Ruth was a woman of Faith & Loyalty

Ruth is one of just two women in the Hebrew Bible (with Esther) to have a book named after her. Ruth was a Moabite woman who lived during the era of Israel's judges. Although the Moabites were enemies of the Israelites, she was married to a Jewish man named Mahlon who had moved to Moab from Bethlehem with his family during a famine. After some time, her father-in-law, brother-in-law, and husband all died, leaving the women of the family to fend for themselves. Naomi, Ruth's mother-in-law, decided she would return to her community in Israel and encouraged her daughter-in-laws, Ruth and Orpah, to remarry in Moab. While Orpah reluctantly agreed, Ruth was adamant about returning to Bethlehem with Naomi.

As widows, Naomi and Ruth had to take care of themselves. Naomi understood the Jewish customs established to help widows and instructed Ruth in order that she may provide a better life for them. Ruth accompanies Naomi to Bethlehem and later marries Boaz, a distant relative of her late father-in-law. She is a symbol of abiding loyalty and devotion.

Ruth has many admirable character traits. She illustrates her loyalty in her commitment to care for her mother-in-law and continue in her faith in God after her husband's death. In addition, she is respectful of her elders. She follows Naomi's wise advice and honors Boaz in the way she approaches him. Ruth gives us great insight into how God works through faith. Throughout the Old Testament God forbids His people from marrying foreigners because of their pagan influence. However, Ruth demonstrates that God's concern is not so much with people's nationality, but rather their hearts. In fact, she even had the honor of being part of Jesus' lineage. She exemplifies the invitation Jesus gives all of us to leave behind the ways of this world and join Him.
