

Martha Raye Set In New Series

Producers Sid and Marty Krofft have signed Martha Raye to star in "Bugaloos," new Saturday morning series to be telecast over the NBC Television Network this fall.

Miss Raye will portray Benita Bizarre, who threatens the peace of Harmony Hamlet, a fantasy world inhabited by four teen-age musicians, the Bugaloos, portrayed by recently signed British newcomers Caroline Ellis, John Philpott, John McIndoe and Wayne Laryea.

Miss Raye recently completed a starring role in the Krofft feature motion picture, "Putnstuf," based on the tv series, "H.R. Pufnstuf," which made its NBC-TV debut last fall.

Miss Raye has distinguished herself in all facets of show business. She returned to the Broadway stage recently as the lovable matchmaker in "Hello, Dolly!"
