having married . . . and that is why I am going to spend part of the money Uncle Charlie left me . . going around the world! I'm going to see things! Beauty, life! I'm going to find that romance they talk about."

Priscilla Pratt, the staid demure little spinster of Midhill-going around the world!

"A trip around the world!" and Mrs. Smiley clicked her teeth. "My, my. If you should change your mind, Prissy, you might take a nice little trip down to Pittsburgh. It's only a day's ride from here, and there are lots of theaters and pictures and big stores."

"I am going around—the world! You don't understand, none of you! I want romance! Something I have never had."

John Blake, Midhill's carpenter, was a regular caller at Prissy's little cottage on Main street. He lived across the apple orchard in the home he had built many years before, when he had first asked Prissy to marry him. John had always made things easy for Prissy. He had told her at that time, that he would wait-always.

Prissy had the circulars ready to show John when he came that night. His face was ruddy red from the cold "Winter has set in now, Prissy, and you'd better get in another ton of coal while Jeff has it. And I told Watkins to leave you a few of his hubbard squash when he passes . . ." Prissy was sitting very straight in her little rocking chair. "I don't think . . . I'll need any the squash, although his squash are

John looked up quickly. "No?" he

"You have been a good, true friend, John . . . and I have thought, perhaps, some day I could repay you for all your kindness." "It's been nothing, Prissy." John was embarrassed. "You remember what I told you twenty years back? When you were ready to come to me . . I'd be waitin'? I ain't changed, Prissy . . 'I know, John. Life has been hard for me . . . and it would have been harder if it hadn't been for you. I want you to know I'm grateful to you. All my life I've dreamed of romance . . . and beauty. Life!"

John hitched his chair closer and leaned forward. He placed his big hard hand over hers. His voice was gentle: "Prissy, life is hard . . . if you haven't anyone to care for . . or care for you. Hard . . . and lonely. And I love you just the same.' Prissy reached out for her sewing that lay on the window seat. She dropped it over the gaily colored circulars in her lap and her hands were folded on top of it; idle, just as eleven pairs of hands had lain idle that afternoon on sewing, at the Aid society. She met John's kind gray eyes, so near. He smiled at her. "I'll do my best to make you happy, Prissy. I'll try to bring all the beauty I can into your life. All the romance and the happiness . . . that comes with love, Prissy dear. I'll love you . always."

She smiled at John and his hand tightened over hers.

"Do you suppose I could give you all the romance and happiness you have wanted all these years?" he asked gently. "Do you, Prissy? We might take a trip down to Pittsburgh for two or three days, but Peters is anxious to get the plaster on his walls so he can move in next month."

"Life wouldn't mean much if you don't have some one to love you . . ." "Would you like to honeymoon at Pittsburgh, Prissy?"

"I have always wanted to go to Pittsburgh, John, since I was a mite of a girl. 'Always!"

Prissy's head was against John's shoulder now. "And they say the blast furnaces light the sky up beautiful, nights . . ."

Slight Warning Given

of Deadly Poison Gas Carbon monoxide poisoning is one of the greatest dangers of modern life. The gas, given off by almost all forms of combustion, has no smell and gives no ordinary warning, but two symptoms have been noted which may be valuable.

First, there may be a slight swelling and hardening of the small arteries which one can feel beating in the temples; second, there is often a slight weakness of the muscles in the back of the legs.

In treating a case the victim should not be moved more than necessary; the air must be fresh and should not be cold; the patient should be kept absolutely quiet until recovery is complete. Artificial respiration is necessary if breathing has ceased, but the most important thing is prompt use of a modern inhalation apparatus using oxygen and a little carbon dioxide .-- World's Work.

Where the Story of Transport Will Be Shown

Most of the theater for the travel and transport show of 1933 has already been built. It consists of the travel and transport building with its sky hung" dome and a mile strip of shore along Lake Michigan near the heart of Chicago.

Today visitors gaze in wonder at Rallroad Dome-a gargantuan structure rising 125 feet high and 200 feet across from its 310-foot base. The dome of the Washington Capitol or of St. Peter's in Rome could be comfortably tucked beneath its hanging roof. Architects explain that the roof is suspended by steel cables hung from a circle of 12 steel towers and anchored on the exterior to slabs of concrete each as big as a house. It is the first application to architecture of the suspension bridge principle,

The dome "breathes"! Expansion joints enable the roof to rise and fall, expand and contract as much as six feet in circumference with changes in temperature, wind velocity, rain and snowfall. Use of the suspension bridge principle has obviated the use of pillars, arches or other interior supports and given Railroad Dome the largest unobstructed area ever enclosed beneath a roof. Here spectators will see Stephenson's Rocket, the first successful steam locomotive, which has been loaned to the exposition by the British government-and other historic engines and cars. East of the Travel and Transport building visitors will view a pageant of men and women from all lands and ages traveling and hauling goods in the principal ways of which history has knowledge. The procession will move by land, water and air. Ox team and log dugout will give place to stagecoach and sailing vessel, these in turn to primitive railroad train and steamship, these last to ultra-modern electric locomotive, speed boat, racing automobile, monoplane and dirigible-all to the accompaniment of music and drama.

Special phases of railroad history will be shown in the dome and the south portion of Transportation Hall, 1,000 feet long and windowless, adjoining it. Marine exhibits will be shown in a section of a modern de-luxe ocean liner complete from B deck to captain's bridge.

The north section and at least two separate exhibit buildings will be used to tell the story of motor transportation. In the building which the General Motors company is erecting, one will see carried on the entire operation of

So Plunger Buster Bear is another fisherman who does all his fishing in the Laughing to her to show her how much he Brook. This is because Buster does not want to leave the Green Forest. His cousin, Bobby Coon, is also quite content with what he can catch in the Laughing Brooks. Longlegs the Heron often fishes along the edge of the Big River, but he, too, is content with minnows and pollywogs.

But it is not so with Plunger the Fish Hawk. No, indeed. He wastes no time on the little fish of the Laughing Brook or the Smiling Pool. Once in a while he fishes in the Smiling Pool when his keen eyes discover a fish there which is worth catching, but most of his fishing is done in the Big River. Every day he and Mrs. Plunger fly over to the Big River. One goes up the Big River and one goes down. To their broad wings miles are nothing, and so, high in the air above the shining water, they swing back and forth from shore to shore for long distances, their wonderful "Washington, de capital," piped eyes fixed on the water,

Now, it is a fact which perhaps you do not know that from high in the air, looking straight down into the water, you can see much farther below the surface than you can when close to the water. So the keen eyes of Plunger can look right down into the Big River and see the fish swimming there. When he sees one near enough to the top he closes his wings and drops like a shot, with his great claws spread ready to seize the fish. But he does not always succeed. Oh, my, no! Did you ever know a fisherman who always succeed? I never did. Plunger is just like all fishermen, missing his fish quite as often and perhaps oftener than he catches one, And he is like all good fisehmen in another thing, the possession of patience.

On this particular morning Plunger was having no luck at all. Perhaps it was because he wasn't as patient as usual. The truth is he was rather impatient. He wanted a fish, a big fish, not for himself, but for Mrs. Plunger. Why didn't he leave it to Mrs. Plunger to catch her own breakfast? I'll tell you why. It was because Mrs. Plunger was very busy with household duties. There were

DON'T KNOW ABOUT DEPRESSION

The thing that ought most to concern the country is the thing that affects general business stability-better business. business means employment.

It is no secret that business has been steadily falling instead of the bunk that has been handed out. Certainly when there is less and less is no time to be unnecessarily spending any penny of public

Surely when those who pay the tax bills have less and less to pay, it cannot be expected that they can pay as much taxes. Surely they cannot pay more.

If they have less and less, it stands to reason that public officials cannot contract greater debts in the name of the taxpayers—the home owner, the family head and get away with it for long.

There can be not cuts in taxes unless there are cuts in spending.

Taxes are no different from any other bill that you have to You know if you order goods you will eventually have to pay for them in one way or another. You ought not to order what you are not able to pay for.

You ought not to buy beyond your capacity to spend. There ought to be some relationship between income and expenditures. It is exactly the same with the municipality as a whole.

Expenditures cannot safely be contracted in its name, if its people's income is falling. The income of the country as a whole has been falling and will continue to fall according to all signs. It is a little short of treason for public officials to attempt to spend as

This is one place where some local public officials have not heard of the depression. They plan to spend about as usual on the

There is no desire even in these times on the part of anyone whom we know of to cut any essential educational function. There is no reason, however, that things in Carteret should cost more than they do elsewhere.

The comparative statistics show that that has been going on steadily. Anyone who knows anything about the past history of the controls knows the story. However, it might be wise to consider the words of Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, who appeared before the United States Senate Committee on Banking and Currency on Monday. Leonard P. Ayres, Vice-President of the Cleveland Trust Company, is considered one of the leading economic authorities of

Colonel Ayres had this to say before the committee:

'We are still going to be in a depression in 1933. Recovery is always slower than decline. If that is true, it shows that we are not half way through the depression.

Business is still going down and has been going down for two and one-half years. I think we can be sadly confident that we have a long period of depression ahead of us.

If that is true, it is time it did. However, the increase ought to he looked down and saw a squirre be borne according to the service rendered to the various classifi- with one paw on the muzzle and cations of mail handled.

FEDERAL TAXES

Much of the Federal taxes needed to balance the budget could be obtained from a levy on liquor.

The fear of some of the drys is that such a levy would have the legal effect of a recognition of the specific content of liquors.

That is to say, if four per cent beer were taxable under the revenue bill this move might make four per cent beer legal to manu- tween his feet and the roadway hefacture and sell.

So, because of existing hypocrisy, that we have prohibition when we know it does not exist, we have to raise money in other sponded: ways.

Liquors of all kinds previously yielded large state and Federal revenue Now we have no revenue, yet as much if not more liquor is consumed. Previously we had no Federal enforcement forces. Now the federal "enforcement" costs run into hundreds of millions.

If we could do away with Federal "enforcement" costs and tax all liquor consumed, we would have practically all we need to balance the budget without raising additional taxes.

Why not let those States, whose people want liquor, have it? As it is they get it anyhow and all the people whether they drink or not are paying in other taxes not only the amount of revenue liquor previously yielded, but additional taxes for "enforcement.

Since prohibition does not exist, why not let those who purchase liquo, pay the taxes that normally go with it?

Bond of Relationship

There is a relation between sugar and melancholy.

Investigations reported by Dr. P. K. McCowan in the British Medical Journal, Lancet, show that in certain types of insanity the amount of blood sugar above the normal is closely associated with the depth of the depression.

Doctor McCowan has devised a technique for measuring the "hyperglycaeic index" as a measure of abnormal blood content and believes that it has some diagnostic value. Thus a patient who apparently had recovered from a depression would not be released while the blood sugar remained too high. In insane states characterized by extreme excitement, he found, there is little abnormality in this re-

Sometimes a depressed patient will be found, he reported, who has a low blood sugar index. This is a bad sign and greatly diminishes the likelihood of recovery. The sugar increase in depression,

e says, is a secondary phenomenon incidental to hody changes that acompany emotion.

"Hunger March" Started

Levolution in France In France the great revolution bean with the arrival in Paris during July, 1789, of thousands of "hunger digrims" from the provincial towns, James Waldo Fawcett writes, in the Washington Post. They had marched to the capital to demand bread of the ting. It was these riotous elements which joined with the city mob to take the Base on July 14. By October the swollen population of the metropolitan area was starving. The municipality endeavored to supply bread to the more necessitous people, but the demand was too great to be met in this way. On October 5 a delegation of women set out for Versailles to petition Louis XVI. As they marched they were joined by multitudes of other women. Arriving at their goal they increased their originally mild de-

SYNOPSIS

Ragged and starving, a boy of about sixteen is befriended by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. The boy, Shad (Sheridan), is sent to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake, The colonel, his wife, and their daughter, Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in the village of Amity Dam, and meets a youth of his age. "Hony," and Bumpy Brown. tinker, considered a drunkard because of his periodic lapses from strict sobriety. Bat Morryson comes, determined to take his son back to his own dissolute life, He is overawed by Colonel Blake, the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. A girl, young and pretty, comes to Brown's shack, and retty, to me to Brown's shack, and retty, to me to Brown's shack, as strong hold on his heart. In an attack made on the Perry family, Oscar-Perry, the father, and his daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, wife of Cyrus Doolittle, prominent citizen, are shot and seriously wounded. Circumstantial evidence points to Bumpy Brown as the assailant. He is arrested, Shad loses his job, and goes to live with Bony, at Miss Spenlow's. The two boys seek and find disguises the murderer had worn. Colonel Blake is almost convinced Brown is not the murderer.

"There's the greatest man I ever knew," said Bony. "He's so gol" durned smart an' kind o' solemn I'm always a little scairt when he talks

"If it's possible to love a man, I love him." Shad answered, but Bony never praised so lavishly.

In the morning the boys set out on the familiar road to Ashfield. They went behind Doty's barn and back to the highway. They searched the thickets and culverts along that thoroughfare. They came to a stone wall on the east side of the highway. Shad took one side of the wall and Bony the other. They looked into every hole and crevice. They had surveyed a long stretch of wall when Bony on the side toward the fields shouted:

He leaped over the wall with the colored handkerchief and a small, light-colored slouch hat in his hand. He held them up before him. There were the eye-holes in the handker-

There was a touch of awe in the excitement of the two boys. Shad looked off at the river.

"This don't do Bumpy any good," he remarked. "His place is below here. He might have hid the hat and the handkerchief and then cut across to the river and got into his boat."

"But he didn't. You forgit the man in the broad-brimmed hat. He was seen away below here. I know it ain't the best place fer these things to be hid, but we can't help that, Facts is facts. The murderer went on down the road, I tell ye,"

Bony put the hat and handkerchief in his coat pocket. They went on down the road. Bony suggested: "Supposin' they thought I had killed Oscar Perry an' they come an' took us up an' found that hat an' han'kerchief in my pocket. I couldn't prove no allerby. I was down settin' on the ol' dam all 'lone studyin' astronomy an' stealin' a smoke. I heard the shots. I didn't stir 'cause I thought Deacon Meriwether was out shootin' at a 'coon in the his chicken yard. I didn't come up to the store till I heard the women bawlin'. I couldn't prove no allerby."

"Well, it washes my hands, I left the Daytons at just five minutes of seven by their clock."

"Then I guess you better keep these things," said Bony as he passed them to Shad.

They passed the Benson mansions on their way into town. They were just outside the village of Ashfield.

"You're better dressed than I be," said Bony. "Go up an' see if you can find that hired girl. Tell 'em you're a friend of ol' Bumpy Brown, the tinker, an' that you're tryin' to belp him. I'll bet they know the ol' man an' his bird."

Shad dreaded the task but did not hesitate. Such grandeur as loomed before him when he neared the lawns, he had never seen. Shad considered what he would say to those grand people. He decided first to speak of his friends, E. C. Converse and Colonel Blake. He went to the nearest of the big houses and rang the bell at its front door. A servant opened it. The boy asked for Mr. Benson. He explained that he wished to see him about Bumpy Brown. He was shown to the library, where sat one of the distinguished Benson brothers. Shad trembled with awe when the man arose and asked;

"Boy, what can I do for you?" The tone of the man's voice was reassuring. Shad had learned that a gentleman was welcome anywhere.

"My name is Shad Morryson," he said as he stood bending the visor of his cap in his nervous hands. "I am a friend of E. C. Converse, sir, and of Colonel Blake."

"Good! I know them both, That establishes your standing." Shad was getting better control of his breath. He made a new start.

"I have been working in the store up at Amity Dam. I know Bumpy Brown. He has been arrested for the murder of Oscar Perry. He is not

With the rashness of youth Bony told of the different points in the road where the man with the broadbrimmed hat had been seen in the darkness escaping toward Ashfield, A mile below Amity Dam he had hidden the colored handkerchief which had masked his face and the slouch hat in a stone wall. Half a mile out of Ashfield he shoved the broad-brimmed hat in the hollow of an old stump and put a cap on his head. In the edge of the village he was wearing the cap.

Tense with interest, every one was leaning forward in his chair gazing at the boy. The landlord was first to speak, asking:

"How do you know he hid the hand kerchief and the hats?"

"We found them today." "Where are they?"

"We've got 'em." "Let us have a look at them." "No sir-ee. We ain't goin' to show 'em to nobody till we see the district attorney. He's up at Kildare pond huntin' deer. One of us is goin' up there tomorrow to find him." They went out-of-doors and hastened toward the bridge.

The tavern gossips of Ashfield had something new to talk about. Mr. Evarts said that he thought that the boy had told the truth. The drummer was also of that opinion.

"He's a notorious young liar," sald Robert Royce. "There isn't a lazier an' more harum-scarum chap in this county."

In a few minutes he and Ellery Anderson and the stranger arose and put on their overcoats and went over to the Kensington barroom.

When the boys arrived in Amity Dam they saw a light in the study windows of the doctor. They rang his doorbell. The doctor gave them a hearty welcome. They told him of their success.

"We have made quite a step toward the truth," said the doctor, "Shad will go into the woods to take these things to Colonel Blake tomorrow?"

"Yes, sir," was Shad's answer. "I suggest that you leave those things in my care," said the doctor. "I want to take them with me," Shad answered.

Duelists Barred From Office in Many States

South Carolina has a provision in its constitution requiring a man taking oath of office to declare that he had not challenged anyone to a duel nor fought a duel since being nominated. Virginia required an oath of this kind until 1928, when this particular provision was eliminated. Other states have in their constitutions sections forbidding office holders or egislators to participate in dueling. While the practice of dueling has been practically dead in this country for many years, there was a time when it was most popular, particularly among legislators. Henry Clay, of Kentucky, fought two famous duels, one with John Randolph. A Kentucky congressman named Graves fought and killed a Maine congressman named Cilley in 1838. Political arguments a hundred years ago often ended in chal- height of his rhetorical outburst a great many were rendered homeless. Alabama was the worst sufferer, the deaths in that state reaching a total of at least 246. Thirty-five were killed in Georgia, eighteen in Tennessee and two each in South Carolina and Kentucky. As communications were broken down over wide areas the lists may be enlarged later. To add to the distress a wave of unseasonably cold weather came, and farmers in the regious hardest hit faced the prospect of a planting season without implements, live stock or shelter.

The National Guard was called to the relief work in Alabama and tents, cots and blankets were hurriedly distributed to the sufferers, while welfare agencies collected food and clothing. Gov, B. M. Miller formally called on the people of the state to contribute to the relief of those in the storm areas and the Red Cross, of course, was on the job promptly.

"In addition," Mr. Johnson said, "there are the 4,000,000 veterans of the World war who did not have a chance to vote on prohibition. The women never have had an opportunity to express their views through the ballot. This is a democracy and the people of this country are entitled to a referendum on prohibition."

The Johnson expression of opinion came at a time when renewed pressure is being brought on the White House by wet Republican leaders to influence President Hoover to agree to the insertion of a wet plank in the Republican platform.

Famous Beauty Expert

Conflicting Beauty Theories AT LEAST once in every day of a beauty editor's life comes the cry: "What's a body to do-So and So says do and So and So says don'tand how can one avoid being bewiltheories?" The answer invariably is: Study yourself, your own needs, accept the theory that appeals to your best judgment as being good, sound, sense. Givethat theory a chance, be persistent, have faith and your efforts should brings results. Beauty experiments should be thorough, not haphazard, flyby-night affairs.

No one hears more conflicting beauty theories than beauty students themselves. In quest of the reason for being of feminine loveliness, one finds that successful exponent number one observes every fundamental beauty rule on which most beauty experts agree. Her daily ritual consists of exercise, a faithful eye to balance in her diet, sufficient fresh air and restful sleep, a daily facial with all the preparations of the same brand, careful hair brushing and similar beauty details.

But exponent number two, equally as young looking and equally as beautiful, points with pride to the fact that she observes nary a beauty rule, No sir. Not she. But-are beauty students bewildered? Just as emphatically-no sir. For they know that there must be a catch some place.

It may be that the beauty under discussion is just naturally healthier and lovelier than the average.

Then there's the owner of a beautiful figure who never exercises. But every day she walks two miles, and every evening she swims in the pool in her apartment hotel. As though these aren't the two best all-around exercises. Furthermore, she keeps her muscles under splendid control by perfect posture.

A screen star I know, says: "Dietbah-I eat anything I like," but evidently from what I've seen of the lunches I've had with her, she has no desire for rich, fatty foods.

The moral of these stories, is: don't be bewildered and don't attempt to imitate. If your favorite actress thrives on a mixture of cosmetics, that is no indication that your skill will stand the same kind of treatment. Or, if your latest crush seems alive and alert o nonly three hours of sleep, that is no clue for you to start staying up nights. Scientists Fight Pests

With Natural Enemies Entomologists, it is reported, are gradually changing their method of warfare against our insect foes. Instead of attempting to discover effective insecticides, they are now seeking methods of causing insects to war against each other. Fortunately the insect world is never really at peace at any time. The tremendous reproductive powers of this form of life are offset by the bugs, flies and birds which prey upon them. The best way to keep the coddling moth under control, it has been found, is through a tiny wasp and likewise the meally bug is best kept under control by its natural enemies.

Instead of searching for insecticides, therefore, the search is for the natural enemies of the pest it is desired to combat and these are then imported or increased by protection from their natural enemies in turn.

KISSING BANDIT AGAIN IN PRISON

Woman Who Robbed Minister Stages Second Jailbreak.

Jefferson City, Mo,-Edna Murray. Kansas City's "kissing bandit," who recently escaped from the Missouri penitentiary, has been cought and is again behind the bars.

Mrs. Murray was serving twentyfive years for a holdup, during which she offered Rev. H. H. Southard, a Kansas City minster, a kiss after she and her husband had robbed the minister of his money, trousers and shoes.

It was the second time that she had escaped from the prison. She was captured less than three months ago in Chicago, whither she had fled after her first break about three years ago. This time, however, Edna did not get so far from the prison, for in the fight of the next day a sheriff's posse found her with three other companions hiding in the weeds near the prison

The three women had escaped over a high wire fence surrounding the prison farm home. The others were Della Hazel, eighteen, serving a twoyear term for motor car theft, and Mary Grace Hamel, eighteen, serving thirty-five years for bank robbery.

In the robbery of the mnister on April 6, 1925, Mrs. Murray and her husband obtained $195 in addition to the preacher's pants.

"Now," Mrs. Murray asked, "wouldn't you like to kiss me good-hy?"

The preacher, shivering in the April winds, declined and hastily started for the street car line. He succeeded in obtaining a pair of trousers before he had gone far.

Several newspapers in the country commented on the holdup editorily, stating that "Missouri chivalry was like the Missouri mule, not what it used to be."

Teacher Put in Trance Speaks Ancient Tongues

Bucharest.-A story of H. G. Wells about a youth who wrote in his dreams, talked and wrote the language of ancient Babylon, has found a parallel in real life.

A teacher, named Joseph Schmidt of Czernovitz, has attracted the attention of psychologists. He can be put into a trance by a simple pressure of the hand. In that state he speaks anclent Babylonian, old Hehrew and classical Greek and sings old Arabian songs. He has studied none of these languages and in his waking state knows only Rumanian and German.

Free Baths for Clergy

in Old Brooklyn City Bath tubs were mighty scarce in Brooklyn in the fifties, and so the genial and popular Edward Gray was looked on as a public benefactor when he established bathing facilities down near the Fulton ferry, writes Maurice E. McLoughlin in the Brooklyn Eagle.

When the nipping air of fall swept over Brooklyn, making river swimming unattractive, Mr. Gray would hire a tug and have his huge floating bathtub towed to its winter berth on the edge of Gowanus bay, where it would be tied until the following season.

It was at this season that Mr. Gray became a combined business man and philanthropist, for he gave all his attention to running his "human laundry," which was in a building he had erected not far from the old Franklin house on lower Fulton street.

Mr. Gray made it a rule never to charge clergymen for making use of his tubs, and dozens of men of the "cloth" flocked to Gray's place on Saturday mornings, emerging "rosy red to their fingertips" and ready to do the final revising of rousing Sunday sermons which undoubtedly got an extra dash of pep from the vigor engendered by the cleansing process at

Odd Fashions in Shoes Favored in Olden Days

The aristocrats in Roman times wore the laced sandal, gilded and eweled, while the Roman soldier wore the nailed shoe, called the callga. In medieval days we find the people carefully considering their foot comfort. They often used cork soles. A padding of small rushes or coarse grass was inserted between the inner and under sole also in early times.

In the Fourteenth century the fashionable shoes had toes which curved outward and gave their owner the appearance of being decidedly splayfooted. Long-toed shoes, which had to be stuffed with moss or wool to keep their shape, were worn also in the Fifteenth century. In order for a person to walk with these, the points had to be turned up and fastened to the knee by a slender chain or colored cord. When people went outside they had to wear clogs or pattens as pro-

He designed and supervised the erection of the Galveston sea wall. His rules of order, the standard authority on parliamentary law, was but an incident in his career.

Valuable, but Hard to Get

The Indian chinoceres is now a comparatively rare animal and is found only in the plains region of Assam, in northeastern India. It lives in marshy grass jungles, where it is fond of walowing in the mud. Its chief foods are canes and shrubs. The reasons for the great expense involved in bringing a specimen to this country for exhibition are its rure occurrence, the fact that it can be hunted only with elephants and the difficulty of capturing and shipping safely so large an animal.

MR. EDITOR:

The following is a report of Assistant Scoutmasters, to their Scoutmasters, after their trip to Now York in a bus. It is so wonderful a report, for a Scoutmaster to receive, that I would like to have you print it as news, for it is very seldom that the youth of today, are as interested and observant for their own benefit. The

We wanted to go to the Museums of Arts and Natural History so you hired the Miss Carteret for us. We canot express our appreciation for your consideration of our comfort in getting this bus for us.

We left Carteret at 8:45 A. M., arriving in New York City at 10:30 A. M., at the Museum of Natural History, where I had to register the Troop and sign as the responsible party for the Troop. Then we made arrangements for eating, and were able to eat in the Cafeteria of the Museum, after which we toured the first two floors at one end of the building, after which we ate our dinner, and then we viewed the other end of the building.

The Museum is divided into halls which have different types of animals. The first hall we went into had African Mammals in it.

These animals are so arranged so that some phase of their life or habits is shown. The outstanding feature here, was an enormous whale varying from others.

The next hall was the Asiatic Memmals and the outstanding mammals were elephants and tigers. The next hall was the Mammals of North America, in which we saw the bear, wolf, moles, fox, hare and many others. Also many other well-known wild animals.

We then saw a hall of birds of New York after which we visited the ordeceolgy of Mexico, Central America and North America, where we State of New Jersey saw, carvings in stone and metal, collections of potery, arrow heads, blankets beads and many other articles of the kind.

Voice of Community in the Advertiser's Words The person who falls to read advertisements is missing one of the most valuable parts of the newspaper. Editorial writers moralize on changes and tendencies which are first indicated in the advertisements. What is the trend of the stage? What are women wearing? Are prices going up or down? What is the condition of the labor market? Are food prices still declining? What new national products are on the market? What have the great national concerns to say in their institutional advertising? What sort of furniture are people buying? What's new in the way of household appliances?

What are the large stores "pushing"? The community speaks with its myriad voices in the advertising columns and the person who confines his attention to the non-advertising portions is missing half of the significant messages of the day.-Exchange.

Craftsmen Bonded

While the New England colonists were very eager for skilled craftsmen to start up their trade in their village, they nevertheless were very cautious and wary, fearful that the stranger might prove shiftless and end in being a burden on the community, unless, of course, he had visible means of support. To protect the colonists, the town pontiffs required that some one go bull for the newcomer.

So we read in 1680; "L. John Usher of Boston, merchant, bind me unto Capt. Thomas Brattle, treasurer of the said town, in the sum of forty pounds that William Smith, Joiner, shall not be chargeable to the town." Another record of the same year states that Robert Medlecot, merchant, signed the bond of John Blake, joiner.

Family Bible Evidence

Held Good by Courts The taking of the census brings to mind a purely secular use which the Bible once enjoyed, and still does, no doubt to some extent, says a writer in Horse and Hounds, London, Entries made in the Bible by the head of the family of births, marriages, and deaths were accepted as good evidence. Hence, we have the curious fact of the sacredness of a book conferring value on secular things. An instance of this was provided in the case of Hans von Huntingdon, when the right to the earldom of Huntington was contested. A Bible from the deceased countess of Moira contained a statement to the effect that the petitioner's uncle, or, on fallure of his issue male, the petitioner's father, was the next heir to the earldom, and this was accepted as sufficient proof of various statements. Family Bibles were often, and may still be, published including spaces for family portraits and details of births. deaths, marriages, etc., and it may be that from this custom the name "family Bible" is derived.

CLERGYMAN PLANS TO ASSIST UNEMPLOYED

The Rev. Reese M. Turner, pastor REPORT OF RELIEF Church, has annonuced that he is beginning a personal investigation of cases of poverty resulting from unemployment in Carteret. This is the first aggressive move to be made by a clergyman of the borough in connection with the depressed economic condition. Mr. Turner has intimated that his investigation will not be exhaustive in that it will not include a study of all the cases where unemployment has brought about conditions of dependence and destitution and that it will not involve an analysis of the local problem nor an estimate of the number of persons affected; but that he is interested in observing a number of specific cases that seem likely to be representative of the local condition in general and trying to suggest and sponsor methods by which these and similar cases may be given relief.

As to the purpose of the investigation, Mr. Turner says that he is doing this work partly for his own benefit since he finds a great need for a working knowledge of the existing social and economic condition in his capacity as pastor. He suggests, however, that "There are three other motives." "First, he says, "I would like to enlighten the men and women who are gainfully employed as to the reality of the condition that exists Number of individuals reamong those who have lost their jobs. Second, I expect this investigation to make it possible for each benefactor to see who is assisted by his persons are kept from lending a ployment and direct relief $17,206.92 for the game costing 25 cents are on efforts. # · The House of the Three Ganders By IRVING BACHELLER

Ragged and starving, a boy of about mixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy, Shad (Sher-12n), is sent to Carton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in the village of Amity Dam, and becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker and village character. Bat Morryson tries to take his son back to his own dissolute life but is overawed by Colonel Blake, the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. Shad applies himself diligently to his neglected education. Love for Ruth Blake takes a strong hold on his heart. In an attack made on the Perry family, Oscar Perry, the father, is fatally shot, and his daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, wife of Cyrus Doolittle, prominent citizen, shot and seriously wounded. Circumstantial evidence points to Bumpy Brown as the assailant, and he is arrested. Shad loses his job, and goes to live with Bony. The two toys zeek and find disguises the murderer had worn.

-10-They were weary and soon asleep. Shad was up at six. He got his breakfast, then put some clothing in Bony's small pack basket. He was ready to take the stage going south at seven o'clock. The sun shone warm out of a clear sky. It softened the surface of the frozen road and improved the wheeling. They reached South Bolton, the end of the stage line, at eleven o'clock. Shad went to Hubbard's store. At a desk sat a well-dressed young lady. She turned from her task as the boy entered. Immediately Shad recognized her. She was the girl whom he and Bony had seen at the door of Bumpy's shack one Sunday-the girl with the haughty manner, the handsome eyes and the glowing red cheeks. She was

"I believe you know Bumpy Brown," Shad began.

"Well, what if I do?" she answered

Shad told of his purpose. She laughed in the unemotional fashion of Bumpy's parrot, and asked:

"Do you think that we can remember the numbers of all the rubbers we sell and the names of the men that buy them? That's impossible."

Many things were impossible in South Bolton. It was a little hamlet in the edge of the big woods. There were no more than forty or fifty people living in its huddle of small haughty manner. There was that in her tone which seemed to indicate that she really wanted to get acquainted with him. To Shad she looked very beautiful,

"I'm sorry, but I have to see a man who is at Kildare pond today," he said. "Is there a livery stable in the place?"

"Yes. It's just across the street." "I'll run over there a minute," he said as he left her.

main's immediately after dinner. He returned to Hubbard's store. The girl now looked sad.

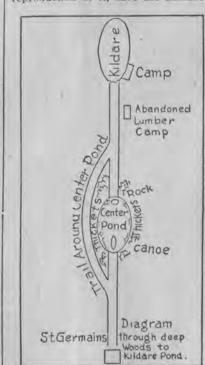

"I think that you have been crying," said the frank boy.

"Yes, there's a lot of crying here among the women-it's so lonesome,' she said. "You get the habit, It's awful to live in the woods,"

"I know what it is. I've lived in the woods myself. I'm sorry for you." Shad sat down there and ate a part of his luncheon. The horse and buggy arrived and he set out with the livery man on a ten-mile ride up the sand plains to the house of Mose St. Germain. The fumous guide was at home. He had left Colonel Blake and Judge Swift | and stood by the stove, "I had to de in the woods. They were hunting. Mose drew a diagram of the trail for Shad to take with him. This is a reproduction of it, save the names:

He told the boy to go straight to Center pond where he would find St. Germain's canoe. Then he was to cross to a big rock in the far edge of the pond beyond which he would find the trail to Kildare. He, Mose, would take the long trail around the pond.

Shad set out on the much traveled trail. He found the waiting canoe and could see the rock of which Mose had spoken, about a quarter of a mile away on the far shore. His treasures, wrapped in his sweater, were now in the pack basket. This he deposited in the bow. A skillful paddler, he pushed through a border of Hly-pads and out into the clear water.

He was well beyond the middle of the pond when a shot from the shore behind him shattered the silence of the deep vale and filled it with echoes. Shad jumped. A bullet had whizzed by his head and struck the water beyond him, and ricochetted on its surface. It had come from some point on the shore he had left a bit east of him. A thought flashed through his brain. He flung his feet over the stern and dropped into the water, and none too quickly. Another ball had whizzed through the air above him, in a rush of sound. Reaching up, he seized the gunwale, and, keeping the canoe between him and the direction whence the shot had come, swam with his free arm. The shooting ceased. The man whose rifle had been aimed at him was no doubt seeking a more favorable point of attack. Shad, with the skill of a lad whose cradle, one may almost say, had been a cance in water, made swifter progress than his enemy had thought possible. He got beyond the rock and ashore, seized his pack basket and crept into the thicket, dragging it beside him. Now covered, he arose, thrust his arms through the basket straps and ran. He was about a mile and a half from Center pond when he came to the abandoned lumber camp on Mose St. Germain's chart. It stood in a little clearing. His clothes, drained and warmed by his exercise, were being the doorway when Shad leaped through a window opening in the rear

A conviction had come to the boy was soon at his destination a mile or so farther on. He felt sure, and with good reason, that he had seen the murderer of Oscar Perry.

Speaker Garner in Dramatic Speech Quells House Sales Tax Rebels—Substitute for Defeated Sales Tax Is Quickly Passed.

SPEAKER JOHN N. GARNER | Airplane (5 per cent on quelled the house of representative tax rebels and assured the nation of tax legislation that would balance the national budget. The members of both parties who had successfully opposed the sales tax provisions of the bill drafted by the ways and means committee promised to be good and support the new oill introduced by the ommittee and as a ubstitute for the sales tax that had been defeated.

Speaker Garner

L all came about when the speaker took the floor and delivered a speech that was a com bination of tempered argument, impassioned plea and camp-meeting exhortation. As he whirled into his peroration, an exalted house membership answered his appeal for those resolved to lead a new life to arise. En masse the congressmen surged to their feet and rook the pledge to pass a tax measure that will balance the budget.

Then the house settled down to business. The ways and means committee introduced its list of new taxes to take the place of the defeated sales tax, and the various items were approved so rapidly that Acting Chairman Crisp had to stop the offering of items in order to give the engrossing clerks time to draw the various amend-

Surplus (with proposed new savings) $ 16.500,000 The house bill provides for the payment of the levied excise and sales taxes by the manufacturer direct to the government, with the method of collecting the taxes about the same as under the general manufacturers' sales tax which was rejected. That does not mean, however, that the tax will not be passed along in the form of an increased price for the merchandise, and there is nothing in the bill that would prevent the manufacurer from directly including the tax tem in his invoice to the jobber or retailer and so on down the line until it reaches the consumer. The fact that the house has passed a revenue bill does not mean that this bill is to be the law of the land. It is almost certain that the senate will not agree. The senate committee is very likely to substitute for the new provisions of the house bill the manufacturers' sales tax that was rejected by the house, and pass the revenue bill in that form. Should it do so it will mean another fight in the house, then a long conference consideration, and there is no pros pect for an early adjournment of congress. Experienced members of both houses are now predicting that there will not be an agreement over a rev enue bill earlier than September.

THE Hoover budget will be slashed a quarter of a billion dollars if the house accepts the recommendations already made and to be made by its appropriations and economy committees, Chairman Joseph W. Byrus (Dem., Tenn.) of the house appropriations committee asserted.

Just prior to announcing his resignation, on a plea of overwork, from the chairmanship of the special economy committee, Mr. Byrns said that body will submit recommendations calling for consolidations and economies totalling at least $75,000,000 and possibly a sum two or three times that

Chairman Byrns said that hearings thus far conducted by the various committees handling governmental supply bills disclosed that at least $150,000,000 could be shaved off the budget figures submitted by President Hoover without in any way impairing the efficiency of the government. The Lytle Brown, chief of engineers. committees plan to slash an additional $30,000,000 from national defense appropriations, Mr. Byrns said.

A corn is nature's way of saying your shoes are too tight. Your toes are sensitive, you know, and your shoe is pressing down too hard on your toes. By and by nature puts the callous we recognize as corns on the toes to protect the delicate tissues from further abuse. The first thing to do is to get a better fitting pair of shoes. Then use a good corn cure. There are many on the market. A very deft hand can remove the callous with a sharp instrument after the feet have remained in very hot water for about fifteen minutes.

But far better than either the corn cure, corn plaster or cutting is a visit to a reputable chiropodist.

It is very important to treat your skin while reducing, as it needs special care in order to avoid flabbluess or a drawn, haggard look. Quite some time ago I had a group of women experiment with a treatment which proved highly successful. First the skin was thoroughly cleansed. Then a nourishing cream applied-a rich, oily emollient-and without removing this cream a quite strong astringent parted over face and neck. The astringent penetrated and tightened while the emollient nourished and softened, thus avoiding any drying effect. Such a treatment will keep the skin smooth, the muscles taut and the contour firm. While on the subject of reducing, let me warn you not to reduce too fast lest it takes its toll from the skin-to say nothing of its detrimental effect on general health. Freckles cannot be removed "very quickly," for anything strong enough to remove them would very likely he injurious to the surrounding skin. Try the peroxide and lemon bleach (equal parts). Pat on, allow to dry, and fellow by a massage with nourishing cream, allowing the cream to remain for five or ten minutes. A stronger bleach can be made with pumice powder and peroxide stirred to a creamy paste. Apply over the freckles, allow to dry, remove with a cloth moistened with cool water and follow with the nourishing cream.

Three Sides to Your Face

THERE may be two sides to every other vital issue, but there are three sides to your face. No doubt you are familiar with the full-face relection you usually see in But do you intimately know the right profile-and the left? If you do, then you know also that each differs rather radically from the other.

Precious few faces are perfectly balanced. And no matter, for slight asymmetry is said to indicate interest and versatility. But, pronounced lack of balance can by careful study, adjustment of makeup and coiffure be minimized.

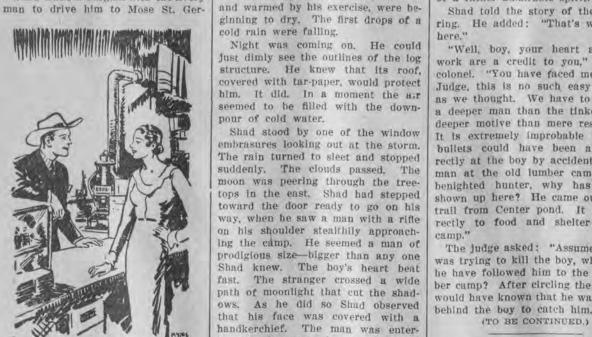

An elaborate study of the "three sides of your face" will tell you why the triple mirror is so necessary and so valuable to every beauty-loving woman. The full-face view, which is the one we ourselves are most familiar with, is usually the kindest of the three. But others see the two other sides. So let us study ourselves and see ourselves as others see us and strive to make each of the three pictures a very perfect one.

Buying a new hat-and a new, thrilling experience each should be-should mean a very careful study in front of a triple mirror. Your own experience can teach you more than any beautician, for every face is a law unto itself. You can suddenly discover that a little asymmetrical turn or twist on one side and a different treatment on the other will serve to enhance each profile view, without in the least detracting from the full-face picture. That is precisely why the tri-cornered hats with the third corner placed here, there and everywhere were becoming to so many women. Don't choose a hat because it gives the wax mannequin an intriguing air. How does it fit your face? And how does it enhance every one of the three views?

That subtle art-the application of makeup-should also provide food for study, with the triple mirror as your constant helpmate. Vanity? Indeed not. Precision and perfection to an exacting degree is what you are striving for. Scrutinize your makeup from all three views. The profile usually tells the truth. And often rouge placed a wee bit differently on one cheekalmost imperceptibly so, of course, a bit higher or lower or extending outward a little more-will give the face more balance and more beauty.

This applies, of course, to your coiffure, too. And this is the reason for the introduction of so much swirling and indulation and the unbalanced hair arrangements. (@. 1932, Bell Syndicate.) - WNU Service.

Shad told of what he and Bony had learned of the man under the broadprimmed hat hastening down the road to Ashfield: of their searching for and finding the hidden handkerchief and hats; of the group of men at the Westminster hotel and of Bony's boastful words in their presence; of Doctor Gorse's suggestions regarding the revolver and the rubbers; of the big man who followed him to the lumber camp.

Shad proudly unwrapped the packages in his basket and laid them before the astonished officers of the law. Colonel Blake drew a chart of the road and river from Ashfield to Safety Glass Discovery The year 1931 is virtually the twenty-first birthday of safety glass, for it was in 1910 that the patent now most generally used was filed. The inventor was Edouard Benedictus, a French chemist of Dutch origin, who had an experimental laboratory in Paris. One day he dropper a bottle to the stone floor, and although it was starred inside like a crystal it did not break. He remembered that it had contained a mixture of various chemicals which had evaporated and coated the interior with a transparent enamel. Benedictus noted the formula, and realized that on his shelf lay the secret of unsplintered glass. The patent was filed in 1910, but it was not till Reginald Delpech, the English pioneer motorist, took up the idea that safety glass was two irreconcilable points of view-that of the American frontiersman and that of the American Indian, From the Indian point of view, Chief Black Hawk was a patriot, fighting bravely In defense of his ancestral home; from the frontiersman's point of view, he was only another "savage and bloodthirsty redskin" had to be gotten rid of to make way for the "advance of civilization."

The leading figure in this now dimly-rememhered war was Ma-ka-tai-me-she-kia-kiak, or Black Hawk, a chief of the Sauk and Fox Indians, of whom Keokuk, or Watchful Fox, was the head chief. By the Treaty of November 3, 1804, made at St. Louis, the Sauk and Fox agreed to surrender all of their lands east of the Mississippi, But it was not until the close of the War of 1812, when a wave of migration began to pour into Illinois, that the United States was ready to claim the land which it had acquired from the Indians. Keokuk and the majority of his tribe bowed to the inevitable and moved across the Mississippi to a new home in Iowa. But Black Hawk, who had been a disciple of Tecumseh, the great Shawnee, and an ally of the British in the War of 1812, let it be known that would not move to Iowa. He maintained that he had been deceived as to the terms of the St. Louis treaty and did not consider them binding upon him.

By 1831 so much friction between Black Hawk's tribesmen and the Illinois settlers had developed that Governor Reynolds considered it advisable to call out the militia to "protect the lives and property" of the pioneers. But General Gaines, military commandant in the West, haping to avoid the expense of a demonstration with force, summoned Black Hawk and his subchiefs to a conference at Fort Armstrong on the Mississippi. The council was a stormy one and resulted in no satisfactory settlement of the difficulties, whereupon the militia on June 15 left their camp at Rushville, Ill., and marched upon Black Hawk's village. They found it deserted and burned all the lodges. Then Gaines sent word to Black Hawk that the "hostiles" should come in for a peace talk and on June 30 Black Hawk and 27 of his followers signed a treaty with Governor Reynolds by which they agreed to refrain from hostile acts and to retire to Iowa. There was no trouble with them until early in 1832 when Black Hawk crossed over into Illinois with some 2,000 Indians, of whom it was estimated more than 500 were warriors. Immediately the wildest rumors spread along the Illinois frontier, "Black Hawk and 1,000 bloodthirsty savages were descending upon the settlements to kill, scalp and burn."

The Indian side of the story is rather different. Under the terms of the treaty which Black Hawk had signed with General Gaines the Indians were to be supplied with corn in place of that which they had left in their fields when they went to Iowa. What had happened is a familiar incident in the history of our relations with the Indians. The government failed to keep its promise. The amount of corn turned over to them was so meager that they began to suffer from hunger. In that emergency, a party of the Sauk, in the words of Black Hawk, crossed

----Indian Memorial on Rock River, Ill. the river "to steal some corn from their own

Moving with his band up the Rock river, Black Hawk was overtaken by a messenger from General Atkinson, ordering him to return and recross the Mississippi. Black Hawk replied that he had not taken the warpath but was going on a friendly visit to the village of White Cloud, the Winnebago prophet, and continued his journey. Atkinson then sent imperative orders for him to return at once or he would pursue with his army and drive him back. To this the Indian leader protested that the general had no right to utter such a threat so long as his mission to the Winnebagoes was a peaceable one and that he intended to continue on his way.

Continue he did, until he was met by some Winnebago and Pottawatomie chiefs. In a council they made it plain that they had no intention of joining with Black Hawk in any war upon the Americans. Feeling that he had been be trayed by his Indian friends, the Sauk leader resolved to send a flag of truce to Atkinson, asking permission to descend the Rock river, recross the Mississippi and return to his reservation in Iowa.

In the meantime Governor Reynolds had called out the militia and one of the captains of the hastily-organized companies, elected by his own men, was a lanky young storekeeper from New Salem named Abraham Lincoln. At about the time Black Hawk was holding his council with the other tribes, a large force of the militia had mobilized under General Whitesides near Dixon's Ferry. At the request of Maj. Isniah Stillman, Whitesides sent a scouting party of about 270 men under Stillman to try to locate the Indians. This party ascended the Rock river to the mouth of Sycamore creek and camped there, ignorant of the fact that they were only a short distance from Black Hawk's

Then occurred a tragic error-the first in a war filled with tragic blunders. Black Hawk sent three of his warriors under a flag of truce to ask for a conference. Stillman's undisciplined volunteers fired on them, killing one. Then followed the opera bouffe "battle" which has come down in history as "Stillman's Run" in which 40 Indians sent 270 white men into headlong fight, inflicting a loss of about a dozen on the militia. The news of this defeat spread even greater terror through the state. Governor Reynolds called out more troops and from Washington came the news that Gen, Winfield Scott had been ordered to the scene of the "war" with a thousand regulars. While en route to Illinois this army was attacked by the cholera and the mortality from that disease was greater than the total number killed and disabled by the Indians during the entire war.

Jefferson Davis

Chief Keokuk

The war dragged on throughout the summer of 1832 without any very decisive result, except that the superior forces of the whites gradually began to wear down the Indians. Finally the rubbed his pudgy hands delightedly Indian lender suffered a crushing defeat at the and whispered excitedly to his star hands of an army commanded by Gen. James D. performer. Henry in a battle on the Wisconsin river, losing 68 warriors killed and many more wounded and Black Hawk now realized that the game was up. With the remnants of his band he headed peeg!" That lady snapped her lacfor the Mississippi, hoping to escape from the quered fingers. "Are not our regular soldiers and find peace among his people already settled in Iowa. He reached the Missis- come only to jeer?" sippi at the mouth of the Bad Axe river on August 1 with his starving warriors and his a low, pulsing rhythm, With a clack pitiful little band of women and children. Then occurred an incident which is often spoken of flame, stood poised in the middle of as a "naval engagement in an inland war,"

While Black Hawk and his tribesmen were trying to cross the river in canoes and on rafts, a lidded over her audience, picking a steamer, the Warrior, hove into sight. On board worthy one to whom to dedicate her cannon. Black Hawk raised a white flag to ask for a parley. And again the flag of truce was dishonered by the white man. The captain of the Warrior asserted that he believed the flag was only a decoy used by the wily Indians to lure him into an ambush. So he ordered the her throat she had to admit she had cannon to be unlimbered and it began shelling the Indian camp. As a result 23 Indians were killed outright and many others were wounded.

The following day the pursuing troops under General Atkinson, which were joined by a detachment of regulars under Col. Zachary Taylor and an army of Wisconsin volunteers, came up and attacked Black Hawk's camp. The end is not pleasant reading, for it was an Indian massacre-but contrary to the popular idea of that, it was a massacre of Indians by white men.

The weakened Indians were no match for the whites. Finding that their attempts to surrender were useless they resolved to sell their lives as dearly as possible. So they put up a desperate but that splendid man and brilliant atresistance but were driven at the point of the bayonet into the river. Indian women with children clinging to them plunged into the river only to be drowned or shot down by sharpshooters on the banks. The Warrior, returning from Prairie du Chien, added to the carnage by raking the shore with canister. More than 150 Indians were killed or drowned and only about 50 were taken prisoners.

Black Hawk and his chief warrior, Neapope, gently in his arms, then kissed her escaped to the north and sought refuge among the Winnebagoes. A short time later he surrendered to General Street at Prairie du Chien and was sent down the river to Jefferson Barracks, Mo., as a prisoner of war. The man placed in charge of him was a young lieutenant, the son-in-law of Colonel Taylor. His name was Jefferson Davis and of this man who later became President of the Confederacy, Black Hawk said "He was a good and brave young chief with whose conduct I was much pleased, and he treated me with great kindness."

After being imprisoned in Fortress Monroe, Va., for a short time Black Hawk was allowed to return to the Sauk and Fox reservation in Iowa. There he died on October 3, 1838, and there he was burled in accordance with the customs of his people. So Black Hawk slept in peace at last but not in the soil which he loved so well-that of the beautiful Rock river country in northern Illinois. But his spirit broods over that land in the form of a giant concrete statue of an Indian, the work of Lorado Taft, which stands on a high bluff near Oregon, Ill., overlooking the Rock river. Although it is commonly referred to as "the Black Hawk statue," the sculptor has repeatedly said that it is intended to symbolize the Indian-"a spirit unconquered while still the conquered race." Even so, it may appropriately be a memorial to Black Hawk of the Sauk and Foxes, for his was such a spirit.

Y OU and Harrison were engaged; and Lou's heart was heavy for Conchita, the dancer, was doing what Lou herself had longed to do: break up the ice floes in Harrison.

Even before Conchita had undulated into the picture Lou had been anxious. For instance, at seven on Valentine's evening Harrison, tall, lean, and with a frigid demeanor, had arrived to escort her to a friend's party. He had stooped, his kiss the quick, detached sort of caress that filled her with "You look woe-be-gone. Have I overlooked something fearfully important, little sentimentalist?" he had asked.

On the correct finger of Lou's left hand a gorgeous emerald twinkled. Harrison had asked her to marry him. "I'm just being silly," Lou had smiled wanly

He had pinched her cheek. This was not the attitude Lou wanted. She didn't want him to chuckle. She wanted him to feel stirred, intent. She wanted his clear eyes to glow. But they were two frozen pools.

"Harrison, why can't you be a little more . . . oh, I don't know." Her hands had fallen limply to her sides. He had sought to seal her lips with another calm, undemonstrative kiss. "I'm not a movie actor, you know, mind to express poignant romance, Midge, whose party they attended, wanted to charter a cab and see how the rest of the world lived.

Never will Lou forget that night. At first she was an inwardly seething torrent of excitement. Then her heart was being eaten out for she had seen Conchita's burning Latin eyes were bringing out fascinated lights from impenetrable Harrison's.

The cafe was dingy. There had been a rancous clamor, but apparently the regular patrons felt chagrined for they surveyed the beautifully attired visitors, snorted, and lapsed into a sullen silence. The proprietor, however,

The Mexican orchestra throbbed in of her castanets Conchita, a living the floor, Professional that she was, her long sloe eyes wandered heavydance. The drowsiness of her eyes vanished as they lighted on the cool, flawless features of Harrison.

Lou's devoted little heart sank. The rhumba rhythms beat inflictingly on her conservative ears. With a catch in never seen Harrison so stimulated.

The whirling, insinuating dance halted abruptly. The dancer pressed a long sweet kiss on her vivid fingertins, blew it straight to Harrison, and tossed to him the rose which had nestled in her inky hair.

"Harrison feels shaken," observed Midge. "He's trembling like a leaf." Lou was trembling, too. She dared not lift her hurt, bewildered eyes.

Nightly Harrison frequented the cafe. Lou, shaken almost beyond endurance, lay between cool sheets and prayed, not for her own forlorn heart, torney that he was, he might not be horribly uprooted.

Then she summoned her frail courage and went to the place herself. She left, pale, trembling, but contentedly wiping her red-rimmed eyes while Conchita's gay laugh bounded after her.

Tnat night, steadfast love seeping from his eyes, Harrison took Lou quivering mouth almost roughly in his fervency.

"Lou darling, let's get married right away!"

In his sturdy embrace Lou felt exalted. Her happiness welled over. Why should she tell him Conchita had admitted she was only playing with him? It would make him feel tainted, cheapened.

"He one big ice-berg," Conchita had flaunted. "Conchita have no place for ice-bergs.

"But you've melted him!" Lou had insisted.

Conchita had stood, her fists dug into her shapely hips. "When ice-berg is melted, what is it? Big puddle. Conchita have no use for puddles either." So Lou thanked her; for she assigned to Conchita what she felt she had not been able to do for herself, since ice cannot melt ice.

As the sweetness of her clinging to him, and the clean scent of her hair filled him, Harrison decided not to tell her of Conchita. How he had recognized the woman as a missing witness in one of his cases. This lovely, dainty Lou he adored. Why fill her innocent mind with a sordid case of a cabaret dancer?

Erosion's Heavy C st

Erosion has modified the surface of the earth more than the combined activities of volcanoes, earthquakes, tidal waves, tornadoes, and all the excavations of mankind since the beginning of history, says the United States Department of Agriculture, The fact that it proceeds slowly, usually taking a thin layer at a time, does not in the least alter the impoverishing effects of erosion, speeded up by man and operating through long periods of time.

Is There Something in Your Eye?

THIS giant eye magnet which Dr. L. R. Mackey and Miss Flora Olsen are demonstrating in a Minneapolis hospital, with Miss Marie Skeie, a nurse, playing patient, is the largest of its kind in the world and was made for the removal of steel from the interior of the eye. It was the gift of Dr. C. N. Spratt, eye specialist, and is so powerful that it can drag an ordinary flat iron across the floor or cause a watch to fly out of its owner's pocket. The magnet weighs more than 800 pounds and has a ten horsepower pull. The core, which is made from a wrought iron shaft used in one of the old flour mills in Minneapolis 75 years ago, is wound with one and one-half miles of copper wire and uses 220 volts generated by a ten horsepower motor.

Bedtime Story & Gy Thornton W. Burgess

The King of the birds is Old King Eagle, as every one knows. He is king because his father was king before him, and his father's father, and so on 'way back to the long ago time when the world was young. To him all the other feathered folk yield and pay homage because by virtue of his great strength and courage he is their lord and master. Now, Old King Eagle is for the most part a wise and just ruler. He does his own hunting. He demands no tribute, save in one thing.

Of course, you know what tribute is. Tribute is a gift from the weak to the strong, a gift not offered willingly by the giver, but demanded by the one to whom it is given. Kings are very apt to demand tribute from those over whom they rule. But Old King Eagle demands no tribute from his subjects save one, and that one is one of his largest and strongest subjects. Can you guess who it is? It is Plunger the Fish Hawk. Yes, sir, Plunger the Fish Hawk has to pay tribute to Old King Eagle. He doesn't do it willingly, but he does it just the same. He does it because King Eagle is big enough and strong enough to force him to. And the reason that King Eagle demands tribute from Plunger is that King Engle has learned to like the taste of fish, but has not learned how to catch fish for himself. Therefore he must depend on some one else to catch them for him, and that some one is Plunger.

On this particular morning that Plunger had had to be so patient in order to catch a fat fish to take home to Mrs. Plunger, sitting on the eggs in their nest in the Green Forest, it had come into the head of Old King Eagle that he was hungry for fish. The more he thought about it the hungrier he grew. Sitting on the stump of a tree on the edge of a cliff of the Big Mountain he could see the Big River like a silver ribbon in the distance-that is, it would have looked like a silver ribbon to you or to me had we been in his place. But so wonderful and keen are the eyes of King Eagle that he could see the Big River clearly. He could see more, He could see a speck salling back and forth over the Big River, and he knew that that speck was Plunger the Fish Hawk.

Old King Eagle chuckled. "My fisherman is fishing for me, but he doesn't know it," said he. Then he spread his wonderful great wings and

Up, up he flew until he was but a speck in the sky to anyone watching from below. Straight toward the Big River he flew, and there in majestic, great circles he sailed round and round three times as far above Plunger as Plunger was above the Big River. Plunger, his eyes fixed on the water below, knew nothing of King Eagle above him. So Plunger flew patiently back and forth and round and round over the Big River, watching for fish, and cloudhigh above him King Eagle swung in great circles watching Plunger.

He laughed aloud, did Old King Eagle, when at last Plunger shot down into the water with a great splash and presently flapped upward heavily with a big fat fish in his claws and then headed straight toward the Green Forest. In his turn King Eagle shot downward. The King Eagle more flercely than before. Still Plunger clung to the fish for which he had waited so long and patiently.

"I won't!" he screamed again, and this time there was an answering scream. It was Mrs. Plunger. She had heard him and now was coming swiftly to ald him. So Plunger clung more tightly than ever to the big fish and beat his way toward the Green Forest, hoping that something would happen to cheat Old King Eagle of that splendld prize, (©, 1932, by T. W. # Wake Up Your Liver Bile -Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed | in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels

If this one is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned. It takes those good old CARTER'SLITTLE

LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's

SYNOPSIS

Ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party, having fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy Shad (Sheridan) is sent to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in Amity Dam, and becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, village character. Bat Morryson comes, determined to take his son back to his own dissolute life. He is overawed by Colonel Blake, the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. A girl, young and pretty, comes to Brown's shack, inquiring for him. Shad applies himself diligently to his neglected education. Love for Ruth Blake takes a strong hold on his heart. In an attack made on the Perry family, Oscar Perry, the father, is fatally shot, and his daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, wife of Cyrus Doolittle, prominent citizen, seriously wounded. Circumstantial evilence points to Bumpy Brown as the assallant. He is Circumstantial evilence points to Bumpy Brown as the assallant, He is arrested.

CHAPTER VI-Continued

"Yes, but he may have thought that Shad was wounded and losing blood and going slowly or lying dead in the trail. If he saw him topple out of the canoe it would have been his natural inference that he had hit his mark. I do not like this touch of mystery. Some one seems to see in one or more of these three articles a source of danger for himself. They were put away in the rush and excitement of the fleeing criminal and as soon as it could be safely done, some dark night, they were to be gathered up and destroyed or perhaps hidden somewhere near the shack of Bumpy Brown, You know, the thought has come to me more than once that the revolver and cartridges were planted on the old man."

"These are interesting speculations, but they do not impress me," said the judge. "The big man our young friend saw may have got his bearings and gone to his camp or he may be coming here any minute and telling of his adventure near Center pond."

In the moment of silence that followed the judge's words Shad spoke

"He'll never come here. He is the murderer. He knows that I know it. Shad told them of that moment near the abandoned camp when the moonlight had shown him a masked

"And did he not call out when he heard you running away?"

"No. sir." Shad answered. "That is rather strange business," said the judge. "Why did he mask him-

"It was a cunning bit of prudence." the colonel answered. "Suppose he had come upon the boy lying wounded in the trail. The stranger could then have robbed him of his treasures without being identified. Or, again, after dark, a light might be flashed in his face any moment. That indeed out of the heavens fell upon him. Shad is not much wiser because of it, That beam of moonlight showed us only the blackness of the man's soul." "It is a reasonable theory," the judge agreed. The colonel was examining the two hats which Shad had brought in his basket. Suddenly he whistled and exclaimed: "Well! What does this mean? Look here, Judge."

Inside the sweat band of the lightcolored slouch hat some one had written with pen and ink those words:

"To R. R.: It's a long head that never turns."

"This is undoubtedly the hat worn by the murderer," said the colonel. "All who saw him agree as to the kind of hat he wore, and it was found with the handkerchief. This writing is that of a young woman accustomed to the use of a pen. She was a playful person of some sort. Who is she and who is R. R.?"

"Robert Royce, maybe," Shad promptly answered.

"Sure enough! There are the two R's," said the colonel. "He was a son of Mrs. Doolittle by her first husband. He is tall. I remember that he swore at the examination that he closed his shop at five o'clock and went upstairs to read. He came downstairs and let Cyrus Doolittle out of his front door soon after eight. He would have had three hours in which to go to Amity Dam, commit the crime and return to his shop."

He carefully wrapped the articles which he had been examining, and added: "I shall take good care of these things and go out of the woods tomorrow.'

He took Shad's hand and spoke these words, which mark a turning point in the career of Sheridan Morryson:

"Pard, I like you. I'm going to take you into my office if you don't mind. and try to make a lawyer of you. I guess we can get along together. I want you to go to bed now and get a good rest. You must be tired."

He bolted the door and put braces In the windows. The two men and the boy went to their beds above stairs. Shad observed that the colonel put the package under his pillow. The boy had been much elated by the colonel's

The morning was chilly and the clouds were threatening. The party soon after eight. The trusty old guide | went over to the hotel for their dinled them. As they neared the abandoned lumber camp, Colonel Blake said to the guide;

"I'll take the lead here." He walked slowly, looking intently at the ground. In a wet spot near a deep puddle be stopped, saying: "Here are Shad's tracks and here are the tracks of the man who followed him coming and going. He wore hunting boots."

The colonel took a rule from his pocket and measured the tracks, the judge noting the figures.

"By jove!" the latter exclaimed. "They are almost identical with those of the rubber tracks of the murderer. I am convinced that this man could have worn Bumpy's rubbers."

"Yes, we're in deeper water than we thought," the colonel remarked as he folded his rule,

They followed the footprints to the very edge of Center pond. The canoe was gone. They could dimly see it on the far shore.

"He went out of the woods last night and was in a hurry," said the colonel. They turned back and made for the clearing. Half a mile or so back of St. Germain's cabin the tracks of the stranger were no longer visible. At some point, which they did not discover, he had left the trail, Shad and the two officials tramped over the lonely sand road to South Bolton. About two miles below St. Germain's they saw where a team and wagon had come off the plain into the road and gone on toward the settlement some time before. At South Bolton they went to Hubbard's store. Shad had told Colonel Blake of the attractive young lady he had once seen at Bumpy Brown's shack and who worked in that store. The young woman had gone to Ashfield that morning. She would be returning the next day,

"Who is this young woman and where is her home?" Colonel Blake inquired of the merchant.

"She is from Malone," the latter answered. "Her name is Caroline De Long. Robert Royce introduced her to me in Ashfield one day about a year ago. He had known her and her people in Malone. She said that she was not very well; that she had heard that South Bolton was a healthy place near the edge of the big woods and that she would like to work in my store. I needed help, so I took her to work here in the store."

"Have you been pleased with her?" "Well, yes-pretty well on the whole. I've found her honest and good at figures."

"I have heard that she is very handsome and that she dresses well," Colonel Blake went on.

"Yes, she's as proud as a peacock, and my wife thinks that she dresses too well for a girl who has to work is what happened. A sudden light for a living and that she gads around too much."

"Who does she gad around with?" "Well, mostly Robert Royce. I don't know as we can complain of that. Royce is a single man and I kind o' think he's fond of her." "Do you nappen to know old Bumpy Brown, the tinker who lives down on the Racquette?"

"Oh, everybody knows him! They think that he's the man who done the shooting down to Doolittle's."

"Does Miss De Long know him?" "Yes, and we've all been wondering about that. He was up here tinkering. He came to the store to see Carrie. They seemed to be well acquainted. He said that he knew her people. The last time he was here Carrie spent the evening with him on the hotel plazza. My wife thinks that he gives

"What does she say about his indictment?"

"She says he is a harmless old man who wouldn't hurt anybody."

"You will remember that Bumpy bought a pair of rubbers here a few days before the murder. Who sold them to him?" "Miss De Long."

"Who bought rubbers of the same size about that time?"

"I've been thinking about that, You know, Robert Royce came in the day after the tinker was here. Another man was with Royce. I didn't know him. There were going into the woods. The stranger bought a raincoat. They

I took them off. The size mark was on the sole. It was the exact size and shape of the pair that I sold to Bumpy Brown. I thought of it when I heard about the rubber tracks of the murderer."

"Will you describe the man you call the stranger?"

"He was a tall man with a freckled face and red hair and very big ears." This ended the conversation with Hubbard.

"I am more than ever convinced that we have been misled and that Bumpy is not in the case," said Colonel Blake as they sat down to dinner.

"A little more evidence will make me agree with you," was the answer of the judge. "I happen to know that Royce has a motive. I drew the will of his mother, who, as you know, is Mrs Doolittle, She leaves all her property-considerable sum-to her son Robert Royce."

The colonel's face grew serious. "You will remember from his testimony at Brown's examination that he has no alibi. We had better say no more of this until the ground under our feet is a little more solid. Remember. Shad, you mustn't know too much. Keep still till we have found our way." Shad promised to hold his tongue but he could hardly conceal his elation over the clearing outlook for his friend the tinker.

"There is one circumstance that must give us pause," said the judge. "The murderer did not seem to be eager to kill Mrs. Doolittle. True, he shot at her, but, entering as he did, he had to begin shooting at once and create a panic. He couldn't hesitate then. A few seconds later he had his chance to kill Mrs. Doolittle. He stood close in front of her with the revolver pointing at her face. He could have killed her then but he didn't shoot. He struck her, She fell and fled out of his way." "Consider the psychological situation," the colonel began. "She was his mother. Apart from her he could plan her death but, face to face with the woman who had borne him, he weakened. He would have been glad to get out of the house without killing but he couldn't."

"Well, we shall all be wiser in a week," the colonel remarked as they arose from the table.

They hired a team at the livery stable and set out for Ashfield and the county seat. They stopped at Amity Dam to pick up Shad's clothing, then at the home of the judge in Ashfield. The colonel was urged to spend the night there.

he answered, "No thank v 'Shad and I have got some business to do in the village before we take the evening train to Canton,"

They left their baggage at the hotel and discharged the team. They went to Royce's shop on the Island. Royce was not there.

The President's proposals met with immediate opposition on the part of Democrats in both houses, and a demand that the Executive submit speelfic recommendations for the reduction of expenditures. Speaker Garner declared that it was too late to create new commissions and assured the President that any specific recommendations he has to cut expenses will get quick action in the house.

In reply to the opposition voiced against his message, the President in a later statement said:

What I asked for in my message was organized, nonpartisan co-operation by all forces to reduce government expenses in the national emergency which insistently demands relief for the taxpayer."

"What I have asked for is not a commission, but that the senate and house delegate representatives to sit. down with representatives from the administration and endeavor to draft a national economy bill.

Continuing, he said that without such action he saw no way by which there can be a maximum reduction in expenditures.

The comeback to this was that if the President failed to present definite proposals for a reduction in expenses the Democratic leaders would present a plan of their own.

Senator Jones, Washington, Republican, acting on the President's proposals, introduced a joint resolution in the senate to create a commission of three senators, three representatives and three officials of the administration to draft an economy program and report within thirty days. It would not only suggest where appropriations should be slashed, but also recommend consolidation and elimination of government bureaus and agencies. The resolution met instant opposition in the senate.

The major senate contest over the billion dollar tax bill, now the subject them with interesting news. While of hearings before the senate finance committee, will probably develop with the move already started by independent members of both parties to boost the surtax rates on the higher Incomes to a figure above the 40 per cent maximum voted by the house, That a determined effort will be made to restore the manufacturers' sales tax to the revenue bill is a certainty. That it will be accomplished is a foregone conclusion.

The importance of government salary cuts in the economy scheme has been emphasized in support given the idea by Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, and Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi. The latter forecast with regret, that a general slash was likely to materialize.

The house special economy committee has approved bills to dispense with the army and navy transport service, with an assorted annual reduction in expenditures; to postpone Indefinitely part of the government's big construction program in the Capital at a saving him of this Amity Damned appear- of $750,000, and to establish the interance. He will offer the sales tax amendment to the finance committee, of which he is a member, if he finds the proposal has a chance to pass. Excise taxes substituted by the house for the sales levy were described as "cockeyed sales taxes." The sales tax, he held, is equitable and fair.

NEURIATED by months of distress from unemployment and dissatisfaction with the government policy. a mob of 10,000 stormed the house of assembly at St. John's, Newfoundland, and forced the resignation of the government. Windows were smashed and public documents strewn in the streets.

Police were powerless in the demonstration. World war veterans then took charge of the situation and succeeded in partially restoring order. Citizens obeyed only the World war officers and the veterans under them on the streets of the capital, while most of the police were bottled up in the assembly building by the irate mob which milled outside.

The war veterans closely guarded the residence of Premier Sir Richard Squires, who narrowly escaped serious injury in the riot when he was aided to his home by three clergymen, who quieted a small portion of the mob which recognized the premier as "The world needs, Stimson both economically and spiritually, the relief that can come from some degree of successful issue by the disarmament conference," the President said.

CLEAR signals were visible during March that important results were following from the co-ordinated plans of public agencies and private finance to bring about basic improvement in the condition of business, the American Bankers' Association Journal says In its monthly review.

It notes that, although Immediate stimulations in current commercial and industrial activity were lacking and favorable trends in standard trade indexes were not apparent, growth in financial confidence and decrease in public fear were "too definite to be based on anything but solid facts and carried greater weight than formal statistics."

Concrete expression of a return of financial confidence was given for a period during March in the bond market, which evidenced a relaxation in the pressure of financial distress and fear, and a turn in the direction of safety and confidence, the Journal says. "The most important aspect of business betterment has been the widespread return of the banks to more normal operating conditions," it says, attributing this to the Reconstruction Finance corporation and other co-operative arrangements for assisting both closed and operating banks that are "clearly having the desired effects,"

A SSISTANT ATTORNEY GEN-eral Seth Richardson, in a report to the senate, described police administration in Honolulu as "impotent, undisciplined, neglectful and unintelli-

The report was in answer to a senate resolution calling for information on law enforcement in Hawaii. It followed the wave of criticism in navy and congressional circles over the reign of terror in the islands, and particularly in Honolulu, brought to light by the attack and assault by five natives upon Mrs. Tralia Massie.

Mr. Richardson recommended the appointment by the President of a territorial police head for the entire territory, with full power of control and organization, and similar appointment of an attorney general to be the public prosecutor. Regarding conditions in general, Richardson reported:

"We found no organized crime, no important criminal class, and no criminal rackets. We did not find substantial evidence that a crime wave-so-called-was in existence in Honelulu. We did find, however, ample evidence of extreme laxity in the administraton of law enforcement agencies.

"We believe that a continuation of such laxity is fraught with much social and political danger."

THE pinch of national economy prompted Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, ranking Democrat on the finance committee, to Issue a declaration against full payment of the veterans' bonus certificates. Citing the $2,000,000,000 delicit in prospect for the government this year and the pending bill to raise new taxes, the senator in a letter to veterans of his state said:

"I regret that existing conditions impel Pat Harrison me, in the interest of the country, to oppose the legislation at this time."

The stand taken by Senator Harrison, coupled with the known view of other senate leaders, is believed to doom any prospect of enactment into law of the bonus payment measure.

In his statement the Democratic financial leader of the senate pointed out that $1,000,000.000 of the $4,000,-000,000 government budget now goes to the relief of war veterans.

At the same time it is announced that Congressman Stewart will be a candidate for the United States Senate.

Both men have good business backgrounds.

The candidates are both wets.

Congressman Stewart is able lawyer who lives in Plainfield.

Senator Barbour is head of the Linen Thread Company. New Jersey leads the world in copper refining. It is one of its great industries.

This industry treats much foreign copper. It does this because we are the world's leading copper refiners. If we depended only on copper mined in the United States, our refineries would be down most of the time.

A great, persistent propaganda has been flooding the country aiming to drive out this foreign business through taxation or a tariff.

The plants were built on the Atlantic to get this business. Most of the copper from the West is refined in the West and would never come to the East.

Destroying New Jersey's refineries means more debts for New Jersey's municipalities and more unemployment for its citizens.

Congressman Stewart, not only told where he stood on this miserable, lying propaganda from the West, but actively worked against it to protect the citizens and taxpayers of his State,

The matter is now up in the Senate where the Western Senators have been working night and day to have a tax on copper inserted in the revenue bill.

PERFORMANCE

What the Democratic nomination for President may be worth Mrs. Fradkin's topic was "The Work depends to no little extent on what sort of work the Democrats in the Houses of Congress do.

A President is no stronger than his party.

Performance is what counts. If the Democrats in important positions perform well, that is one thing. On the other hand, if they do not, the nomination for President may not be so attractive. The Democrats in the House of Representatives appear to have made a startegic mistake in insisting on writing their own tax bill instead of taking the Treasury's bill and bringing the Treasury's bill to the floor for debate. No tax bill for over a billion dollars deficit is popular.

Had the Democrats brought in the Treasury bill, the chances were that it would have been defeated as the House was in no mood at the start to pass any billion dollar bill.

As it was the bill from which the sales tax was scratched was a non-partisan bill written by a combination of Democrats and Re- land guns, and the displacement of publicans with the advice of a Republican administration. ones. Mrs. Fradkin said also that

However, the Republicans in some quarters, after voting for the bill, call it a Democratic bill. As a matter of fact the Democrats only have a paper majority of five when they are all present in the House of Representatives.

The Republica organization has had a large majority in both Houses in the past and it has not been able to put over its policies for some years. It was hardly to be expected the Democrats with a theoretical majority in the lower House would control with such a controversial measure up as the sales tax.

The coalition of Republicans and Democrats opposed to the non-partisan plan for raising taxes brought in by the Ways and Means Committee is what upset the bill.

The Republicans have theoretical control of the Senate. It is known certain Senators oppose the Administration programs out of organizations, having a membership force of habit. They will have their hand in manipulating the tax

The TIRE That Faught THRIFT 3. MILLIONS!

FIRESTONE tires appeal to the thrifty. They give Extra Values at the lowest prices ever known.

Firestone do not manufacture tires under special brand names for mail order houses and others to distribute. Special brand tires are made without the manufacturer's name. They are sold without his guarantee or responsibility for service.

You take no chances on Firestone tires. They are silent, safe, long-wearing - and each tire bears the Firestone name, which is a guarantee of satisfactory service.

Firestone's greater economies in buying, manufacturing, and distributing make possible these greater values and lower prices.

Stop at our store today. See sections cut from Firestone tires - special brand mail order tires and others. Take these sections in your own hands - compare Quality and Construction. Then you, too, will know why -"Firestone is the tire that taught thrift to millions!"

Extra Values GUM-DIPPED CORDS

The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process transforms the cotton cords into a strong, tough, sinewy unit. Liquid rubber penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, guarding against internal friction and heat, greatly increasing the strength of the cord body, and giving longer tire life. TWO EXTRA CORD PLIES UNDER THE TREAD nis is a patented construction, and the two extra cord plies are so placed that you get 56% stronger band between tread and cord body, and tests show 26% greater protection against punctures and blowouts. It sets a new standard for title performance on high speed cars.

NON-SKID TREAD

Tough, live rubber specially compounded for long, slow wear. Scientifically designed non-skid gives greater traction and sale,

They obtain information from reference books which are in the classroom or the library. They are required to write about two thousand words telling why they selected the vocation, giving information on the subject, illustrations, biographies of tamous people who were successful in the same vocation, a page of contents and an outline for the study of an occupation.

Some of the vocations selected by the members of the class are aviation, chemistry, law, government work, nursing, teaching, secretarial stenography, bookkeeping, clerical work, etc. Each pupil will make an attractive cover for his career book. These books will be exhibited during visiting week.

GRANT and GALENA

Grant Memorial Home

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HE date is April 27, 1822. The place is the little backwoods town of Point Pleasant on the Ohio iver, 25 miles east of Cincinnati. In the home of Jesse Root Grant, foreman of a small tannery, his wife, Hannah Simpson Grant, has presented him with his first child,

For the first six weeks of his life the baby is nameless. Father and mother, it seems, cannot agree upon a name. Then, in the words of W. E. Woodward in his biography "Meet General Grant," "It was agreed finally to let chance decide the question. The assembled relatives-so the story runs-wrote the names of their choice on slips of paper, folded up the slips, and drew one. It was Ulysses, the name that had been proposed by Grandmother Simpson. Evidently the outcome was not wholly satisfactory to the masculine part of the family. Somebody who was there succeeded in tacking Hiram on in front of Ulysses, so the child was called Hiram Ulysses Grant,"

Thus, the first chapter in the story of a man

The scene shifts now to the north and west some 450 miles. On a high point of land rising abruptly from a little river which empties into the mighty Mississippi six miles away, a settler from Kentucky, named Thomas January, has established a trading post. French-Canadian voyageur and American traders call the place Jan-

There is a good reason for establishing a trading post there. Away back in 1700 a Frenchman named Le Suer, ascending the Mississippi, had discovered Indians working rude lead mines near this river and in his official report he called it the River of Mines. Later in the century a French trader named La Fevre established himself here and the name of Fevre river was tacked on to the stream. American frontiersmen later Anglicized that name to the Fever river and that name, with its unpleasant suggestion of ill health, persisted until 1826 when Januarys Point became known as Galena and the Fever river as the Galena river, because galena is the name of the valuable sulphite of lead which was mined there.

So while Ulysses Grant is growing up into a lusty young manhood back in Ohio, the trading post on the Fever river is growing into the lusty little settlement of Galena in the new state of Illinois. More trading posts are established, because this is still the heart of the Indian country, and the red man has many things the white n wants and vice-versa. But the thing, which is bringing a rush of migration there and which would have justified a proud chamber of commerce boast of "Watch Galena grow!" (if there had been chambers of commerce in those days), is the lead mining industry.

Next to St. Louis, Galena was the most important town in the West and Galenians began suffering from delusions of grandeur. They boastfully predicted that it would soon overshadow the old French and Spanish metropolis to the South. Had some one told them that it would soon be displaced in importance by a little town named Chicago, which squatted down among the marshes on the shores of Lake Michigan, they would have laughed long and loud,

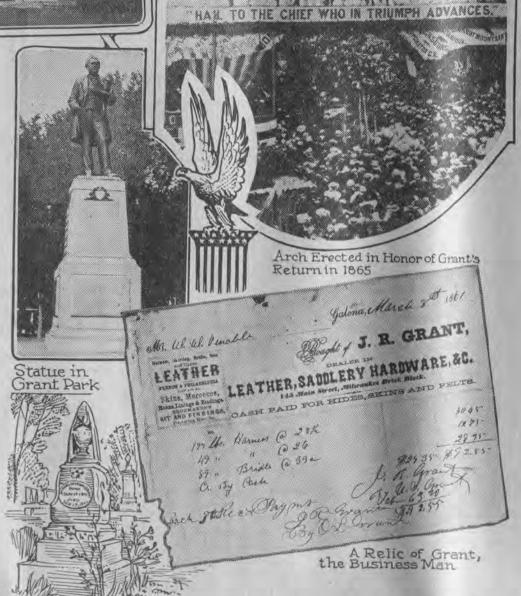

For everybody who went West in those days visited Galena. And "everybody" included national and world notables-the Marquis de Lafavette, the Prince de Joineville of the royal House of Bourbon, Dolly Madison, wife of the fourth President of the United States, Martin Van Buren and Zachary Taylor, future Presidents, Mrs, Alexander Hamilton, Joseph Smith, Mormon prophet, Charles Sumner, and Jefferson Davis, then a young lieutenant in the United States army but later destined to lead the Lost Cause of the Confederacy. By 1860 Galena had reached the apex of its fame and its claim to distinction.

At that time it had no way of knowing that in less than half a century it would become a town that had died on its feet, a quiet little village resembling nothing so much as an old man basking in the sunshine and dreaming of the days of his youth. It could not have known that it would come to be famous principally through the linking of its name with the name of a man who had not yet walked through its narrow, winding streets. It probably had never heard of the town of Point Pleasant, Ohio, and certainly the birth of a son to Jesse and Hannah Grant there on April 27, 1822, meant nothing to

Except for the adding of another business enterprise to its list, it meant nothing more to Galena when the elder Grant, then owner of n tannery in Covington, Ky., sent his two sons, Jesse Root and Samuel Simpson, to open a leather store in the Illinois town. So Galena could not realize the importance to it of an event which took place in April, 1860. Hamlin Garland in his "Life of Grant" describes it as follows:

"Men stood on the levee watching the steamer 'Itasca' while she nosed her way up the tortuous current of the Galena river; as she swung up to the wharf, attention was attracted to a passenger on the deck wearing a blue cape overcoat. As the boat struck the landing this man rose and gathered a number of chairs together, evidently part of his household furniture.

"'Who is that?' asked one man of a friend on the river bank. 'That is Captain Grant, Jesse Grant's oldest son; he was in the Mexican war

-he is moving here from St. Louis,' was the Grave of Samuel Simpson Grant

Captain Grant took a couple of chairs in each hand and walked ashore with them; his wife, a small alert woman, followed him with her little flock (four children, Frederick, Ulysses, Jesse and daughter, Nellie). The carrying of the chairs ashore signified that Ulysses Simpson Grant had become a resident of Galena.'

So Ulysses Simpson Grant (the change from Hiram Ulysses to Ulysses Simpson had taken place during his West Point days) this army captain who at forty was a failure at everything he had attempted, became a clerk in his brothers' leather store at the munificent salary of $600 a year. Apparently he made but little impression in his new surroundings. There was nothing about him to mark him as a man of destiny. But he did make some strong friendsamong them Elihu B. Washburne, state senator, John A. Rawlins, a farmer and self-educated lawyer; W. R. Rowley, clerk of the Circuit court, and Dr. Edward Kittoe, an Englishman by birth but a naturalized American.

Even when the event came which was to set his feet firmly on the ladder of fame, Grant was still pretty much of a nonentity in Galena. At the news of the firing on Fort Sumter a mass meeting was called in the courthouse and at that meeting Grant offered his West Point training and his Mexican war experience for the service of his country in the new crisis. When some one criticized the offer because of the likelihood of Grant's sympathy for the South since he came from St. Louis and It was reported that his wife owned two slaves, immediately Washburne and Rawlins came to the defense with the emphatic statement that "Any man who will try to stir up party prejudices at such a time as this is a traitor!"

So at a later meeting to raise volunteers Grant was made chairman and within a few days he was busy drilling troops on the broad lawn which surrounded the Southern colonial home of Washburne. He was offered the captaincy of the Volunteer company that Galena raised but refused it, although he announced his intention of going to Springfield with the company. His departure from Galena was almost as unmarked as his arrival had been. He simply walked from his home to the Illinois Central depot over a miserable pathway through the muddy streets of the town, carrying a little satchel in his hand. His leave-taking was "unnoticed and unhonored."

When the war was over and the victorious general returned to his home in Galena, the man who had slipped away so quietly in civilian clothes in 1861 was welcomed back with wild acclaim. From all over the West thousands came to join with Galena in honoring her first citizen. Across Main street in front of the De Soto house was an immense arch bearing the inscription "Hail to the chief who in triumph ad-

Galena further honored its refurned hero by buying a fine brick house, located on a hig hill east of the river, and presenting it to him for his home. There the Grants established themselves and took a leading part in Galena society until his election to the Presidency in 1868. Again in 1879 he was given a great reception after his trip around the world at the conclusion of his two terms in the White House, Once more he settled down in Galena, only to find the quiet life which he had anticipated disrupted by the insistence of his friends that he be a candidate for a third term.

Grant, who was sitting in the office of his friend Rowley when the news was brought to him that the Republican convention had denied him the nomination and given it to Garfield, had just lighted one of his famous cigars. Walking out to the sidewalk he stood for a moment in thought, then tossed the eigar in the street, turned and went back into the office, "I can't say that I regret my own defeat," he said quietly. "By it I shall escape four years of hard work and four years of abuse. And, gentlemen, we can all support the candidate."

Across the street was a jewelry store. When the son of the proprietor saw Grant throw away his cigar he sent a clerk to retrieve it. That cigar, the symbol of the end of Grant's public career, is one of the Crant relics which is preserved in Galena to this day. But it is only one of the many which you find on every hand,

A modern paved highway leads you into Galena, but the moment you enter the town, you realize the aptness of someone's description of Galena as "a town where time stands still," The crooked narrow streets which wind in and out among the old stone and brick houses are the same streets along which walked the notables of a century ago. But the booming river town of those days is no more. The river itself, that was 350 feet wide in 1844, is but a thin trickle now, barely kneedeep. The levee where once scores of packet boats tied up is gone. For once you realize that the much overworked words of "sleepy" and "quaint," as applied to a "little town" are true because Galena is both.

There are innumerable landmarks which stand unchanged by the years to take you back to touch is worn with a light frock that another century. Frederick Dent Grant, gave back to Galena to be preserved as a Grant memorial. There you may look upon innumerable relics of the citizen, the soldier and the President and his family, for it is furnished and kept as it was when the Grants occupied it.

Trimming Ideas for Wash Frocks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SPRINGTIME is here, which brings | figures, the thread for the neckband thoughts of the sewing campaign | and cuffs is also an ecru shade. The which is and ever will be at this season of the year.

Here's a timely word of advice, be sure to stock your work basket and your sewing cabinet with a goodly assortment of crochet hooks and crochet threads and yarns, for a touch of hand crochet is the call of the hour. Paris is all enthusiasm on the crochet subject and so is every style-wise American woman and her next-door neigh-

It is taken for granted that you have been buying up all sorts of pretty wash materials in anticipation of this annual sewing bee, for who can resist the lure of the perfectly lovely cottons, rayous and linens and washable silks which have been so temptingly on display throughout the various fabric departmen's this many a

As usual the "still small voice" is bidding mother to consider the needs of the little folks of the household first. Which is the reason why we are showing this group of interesting styles for children. Seeing that hand crochet is so exceedingly popular, why not adorn little daughter's bright washable-print school frock with neck trim and sleeve bands of hand crochet. They will give an air of disn to her o handwork can give.

These little crochet pieces are so easy to do that an entire set like that which adorns the frock to the left in the picture can be made in one evening while listening in on the radio. The short story bour would afford sufficient time, for the stitch is easy and the strips are straight. Since the tub material selected for the frock shown is brown with orange and ecru tiny french mesh, filet, or even the modified Irish crochet stitch may be employed with equal effect. Use 30 to 50 mercerized crochet thread and a No. 10 or 8 steel crochet book.

The neckband and cuffs are applied with a trim stitch thread in one of colors of the design in the fabric. The trim stitch is done on the machine. Use the coarsest of machine needles. and set the gauge for nine or ten stitches to the inch. Bias trim in orange shade outlines the clever yoke effect at the waistline. Speaking of bias trim, any young girl will be most delighted with a plaid gypsy girdle with head band to match, such as is worn by the seated figure sketched above to the left. The idea is to stitch bias trim in various colors outlining a plaided design as is shown. This is really a unique idea and one which can be worked very effectively in a trimming way. Jade, scarlet, pilot blue, orange and black bias trim make a striking combination when plaided as suggested.

Just as novel and interesting is the braided hathand and girdle which the other young miss is wearing. This set is also made of bias trim, such as can be bought by the bolt at any notion counter. Fold the bias trim in half, and fasten the ends with thumb tacks to a desk blotter or pad. Then interlace the strips firmly, continuing with pins to hold in position as you proceed from one side to the other. The hat band may be made a little narrower than the belt, using five instead of seven strips.

The little girl who is going step ping, in the foreground of the picture, has her pretty white blouse smocked to perfection, in gay colors.

Banana Tops U.S. Fruit Import

Fifty-Five Million Stems Delivered in 1931.

Washington.-"If the bananas imported into the United States in 1931 were evenly distributed, every man, woman and child would have received several dozen, for more than 55,000,000 stems of bananas were delivered at our ports," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"While the banana is one of the most popular fruits in the fruit bowls of the United States, it is an alien. Banana plants demand a hot climate with plenty of rainfall. That is why former Central American jungles have become the world's most prolific banana plantations. Central American republics supply more than half of our bananas; Jamaica, about one-fourth, and most of the others come from southern Mexico, Cuba and Colombia.

"The banana started its journey around the Tropics of the world from India and the Malay peninsula. When It reached the West Indies and Central America is as debatable as the origin of the American Indian. It was a stranger in the United States until the latter part of the last century. In 1870, a schooner captain, returning to Boston from Jamaica, brought a stem of bananas as a curiosity. Fifteen years later a company was organized to appease the growing American appetite for bananas

TRUTH ABOUT POEM "BEAUTIFUL SNOW"

The story that the familiar poem "Beautiful Snow" was written by a young woman who committed suicide in Cincinnati is a romantic yarn that has tagged after a poem for years. It is entirely untrue. Burton E. Stevenson, in "Famous Single Poems," is one writer who explains the source of the story.

During the Civ' war an unidentifled young woman died in the Commercial hospital in Cincinnati, and among her effects was found a manuscript of this poem. It was sent to Enos B. Reed, editor of the National Union, who printed it and credited its authorship to the dead girl,
